aforsaid, That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to authorise the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of each of the said provinces respectively, or the person administering the government therein from time to time, with the advice of such executive council as shall have been appointed by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, within such province, for the affairs thereof, to constitute and erect, within every township or parish which now is or hereafter may be formed, constituted or erected, within such province, one or more parsonage or rectory, or parsonages or rectories, according to the establishment of the Church of England; and from time to time, by an instrument under the great seal of such province, to endow every such parsonage or rectory with so much or such a part of the lands so allotted and appropriated as aforesaid, in respect of any lands within such township or parish, which shall have been granted subsequent to the commencement of this act, or of such lands as may have been allotted and appropriated for the same purpose, by or in virtue of any instruction which may be given by his Majesty, in respect of any lands granted by his Majesty before the commencement of this act, as such Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the government, shall, with the advice of the said Executive Council, judge to be expedient under the then existing circumstances of such township or parish.

39. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to authorise the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or person administering the government of each of the said provinces respectively, to present to every such parsonage or rectory an incumbent or minister of the Church of England, who shall have been duly ordained according to the rites of the said Church, and to supply from time to time such vacancies as may happen therein; and that every person so presented to any such parsonage or rectory, shall hold and enjoy the same, and all rights, profits and emoluments, thereunto belonging or granted, as fully and amply, and in the same manner, and on the same terms and conditions, and liable to the performance of the same duties, as the incumbent of a parsonage or rectory in England.

40. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every such presentation of an incumbent or minister to any such parsonage or rectory, and also the enjoyment of any such parsonage or rectory, and of the rights, profits, and emoluments thereof, by any such incumbent or minister, shall be subject and liable to all rights of institution, and all other spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction and authority, which have been lawfully granted by his Majesty's royal letters patent to the Bishop of Nova Scotia, or which may hereafter, by his Majesty's royal authority, be lawfully granted or appointed to be administered and executed within the said provinces, or either of them respectively, by the said Bishop of Nova Scotia, or by any other person or persons, according to the laws and canons of the Church of England, which are lawfully made and received in England.

41. Provided always, and be it further enacted by authority aforesaid, That the several provisions hereinbefore contained, respecting the allotment and appropriation of lands for the support of a Protestant clergy within the said provinces, and also respecting the constituting, erecting, and endowing parsonages or rectories within the said provinces; and also respecting the presentation of incumbents or ministers to the same; and also respecting the manner in which such incumbents or ministers shall hold and enjoy the same, shall be subject to be varied or repealed by any express provisions for that purpose, contained in any act or acts which may be passed by the legislative council and assembly of the said provinces respectively, and assented to by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, under the restriction hereafter provided.

42. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whenever any Act or Acts shall be passed by the Legislative Council and Assembly of either of the said provinces, containing any provisions to vary or repeal the above recited declaration and provisions contained in the said act, passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of his present Majesty; or to vary or repeal the above recited provision contained in his Majesty's royal instructions, given on the third day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, to the said Guy Carleton, Esq. now Lord Dorchester: or to vary or repeal the provisions hereinbefore contained for continuing the force and effect of the said declaration and provisions; or to vary or repeal any of the several provisions hereinbefore contained, respecting the allotment and appropriation of lands for the support of a protestant clergy within the said provinces; or respecting the constituting, erecting, or endowing parsonages or rectories within the said provinces; or respecting the presentation of incumbents or ministers to the same; or respecting the manner in which such incumbents or ministers shall hold and enjoy the same: and also, that whenever any act or acts shall be so passed, containing any provisions which shall in any manner relate to or affect the enjoyment or exercise of any religious form or mode of worship; or shall impose or create any penalties, burthens, disabilities, or disqualifications, in respect of the same; or shall in any manner relate to or affect the payment, recovery, or enjoyment, of any of the accustomed dues or rights hereinbefore mentioned; or shall in any manner relate to the granting, imposing, or recovering any other dues or stipends, or emoluments whatever, to be paid to or for the use of any minister, priest, ecclesiastic, or teacher, according to any religious form or mode of worship, in respect of his said office or function; or shall in any manner relate to or affect the establishment or discipline of the Church of England, amongst the ministers and members thereof within the said provinces; or shall in any manner relate to or affect the king's prerogative touching the granting of waste lands of the crown within the said provinces, every such act or acts shall, previous to any declaration or signification of the king's assent thereto, be laid before both houses of parliament in Great Britain; and that it shall not be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to signify his or their assent to any such act or acts, until thirty days after the same shall have been laid before the said houses, or to assent to any such act or acts, in case either house of parliament shall, within the said thirty days, address his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to withhold his or their assent from such act or acts, and that no such act shall be valid or effectual to any of the said purposes, within either of the said provinces, unless the legislative council and assembly of such province shall, in the session in which the same shall have been passed by them, have presented to the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of such province, an address or addresses, specifying that such act contains provisions for some of the said purposes hereinbefore specially described, and desiring that, in order to give effect to the same, such act should be transmitted to England without delay, for the purpose of being laid before parliament previous to the signification of his Majesty's assent thereto.

Doctors' Commons, 15th Nov., 1819.

My Lord,—We are honoured with your lordship's commands of the 14th September last, stating that doubts have arisen how far, under the construction of the act passed in the 31st year of his present Majesty (c. 31), the Dissenting Protestant ministers resident in Canada have a legal claim to participate in the lands by that act directed to be reserved as a provision for the support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy.

And your lordship is pleased to request, that we would take the same into consideration, and report to your lordship, for the information of the Prince Regent, our opinion, whether the governor of the province is either required by the act, or would be justified in applying the produce of the reserved lands to the maintenance of any other than the clergy of the Church of England resident in the province; and in the event of our being of opinion that the ministers of dissenting Protestant congregations have a concurrent claim with those of the Church of England, further desiring our opinion, whether, in applying the reserved lands to the endowment of rectories and parsonages, as required by the 38th clause, it is incumbent upon his Majesty to retain a proportion of those lands for the maintenance of the dissenting clergy, and as to the proportion in which, under such a construction, the provision is to be assigned to the different classes of Dissenters established within the province.

We are of opinion, that though the provisions made by 31st Geo. III. c. 31, § 36 and 42, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy, are not confined solely to the clergy of the Church of England, but may be extended also to the clergy of the Church of Scotland, if there are any such settled in Canada, (as appears to have been admitted in the debate upon the passing of the act,) yet that they do not extend to the dissenting ministers, since we think the terms "Protestant clergy" can apply only to Protestant clergy recognised and established by law.

The 37th section, which directs, "that the rents and profits of the lands, &c., shall be applicable solely to the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy," does not specify by what authority the rents and profits are to be so applied. Supposing the governor to be duly authorised by the act to make such application, we think that he will be justified in applying such rents and profits to the maintenance and support of clergy of the Church of Scotland, as well as those of the Church of England, but not to the support and maintenance of ministers of dissenting Protestant congregations.

With respect to the second question, the 38th clause, "which empowers his Majesty to authorise the governor to constitute and erect parsonages or rectories according to the establishment of the Church of England;" provides also, "that he may endow every such parsonage or rectory with so much of the lands allotted and appropriated, in respect to any land within such township or parish which shall have been granted, as the governor, with the advice of the executive council, shall judge to be expedient."

Under these terms he might endow any particular parsonage or rectory, with the whole lands allotted and appropriated in that township or parish.

It would be inconsistent with this discretionary power, that any proportion of such lands should be absolutely retained for any other clergy than those mentioned in that clause, and we think that it is not incumbent on his Majesty so to retain any proportion of such lands.

We have the honour to be, my lord,
Your lordship's most obedient humble servants,

R. GIFFORD,
J. S. COFLEY.

Copy of the Opinion of Mr. Pattison, now Mr. Justice Pattison.

I am of opinion that the provisions of 31 Geo. III. are applicable only to the clergy of the Church of England. Whatever might have been the original meaning of the expression "a Protestant clergy" in the 14 Geo. III., it appears to me that the subsequent instructions and message of his Majesty, recited in the 31 Geo. III., together with the provisions of that act, (and especially that which speaks of institution and of the spiritual jurisdiction of the bishop) plainly point out that the expression is to be understood as referring to the clergy of the Church of England only. "A Protestant clergy" evidently means one single and entire body of persons; now the clergy of the Church of England and those of the Kirk of Scotland can never form one body. If therefore the clergy of the Kirk of Scotland be let in, there is no reason why any other denomination of Dissenters should not also be admitted, and the words "a Protestant clergy" must then be taken to mean protestant ministers, or teachers, which appears to me to be absurd. The expression was used in contradistinction to the Romish clergy, and although I am not prepared to say that an establishment, similar to the Kirk of Scotland, might not have satisfied the words of 14 Geo. III., yet I am quite convinced that it would not have satisfied those of the 31 Geo. III. Being of opinion, therefore, that the acts contemplate one single body of Protestant clergy, I have no doubt that the clergy of the Church of England are that body; and the erecting the provinces into a bishopric, and every thing done since, plainly shows that such is the right interpretation.

I am also of opinion that the governors of the provinces acting under his Majesty's direction, cannot legally make any appropriation to the ministers of other Churches. I think that nothing short of an act of the legislature confirmed in England can authorize them to do so. The charter of April, 1819, would create a difficulty in the passing of any such act, and without a new act that charter alone would almost decide the question.

Temple, May 20th, 1824.

CANADA.

Sir George Arthur met the House of Assembly of Upper Canada on the 27th of last month. In his opening speech the following observations occur with regard to the painful disputes now agitated respecting the clergy reserves:—

"The strongly-excited feelings to which the long-agitated question of the clergy reserves has given rise in the province, have sensibly impaired that social harmony which may be classed among the first of national blessings, and have augmented the hopes of the enemies of the country, in proportion as they have created divisions among its defenders. It is painful to reflect that a provision, piously and munificently set apart for the maintenance of religious worship, should have become the cause of discord among professors of the same faith, and servants of the same Divine Master; and I feel that on every account the settlement of this vitally-important question ought not to be longer delayed. I therefore earnestly exhort you to consider how this desirable object may be attained; and I confidently hope that if the claims of contending parties be advanced, as I trust they will, in a spirit of moderation and Christian charity, the adjustment of them by you will not prove insuperably difficult. But should all your efforts for the purpose unhappily fail, it will then only remain for you to reinvest these reserves in the hands of the Crown, and to refer the appropriation of them to the Imperial Parliament, as a tribunal free from those local influences and excitements which may operate too powerfully here. My ardent desire is, that keeping in view as closely as you can the true spirit of the object for which these lands were originally set apart, this embarrassing question may be settled on equitable principles, in a manner satisfactory to the community at large, and conducive to the diffusion of religion and true piety throughout the province.

"Second only in importance to the subject of the clergy reserves, is that of general education. A system of sound and religious instruction for the rising generation ought to be established under every government, and is most particularly requisite in a young country in the situation of this province. I therefore strongly recommend to you a careful revision of the enactments relating to the common schools; and the early adoption of some plan calculated to secure the assistance of properly qualified teachers."

RHYMNEY IRON WORKS COMPANY'S CHURCH.

Report presented at the Annual General Meeting of the Proprietors of the Rhymney Iron Company, held on the 21st November, 1833.

The Directors of the Rhymney Iron Company having taken into their serious consideration the opinion so generally expressed, at the last General Meeting of the Proprietors, that a Church according to the laws of the Established Church of England, and schools for the education of the children of persons in the employ of the Company, should be provided,

Report, that they entirely concur in the opinion then expressed, and that with a view to promote an object not less their duty than their interest, they have had communications with the Marquess of Bute, Mr. Stacey, the Rector of Gelly Gaer, and other parties interested, and after fully considering that the Company having caused to locate on what were before almost barren mountains, a population of 8000 souls, and that number increasing daily, and nearly the whole of that population residing on the freehold property of the Company, in the parish of Bedwelty, in Monmouthshire, at a distance of nearly five miles from the parish church, the directors beg leave to express their unanimous opinion, that the Company are upon every principle, moral and religious, bound to provide and endow a Church, for the use of the tenants of the Rhymney Iron Company, and others, and they recommend the Proprietors to authorise the trustees of the Company, to convey in such manner as may be advised, so much of the freehold land of the Company as shall be necessary, for the purposes of a Church, churchyard, and minister's house and garden, and they recommend for the endowment of the same, that the Proprietors should authorize and order the Directors of the Company, from the funds of profits unappropriated in their hands, to invest in the years 1839 and 1840, so much money as will in these two years purchase the sum of 2,000*l.* 3 per cent. consols, and 2,000*l.* 3 per cent. reduced, or such other securities of equal amount of income, in conformity with the regulations required by law for the endowment of Churches, to be for ever appointed for the maintenance of the minister, and the repairs of the said Church.

And the Directors further recommend, that the Proprietors allow a subscription to be solicited from the public and private funds applicable to church building purposes, from the Marquess of Bute, the Proprietors, and all other well-disposed persons, for the means of providing the funds necessary for building the said proposed Church and parsonage-house.

The Directors consider the establishing of schools as a matter most essentially desirable, and although they would expect from any clergyman who may have the appointment, an active and zealous co-operation in their management, they would consider the schools a property apart from the Church, and retain in their sole power the appointment and dismissal of masters and mistresses.

They do therefore recommend the Proprietors to allow them to allot so much of the estate as may be found necessary for the purposes of the schools, and that such sums as may be necessary for building the same and their appendages, may be taken at the discretion of the Directors from the funds of the Company for such purpose, and that all regulations for the creation and management of the schools, shall for ever remain in the hands of the executive body acting for the Proprietors, and subject to their control.

LAW.

VICE CHANCELLOR'S COURT,
MARCH 27.

JACKSON v. ROWLES.

THIS was a motion by one of the plaintiffs, who was the proprietor of ten shares in the Rhymney

Iron Works, in Monmouthshire, to restrain the directors of the Company from appropriating any part of the property belonging to the Company for the endowment of a Church or the establishment of schools. It appeared that the Company had been established about three years, and that its capital amounted to about 500,000*l.* The iron works were situate in the parish of Bedwelty, which was a very wild and unfrequented district in Monmouthshire, and as it was five miles from the parish church, the number of families, including about 8,000 souls, who had been brought to reside on the spot from the increase of the works, were, to a certain extent, deprived of moral and religious instruction. The matter became a subject of serious consideration with the shareholders of the company, who expressed an opinion, by a large majority, at a general meeting, that a church ought to be endowed and schools established in the neighbourhood of the mines out of the funds of the company, and the matter being afterwards referred to the directors, the following resolution was come to on 21st Nov., 1838:—"The directors of the Rhymney Iron Company having taken into their serious consideration the opinion so generally expressed at the last general meeting of proprietors, that a church, according to the laws of the established Church of England, and schools for the education of children of persons in the employ of the company should be provided, report that they entirely concur in the opinion expressed, and that, with a view to promote an object not less their duty than their interest, they have had communications with the Marquis of Bute, Mr. Stacey, the rector of Gallygear, and other parties interested, and after fully considering that the Company have caused to locate on what were before almost barren mountains a population of 8,000 souls, and that number increasing daily, and nearly the whole of that population residing on the freehold property of the Company in the parish of Bedwelty, in Monmouthshire, at a distance of nearly five miles from the parish church, the directors beg leave to express their unanimous opinion that the Company are, upon every principle, moral and religious, bound to provide and endow a church for the use of the tenants of the Rhymney Iron Company and others; and they recommend the proprietors to authorize the trustees of the Company to convey, in such manner as may be advised, so much of the freehold land of the Company as shall be necessary for the purpose of a church, churchyard, minister's house, and garden, and they recommend for the endowment of the same that the proprietors should authorize and order the directors of the Company from the funds of profits unapplied in their hands, to invest in 1839 and 1840, so much money as will in those years purchase the sum of 2,000*l.* consols and 2,000*l.* 3 per cent. reduced, or such other securities of equal amount of income in conformity with the regulations required by law for the endowment of churches, to be for ever applied to the maintenance of the minister and the repairs of the Church; and that the directors further recommend that the proprietors allow a subscription to be solicited from public and private funds, applicable to church-building purposes, from the Marquis of Bute, the proprietors, and all other well disposed persons, for the means of providing the funds necessary for building the proposed Church and parsonage-house. The directors consider the establishment of schools as a matter most essentially desirable, and although they would expect from any clergyman who may have the appointment an active and zealous co-operation in their management, they would consider the school a property apart from the Church, and retain in their sole power the appointment and dismissal of masters and mistresses." The plaintiff dissented from the whole proceeding, upon the ground, that however laudable the object might be to endow a Church or provide infantile instruction, and however it might gratify the pious feelings of a member of the Established Church, it was nevertheless in point of principle a power the majority of the Company did not possess over its funds, to divert them from the mere trading purposes for which they were originally intended. For this reason he had protested against any such appropriation, and brought the question before the Court by a motion for an injunction to restrain the investment of the money. As soon as the directors were aware of the filing of the bill, they presented a petition to Parliament for leave to introduce a bill to give them this power, which it was doubtful whether they possessed, and a bill was subsequently introduced, though in many respects different from the original frame of the petition. This was not, however, discovered by the plaintiff until after he had served a notice of the present motion on the directors.

Mr. K. BRUCE and Mr. BOOTH appeared in support of the motion, and contended, the object to which the fund was intended to be applied was such a diversion from the original purposes of its creation, that if there was a single dissentient voice, the majority had no power whatever to abstract any portion of it. The excellence of the purpose formed no ground for a different application; for although the majority of the directors were at present members of the Established Church, they might be succeeded by a body of Jews or Roman Catholics, who might desire to erect synagogues or convents, and thus they would find the principle already established to justify the application of 4,000*l.* more of the Company's funds. The application to Parliament was altogether an afterthought, and it was no object of the injunction to restrain that application, as it would be opposed in the proper place, but merely to restrain the Company from thus appropriating the funds upon the decision of a majority.

Mr. JACOB and Mr. RICHARDS resisted the motion on the part of the Company. They submitted, in a question of this nature, the whole of the proprietors ought to have been made parties to the suit, but the plaintiff was found the only person on the record suing on his own behalf against the defendants merely as director, and this important question was to be decided in the absence of the whole company. The argument, on the part of the plaintiff, assumed that the application of a small portion of the Company's funds in providing moral and religious instruction for the persons engaged in the iron works, was merely to gratify a laudable object, but it was of the greatest importance to the interests of the Company to have honest, industrious, and orderly labourers, and therefore the object was one which tended to promote the pecuniary advantage of the Company as much as any other, and was within the powers which a majority of the shareholders at a general meeting possessed. The Company had felt strongly, it was no less to the best interests of the Company, than a duty incumbent upon them, and when any doubt was entertained whether it was an appropriation of the funds inconsistent with the provisions of the deed of partnership, the directors at once applied to Parliament, and did not intend to proceed until the Legislature had sanctioned the general wish of the shareholders. If the plaintiff opposed the appropriation of the funds for such a purpose, his course was to resist the progress of the bill, but his present motion could not be sustained.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, there were some points with reference to the constitution of the record to which it was not necessary for him to advert. The proper course was, in his opinion, to dispose of the case upon substance rather than form. It appeared to him a most remarkable thing that the petition presented to Parliament and the resolution passed at the meeting should differ so materially from each other. The affidavits were extremely meagre, but were of such a nature as to lead the Court to come to the conclusion that nothing was intended to be done beyond what was given in evidence by the intended bill taken to Parliament. The resolution, the petition, and the bill all differed from each other. An affidavit on the part of the defendant used the expression, "the said bill is intended to be forthwith brought in;" but there was no evidence that anything was now intended to be done beyond what was exhibited in the bill. In all stages of the proceedings a continual change of mind was manifest, and there appeared to have been no settled purpose as to what should eventually be done; and it rather appeared to his Honour that he could not, on the evidence before him, take it for granted that anything else was intended than that one thing, of which the Legislature was the proper judge, and it was impossible to say that what the Legislature would do would not be just. If the Court had a case before it, where there was a manifest intention to depart from the provisions of the partnership deed, he admitted that so long as any one individual disagreed, the Court ought to interfere to protect his personal rights; but there was no evidence that there was any intention to do more than was projected by the bill. On the contrary, the evidence was all the other way. His opinion was, the facts of the case were not in such a position as to allow the Court to grant an injunction. He could understand that circumstances might hereafter arise with the bill, framed as it was, which might justify the interference of the Court; but at present there was such a defect of case on the part of the plaintiff as not to warrant any interposition now. The proper course, in his opinion, would be to make no order on the motion, but to let it stand over generally with liberty to apply. He did not think it a case for costs, because it was only by the happening of something subsequent to the resolution, and the notice of motion, that the Court knew what the state of the case was on which the order was asked. There was a case originally which would have warranted the plaintiff in making the application; but under the present circumstances the Court was bound to refuse its interference.

LORD ABINGER ON CHURCH RATES.

At the Kent Lent Assizes, last week, Richard Harvey was convicted of assaulting the high constable of Chatham, Mr. Rickon, with intent to obstruct him in the execution of his duty.

It appears that the defendant, who was one of the party who at the last assizes pleaded guilty to an indictment for a riotous obstruction of a sale of goods seized for church-rates, having still refused to pay his rates, the magistrates issued a warrant of distraint upon his goods, which was given to the high constable to execute. Expecting the officer's visit, the defendant shut up his house, and stationed himself on the opposite side of the road, and on the constable going to the door and attempting to enter, Harvey went across the street, seized him by the collar, and forcibly dragged him away. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, in consequence of the absence of any personal violence towards the high constable. The defendant's counsel having taken an objection to the validity of the rate, his lordship postponed the sentence till the next day, in order to consult Mr. Justice Littleale on the point.

On the defendant being called up to receive sentence, Lord Abinger addressed him as follows:—Richard Harvey, you have been indicted, and after very full consideration by the jury, and a very able defence by your counsel, you have been convicted of an assault upon a constable in the execution of his duty. The assault itself was not attended with any violence, or any peculiar circumstances rendering it worthy of severe punishment, but the spirit in which it was committed, the object which actuated you in committing it, and the circumstances of the peculiar time, and the period at which it was committed, give it an importance and a character which makes it of a serious nature. An objection was taken by your counsel that the warrant which the constable came to execute was illegal. I entertained no doubt at all that that objection was entirely without foundation; but I thought proper to consult the other learned judge on the point, and I have been authorized by him to say, that he entirely agrees with me, that if the magistrates were mistaken in their proceedings, which, however, we don't at all suppose to have been the case, nevertheless, that it was the constable's duty to execute their warrant, and resistance on your part was highly criminal. Now the circumstances which led you to commit the assault seem to have been a participation in a feeling prevailing among your fellow-townsmen, that the church-rate was illegal, and that you were not bound to pay it on various grounds of objection, one of which, and probably the one which chiefly actuated you, seems to be that, because you are not a member of the Church of England, you think you are not bound to contribute towards the repairs of the church. Now, whether the law be a politic one or not, whether it be an expedient law or not, by which the repairs of the churches are fixed upon the land of this country, is not a question which was to be considered by you on a warrant of distress being levied upon you for non-payment. The imposition for the repair of churches is a territorial imposition, not a personal one, nor depending at all upon the character of individuals, but it is laid upon the occupants of property subject to it. Nothing can be more fallacious, nothing more absurd, than to say, that the land was or was not to be liable to this imposition by reason of the character of those who hold it, whether they are churchmen or dissenters: it is manifestly childish. But, suppose it was your conviction that the present mode of repairing the churches was impolitic, and ought to be made subject to another law, yet, as long as the law exists, it is your duty to obey it, and any attempt to resist it is criminal. There can be no liberty but by obedience to the law, and there can be no law, if those who think it wrong choose to resist it. Unhappy will be the day, great will be the calamity which will befall this country, if the people of England ever entertain the notion that they ought to resist the law, and assault the officers by whom the laws are executed. Whenever that day arrives liberty will be gone; we shall be subject to a government of force, probably military force. I hope I shall never see the day in England when the security afforded to persons and property shall depend, not on obedience to the law, but on the violation of it. Under these circumstances, considering the spirit under which you acted, that you barred your doors, and crossed over the way to prevent the constable from entering, and although you offered no violence to his person, yet in the eye of the law you committed an assault upon him, to deter him from performing his duty; considering the circumstances attending it, that you were prepared for resistance, and did what you could to excite the feelings of your fellow-townsmen against the high constable in the execution of his duty, and that afterwards, when he was selling the goods seized by public auction, you insulted him, and said that he ought to be put into the horse-collar he was then selling; considering also that you are one of those who pleaded guilty to a charge of riot to prevent the sale of goods levied for church-rates on a former occasion, and was bound over by recognizances here to keep the peace, I cannot but think that your offence assumes a more aggravated form, and I must inflict upon you some punishment.

Defendant.—My Lord, may I be allowed to address some observations to the Court?

Lord Abinger.—No: it is now too late. I should have been glad on your trial to have heard any mitigating circumstances. The jury have recommended you to the indulgence of the Court, which I have not forgotten in the sentence which I shall pass upon you, which is, that you be imprisoned in the gaol ten days. But remember that you are under recognizances for riot, and if you are brought up again for breaking them, your sentence will be much more severe.

BODMIN, TUESDAY, APRIL 2.

CHURCH-RATE RIOT.—THE QUEEN V. BARRETT, EDWARDS, RANDALL, SPURR, AND BALL.

Mr. Crowder and Mr. M. Smith conducted the case for the prosecution; Mr. Moody and Mr. Merivale appeared for Barrett, Edwards, and Randall; and Mr. Cockburn for Spurr and Ball.

This was an indictment which charged the defendants with having, on the 8th of May, 1838, unlawfully and riotously assembled together to disturb the peace; and that being so assembled, they did riotously prevent one William James Oke from carrying on his business as an auctioneer at Truro.

Mr. Crowder, in opening the case to the jury, said this inquiry was one of very considerable importance, and would require their most anxious and earnest attention. It was of importance more especially to the peaceable inhabitants of the town of Truro, and it was also matter of deep importance to the defendants, who were charged with riotously assembling in the town of Truro, and endeavouring to prevent William James Oke from pursuing his lawful avocation.

The case having been entered into, and witnesses examined at great length, the jury, after a very short consultation, delivered the verdict of Guilty against all the defendants.

Mr. Baron Gurney then proceeded to pass the sentence upon the defendants:—You have been convicted of the crime of riot, and that crime has received great aggravation from the motives with which it was promoted, by the intention manifested by that placard, which three of you have disgraced yourselves, and the body to which you belong, by publishing. It is absolutely necessary that the law should be obeyed, and they who set themselves up in opposition to the law, will find, sooner or later, that the law is too strong for them, and that they would have consulted their own happiness, as well as respectability, if they had obeyed the law. The conduct which has been observed by you distinguishes the case of three of you from the other two, and I shall therefore distinguish your case in the punishment. The sentence of the Court upon you, Barrett, Edwards, and Randall, is that you, and each of you, be imprisoned one month, and pay a fine of 25*l*.; and upon you, Spurr and Ball, that you be imprisoned one month: and that all of you enter into recognizances for your good behaviour for three years, in 100*l*., and that you be further imprisoned until the fine be paid and the recognizances entered into.

DILAPIDATIONS.—CASE FOR OPINION.

The Rev. ———, late incumbent of the vicarage of ———, in the county of ———, made considerable alterations in, and additions to, the vicarage house and premises. Among other things he placed—

1. A water-closet on the first floor, with pipes communicating to a forcing pump below.
2. Two new plain marble chimney-pieces in the drawing-room and dining-room. (A cast iron chimney-piece, which was previously in the dining-room, and a small marble one in the drawing-room, were taken down, and put up, the former in the study, and the latter in the best bed-room, over the drawing-room; and two stone chimney-pieces, which were previously in these rooms, were carried up to the third story, which was added by Mr. ———.)

3. An iron pump in the kitchen-garden.

4. A dial on a stone pedestal on the lawn.

Mr. ———, having lately obtained preferment in another part of the country, has resigned the living of ———, in which he has been succeeded by the Rev. ———; and a question has arisen between these gentlemen with respect to the above-mentioned articles, Mr. ——— considering them to be removable fixtures, such as he might have taken away, and for which, if left and taken to by the succeeding incumbent, he is entitled to claim payment. Mr. ———, on the other hand, considering them as attached to the freehold, and thereby become part of the vicarial premises, from which they can no longer be separated; and that he is entitled to the free enjoyment of them, without any compensation to the preceding incumbent, as of any other part of such premises.

Your opinion is requested, whether, as between an off-going and an in-coming incumbent, the foregoing articles, or any, and which of them, are or are not such as the former can claim to be paid for by the latter, at a fair valuation.

"The alterations and additions to the vicarage-house and premises, indicate so much of (and perhaps of recent) expenditure*, that I have looked with all the research I could apply, for any case or principle upon which I could advise, that the enumerated articles are subjects for valuation; but I am not able to satisfy myself that such is the strict and legal view to be taken. There is no precise case in point, or as between the representative of a deceased incumbent and the successor; but by analogy to the considerations that courts of law apply to fixtures put up by a tenant for life, and in other instances, I am led to this opinion,—that, in the case before me, the different articles are so attached to the freehold, (for such is the nature of the incumbent's tenure, I apprehend, for the time being,) as to become substantially and permanently attached. Of the articles within the house, I do not entertain a doubt; and in regard to the pump and stone pedestal, I am not able to advise otherwise than already stated; but there might be, I think, some hope of a favourable decision in respect of them to the late incumbent, were they of sufficient value, or were it desirable, as between two clergymen, to take an opinion of a court of law. The absence of cases as between clergymen, shows that these matters are met in a spirit of fair adjustment. As regards the dial itself, that, I think, may, if required, be disannexed.

"JOHN HAGGARD."

PARLIAMENTARY NOTICES.

During the past month scarcely a day has passed in the sittings of Parliament without the presentation of petitions upon the following subjects:—

1. The Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill.
2. The great question of National Education.
3. The grant to the Roman Catholic College of Maynooth.
4. The protection, support, and extension of the Church in the colonies.

5. Church Extension, and Education in Scotland. We have therefore thought it right to insert the Notices of Motions upon some of these subjects, as they stand on the books of the House of Commons.

As the motion of Lord John Russell, respecting the Irish Government, is fixed for the 15th of April, it is not probable that the Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill can be discussed on that day.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

Notices of Motions—Monday, April 15.

Mr. J. Jervis—In committee on Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill, to add the following provisos:—

To clause 4—"Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall in any way render the parishioners of the said parishes of St. Margaret and St. John-the-Evangelist, Westminster, or the vestrymen or churchwardens for the time being of the said parishes, or any or either of them, liable to or chargeable with the repairs of the said Broadway chapel, further or otherwise than as they now are or may become liable thereto by any law in force at the time of passing this act."

To clause 5—"Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend in any manner to affect or prejudice any of the rights, customs, or claims of the parishioners of St. Margaret or St. John-the-Evangelist, Westminster, or the vestrymen or churchwardens for the time being of the said parishes, or any or either of them."

Mr. Law—On question "that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair" to go into committee on Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill, to move to leave out from the word "that" to the end of the question, in order to add the words, "it is the opinion of this House that in any measures now to be enacted with the view of rendering cathedral and collegiate churches 'most conducive to the efficiency of the established Church,' so far as such measures shall be directed to making 'provision for the cure of souls,' regard be had exclusively to the wants, (1) of the parishes with which such cathedral and collegiate churches are connected by way of patronage or impropriation; and (2) of the dioceses within which they are situate respectively: and that the arrangements for such provision be carried into effect by the several chapters, without any diminution in the number of their stalls, and subject, as heretofore, to the control of their visitors," instead thereof.

4. Mr. Mackinnon—In committee on Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill, to move, that in place of the 7th section, page 14, the following be inserted:—"And be it enacted, that whereas Her Majesty hath lately appointed F. V. Lockwood to one of the vacant canonries in the cathedral church of Canterbury, the two canonries in the said cathedral church which shall first be vacant shall immediately upon the vacancies thereof respectively be suppressed, and that the next vacancy shall and may be filled up by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury; and that the two canonries which shall next thereafter become vacant shall be suppressed, and that the then next vacancy shall and may be filled up by Her Majesty, and that the two canonries which shall then next become vacant be in like manner suppressed, and that the then next vacancy shall and may be filled up by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury; and that the two canonries which shall then next become vacant shall be in like manner suppressed, and that the third, fourth, and fifth then succeeding vacancies shall and may be filled up by Her Majesty; but the sixth vacancy shall and may be filled up by the Lord Archbishop, and hereafter upon every fourth vacancy the said archbishop shall and may appoint a canon in the said cathedral church, all other vacancies therein being filled up by Her Majesty."

"4. Bill for Encouraging the Establishment of Public Libraries, Museums, Literary and Scientific Institutions, &c., or the Advancement of Subsidiary Education in Ireland."

Lord Viscount Dungannon—On going into committee of supply, to move for committee of inquiry into the state, expenditure, and system of education in the Roman Catholic College of Maynooth.

Mr. O'Connell—To move, by way of amendment to the motion of Lord Viscount Dungannon, "to extend the inquiries of the said committee to Trinity College, Dublin, and that such committee should also inquire into the nature and amount of the funds for education of the said college, and out of what property, or in what mode, the same are derived; and also, into the expenditure of the said college, and the system of education, and in particular, whether there be any, and if so, what exclusions from the franchises and benefits of the University of Dublin."

Mr. Hawes—To call the attention of the House to the petition of David Jones (presented the 20th of February); and to move that, in conformity with the recommendation of the commissioners on Ecclesiastical Courts in England and Wales, this House is of opinion that the jurisdiction of all the inferior ecclesiastical courts should be abolished without delay.

"PROPOSED ADDITIONAL CLAUSE FOR THE ECCLESIASTICAL APPOINTMENTS SUSPENSION (ACT IN PART REPEAL) BILL, BY LORD JOHN RUSSELL.

"And be it further enacted, that nothing in the said first recited act contained, nor anything contained in an act therein recited, passed in the seventh year of the reign of his said late Majesty, entitled 'An Act for Suspending for one year Appointments to certain Dignities and Offices in Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, and to Sinecure Rectories,' shall prevent the collation or appointment of a canon or prebendary to any canonry or prebend which shall become vacant by reason of the vacancy of any deanery in any cathedral or collegiate church, wherein, according to the statutes or customs of such church, the dean has heretofore been elected or appointed from amongst the canons or prebendaries thereof."

CHURCH EXTENSION.

OXFORD, March 14. In a Convocation holden yesterday, the following Petition to the House of Commons, praying for Church extension in England and Wales, was unanimously agreed to:—

"TO THE HONOURABLE THE COMMONS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

"The humble Petition of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford,

"Sheweth,—That the Church of England has been the instrument, under Divine Providence, of countless blessings to the people of this country.

"That it belongs to the very essence of a National Church that her spiritual ministrations should be co-extensive with the spiritual wants of the whole community, offered freely to all men, though not enforced upon any one.

"That it is at present notorious, and has been admitted in public and authentic documents, that the population of England and Wales having of late increased with a vast and unwonted rapidity, has outgrown the resources of the National Church, and a large proportion of the people are altogether excluded, without their consent or fault, from her public worship, religious instruction, and pastoral superintendence.

"That this spiritual destitution, which is ever least regarded by those to whom it is most pernicious, has chiefly befallen districts the least capable, even if they felt the want, of supplying the remedy. That its immediate consequences, not to advert to future and higher interests, are ignorance, vice, and disunion. And the partial and inadequate, however laudable, endeavours of other religious communities to supply the deficiencies of the Established Church, even whilst they restrain demoralization, tend to multiply and perpetuate our unhappy divisions.

"That the only effectual remedy for these is the extension of the National Church, and nothing has hitherto been accomplished in order to this great end, in any degree commensurate with its magnitude and importance.

"That your petitioners do not overlook the benevolent exertions of individuals and Societies, who have laboured even beyond their means, to supply the national want; and they are deeply grateful to the Legislature, and to your Honourable House, for the encouragement and facilities extended to these endeavours; and more especially for the enlightened policy which dictated the Acts for building and enlarging churches; and for the liberal grants, in furtherance of these objects, in the sessions of 1818 and 1823. But these supplies, admitted at the time to be inadequate to the occasion, have been exhausted. Private munificence and the public bounty have only palliated the evil, and the spiritual destitution of the country, notwithstanding, has increased, and is still increasing.

"That this deficiency of all religious ordinances and instruction is a national evil; and it ill becomes a great and wealthy people to rest for the supply of a national want either upon private liberality, or upon the voluntary efforts of those poorer districts in which the want especially prevails. That by no altered management or distribution can the remaining resources of the National Church, a great proportion of whose original endowments have been long since diverted by the State into other channels, be rendered sufficient to meet the growing evil. The nation alone can counteract it permanently and effectually. Divine Providence has entrusted the nation with unexampled resources; and your petitioners believe that it is the duty of the Government and the Legislature to direct them to this end; and the people at large, they do not doubt, will rejoice to see a portion of the national wealth devoted to the honour of Him who gave it, and employed in relieving the spiritual necessities of those by whose industry it has been developed.

"Your petitioners, therefore, with the utmost earnestness, implore your Honourable House to take the spiritual destitution of England and Wales into your most serious consideration, and to meet this great and acknowledged evil by such prompt and effective measures as to your wisdom it shall seem most expedient, in order to arrest the progress of demoralization, prevent the increase and perpetuation of disunion, provide for the best interests of the community, civil, moral, and religious, and draw down upon a Christian people the blessing of Almighty God.

"And your petitioners will ever pray."

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE PETITION TO PARLIAMENT.

A grace passed the Senate "to petition both houses of Parliament against certain clauses in a bill now under the consideration of the House of Commons, upon the subject of Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues." The petition was carried in the Black Hood House by 35 to 7, and in the White Hood House by 33 to 3. The following is a copy:—

"TO THE HONOURABLE THE COMMONS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, NOW IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

"The humble petition of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

"Humbly sheweth,—That your petitioners contemplate with feelings of the deepest anxiety the probable operation of the bill now before your honourable House 'for carrying into effect, with certain modifications, the fourth report of the Commissioners of Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues,' in the event of that bill becoming part of the law of the land.

"That, while they acknowledge and deeply deplore the religious destitution of many parts of the United Kingdom, particularly the manufacturing districts, they cannot but be sensible that the fund which it would be possible to raise by the suppression of stalls in cathedrals, to an extent even greater than that contemplated by the said bill, would be utterly inadequate to meet more than a small part of the present parochial wants of the population, which, moreover, it is obvious, will increase in proportion to that progress in manufacturing and commercial prosperity, which they trust it will please Divine Providence to continue to grant to this country.

"That, on the other hand, your petitioners greatly fear that the proposed reduction of dignities in the Church will have a most baneful effect upon the learning of the clergy, and the social respectability of the clerical profession, both of which points they humbly conceive to be of vital importance in effecting the object which all have most at heart, namely, the maintenance of the Christian religion in its genuine purity, and the bringing home its blessings to all classes, high as well as low, within this realm.

"They would further, with all deference to your Honourable House, suggest, that in addition to their utility as nurseries of learning, the caputular bodies, without any change in their constitution, may readily be made more serviceable, both for assisting the bishop of the diocese in the discharge of his onerous responsibilities and for diffusing the blessings of a Christian education more widely among the people; objects of which the importance becomes daily more prominent, and which, after the proposed reduction, could hardly be attainable by their means.

"The measure, too, appears to your petitioners to imply an exclusive appreciation of parochial ministrations, highly discouraging to a large portion of themselves, who have devoted their time and energies to the attainment of theological knowledge, or to the cultivation of those branches of learning which are absolutely essential to the defence of the true faith, and cannot be cultivated except under circumstances wholly incompatible with the ordinary performances of parochial duties. Your petitioners greatly fear that the effect of this will be, for the future, to discourage residence in the Universities, to diminish the learning of the country, and seriously to debase the standard of the education which those bodies have so long been the means of diffusing among the most influential classes of society.

"They therefore entreat your Honourable House to introduce such modifications of the measure in question as may prevent the consequences which they apprehend as likely to result, should it, in its present form, pass into a law.

"And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c."

The Rev. James Smith, M.A. late Vice-Principal of Brasenose College.—It was mentioned, some weeks since, that the Under Graduates of Brasenose college, Oxford, were raising a subscription for the purpose of erecting a monument to the memory of their late much respected Vice-Principal, the Rev. James Smith, M.A. This intention has now assumed a more substantial shape, and an application has been made to the Principal and Fellows for permission to place the monument in the chapel of the college. On the 5th instant, resolutions were passed, in which the Principal and Fellows returned their thanks to the junior members "for this just and affectionate appreciation of the merits of their late colleague and friend;" and expressed their determination to co-operate with them by adding their own subscriptions. Those who best knew the lamented individual to whom this tribute of respect is about to be raised, speak of him in terms of the warmest esteem. Those of Liverpool who have been connected with Brasenose college will, doubtless, be glad to contribute to the testimonial. There may also be others of his townsmen,—for he belonged originally to this place,—who would be glad to join in so gratifying a mark of esteem.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Cathedral Establishments Bill.—We are happy in being able to state, that an address has been presented to the Archbishop of Canterbury by a considerable body of the prelates of England and Wales, in which they entreat his Grace to withdraw any sanction he may have given to the bill now pending in Parliament for the reduction of our cathedral establishments. The address, we understand, expresses the most respectful and affectionate attachment to the Archbishop and deference to his high authority, but at the same time declares the firm determination of the prelates by whom it is signed to oppose a measure which they consider would prove most injurious to the interests of religion, and to the welfare and stability of the Established Church. The address is signed by the Bishops of Winchester, Llandaff, Worcester, Rochester, Carlisle, Ely, St. Asaph, Bangor, Oxford, Bath and Wells, and St. David's. We have reason to believe that the bill is equally disapproved of by several other prelates, and that not less than 17 or 18 of their Lordships will be opposed to it, should it come up to the House of Lords.—Times.

National Education.—A meeting of the friends of "the principles of the Reformation," as they style themselves, was held yesterday, March 27, at Freemasons' Hall, when the chair was occupied by Sir C. E. Smith. The hall at no time during the proceedings was half filled, and by far the larger majority of those present consisted of females. The platform was, nevertheless, rather numerously graced by Dissenting ministers, members of the Society of Friends, and three or four members of the Legislature, who mainly represent the opinions of those bodies. The meeting was addressed by the Chairman, Sir C. Style, the Rev. Dr. Leifchild, Mr. Atcherly, Mr. Hindley, M.P., Mr. Blair, Mr. S. Gurney, the Rev. R. Ainalie, Mr. J. Hall, Mr. Stevens (of Marylebone), Mr. Baines, M.P., Mr. A. White, M.P., the Rev. Dr. Fletcher, the Rev. A. Wells, Mr. J. Pease, M.P., the Rev. Mr. Clayton, the Rev. Mr. Kirk, Mr. Alexander, Mr. W. Allen, &c., by whom a long series of resolutions were moved and seconded. The resolutions were in effect applauding the system of "National Education," as proposed by the Government, expressing a hope that it would be carried out to its fullest extent; an anxious wish that there would be no such regulations imposed as to interfere with the free attainment of religious education in every class, sect, or denomination, and an intention of furthering the true objects of the meeting. To accomplish these ends a committee consisting of a great number of persons was nominated. In reply to a question submitted to him by the writer of the "Publicola" letters in a Sunday journal, Mr. Baines said, that if it were the desire of the committee, he "saw no objection to the regular admission of Jews and Roman Catholics to the schools" proposed to be established under the provision of the Government project. The speakers generally in strong terms deprecated what they denominated to be the unjust claims of the upholders of the Established Church in requiring that the principles and doctrines of the Protestant religion should constitute the basis of the religious instruction to be inculcated under any system of national education which may be introduced into the country. The readiness expressed by Mr. Baines to admit Roman Catholic and Jewish children into the "national schools" was not merely loudly applauded by the platform groupe, but was reiterated by some of the subsequent speakers. As a "public demonstration of opinion on the subject," this meeting may be regarded as a complete failure.—Times.

The former accounts of the sentence passed upon the Archbishop of Posen are incorrect; he is condemned to imprisonment for six months only, and suspended from the exercise of his functions.

The Bishop of Barbadoes has left England for his Episcopal see. His lady and family remain at Ottery St. Mary, Devon.

METROPOLIS.

King's College, London.—It is proposed to establish three scholarships for the medical students of King's College, each of the yearly value of 40*l.*, and tenable for three years. Arrangements have been made by the medical professors of the College to provide for two of these scholarships, on condition that means shall be obtained for the permanent endowment of a third. The medical students of King's College not only enjoy ample opportunities of acquiring professional knowledge, but have also access to courses of instruction in various branches of literature and science, as well as in religious knowledge, according to the principles of the Church of England. The great majority of medical students are debarred, by the very nature of their professional engagements, at the outset of their career, from the means of improvement in non-professional subjects. It is therefore the more desirable, that when they come to London to attend the necessary courses of medical lectures, they should be encouraged to avail themselves of the great advantage which King's College offers to them of a more extended education upon sound and Christian principles.

The endowment of the proposed scholarships will furnish the successful candidates with the means of prolonging the period of their education, and of thus qualifying themselves more fully for the active exercise of their profession. It will, at the same time, operate as a salutary stimulus to the general body of medical students in the College, as it is proposed that the examination for the scholarships shall be of such a kind, that students of the first or second year, as well as those of longer standing, may become candidates.

Upon the moral benefit likely to accrue to medical students from being placed, during their stay in the metropolis, within the immediate influence of religious instruction and good example, it is unnecessary to enlarge.

To endow one scholarship of the annual value of 40*l.*, the sum of 1300*l.* is required; and to raise this sum, the present appeal is made to those who are desirous of extending the benefits of that kind of education which is given in King's College.—March 18th, 1839.

Post-Office Observance of the Lord's-day.—A great portion of the most influential gentlemen and commercial men within the range of the Derby penny post, and, amongst others, the four Derby banks, viz., Messrs. Evans, Crompton and Newton, Smiths, and the Derbyshire Banking Company, have signed the letter to the Postmaster of Derby, requesting him not to forward their letters to them on the Lord's-day. Some medical men and others, who have not yet been able to make up their minds to sign the same document, are nevertheless signing a statement, that they would be glad to see the running of the mail, and the delivery of letters, altogether discontinued on the Lord's-day. To produce the same result in every town in the kingdom, probably only requires some one individual to urge the measure in faith, without waiting to see others move whom he may think more influential.

The Proposed Post-Office Desecration of the Sabbath.—Yesterday, the 20th instant, a deputation, headed by the Bishop of London, composed of various deputations from the bankers, merchants, solicitors, and stockbrokers, who have presented memorials to the Treasury, praying that the cessation from business which has hitherto existed in the London Post-office on the Lord's-day might be continued to be observed, and especially that no country letters should be transmitted through the London Post-office on that day, attended, by appointment, on Lord Melbourne. The deputation included the following noblemen and gentlemen:—The Lord Mayor, Lord Ashley, M.P., Lord Teignmouth, M.P., the Hon. Capt. Perceval, M.P., Sir R. H. Inglis, Bart., M.P., Mr. Samuel Hoare, on the part of the bankers; Messrs. Thomas Wilson, John Catley, and J. D. Powles, on the part of the merchants; Messrs. George Frere, John Bridges, John Smart, and Alfred Bell, on the part of the solicitors; Mr. Gribble, for the stockbrokers; Mr. Joseph Wilson, Secretary of the Society for Promoting the due Observance of the Lord's-day, and others.

Sir Culling Eardley Smith, Bart., Mr. Watson, and Mr. Latter, on the part of the Sunday-school Union, who had memorialized to the extent of 6000 individuals, hearing of the deputation, requested to join it.

The Bishop of London strongly urged upon Lord Melbourne and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was present, the alarm which had been created throughout the country by the threatened desecration of the Lord's-day, and stated, that nothing could justify Her Majesty's Government in adopting any alteration for the worse by increasing the business of the London Post-office on that day, even had it been called for by the public, which it had not; but, on the contrary, the expression of public feeling was unanimous against the proposed transmission.

A long discussion took place, in which the Lord Mayor, Sir R. H. Inglis, Mr. Joseph Wilson, Lord Ashley, Lord Teignmouth, Mr. Hoare, Mr. Thomas Wilson, and others joined.

The Lord Mayor stated, that he had been generally solicited, from every quarter of the city, to hold public meetings to petition against the transmission, but that he had declined doing so for the purpose of keeping the city quiet, and in full expectation that an assurance would be obtained from Her Majesty's Government that there was no such intention.

Lord Melbourne stated that the Government had no present intention of acting upon the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer fully expressed his disapprobation of the recommendation of that Committee, so far as regarded the delivery and despatch of letters on the Lord's-day, but reserved his opinion as to the transmission of letters through London for the accommodation of the large commercial and manufacturing towns; but distinctly stated, that a general expression from those towns against such transmission would be conclusive; and he added, should such an expression be manifested, cadat questio; he also said, that the deputation might be assured that the Government would not act upon the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons without the sanction of Parliament, and that they would not originate any measure in Parliament pursuant to the recommendation of that Committee.—Record.

On Saturday, March 30, at a meeting of the President and Fellows of Sion College, of which all the parochial clergy of the city of London are members, a petition was unanimously agreed upon to be presented to both Houses of Parliament against the 14th clause in the Prisons Bill, authorizing the paid introduction of teachers of all religions, where the prisoners amount to 50 professing such religion. Petitions against the same clause from Bristol, Hastings, and Derby, are also in a course of signature.

The New Marriage Act.—The following return of the number of marriages, under the New Marriage Act, in the superintendent registrar's district of Canterbury, from the 1st of January to the 31st of December, 1838 (both inclusive), has been furnished in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Commons:—In the Wesleyan Methodist chapel, St. Peter's-street, 3; Presbyterian chapel, Guildhall-street, 2; Calvinistic Baptist chapel, King-street, 1; in the Superintendent Registrar's office, 31—total 37. Of what religion were the 31? As to the Dissenters, it is clear they felt an intolerable grievance under the old system, when only six resorted to the new one in 12 months.—Kentish paper.

Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta of Cambridge was confirmed on Saturday, March 23, in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. Her Majesty and their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Duchess of Gloucester were present. The ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted at the altar by the Bishop of London.

PROVINCIAL.

On Sunday, the 17th of March, the new church of St. John's Bradshaw, in the parish of Halifax, was opened for divine service, by licence from the Lord Bishop of Ripon. An appropriate sermon was preached by the Ven. C. Musgrave, Archdeacon of Craven. In the afternoon, the Rev. W. Gilmer, M.A., incumbent of Illingworth, preached. Notwithstanding the extreme severity of the weather, the church was well attended. Liberal collections were made after both sermons. This church had its origin in the Christian liberality of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Wadsworth, of Holdsworth House, near Halifax, who, about two years since, presented the munificent sum of 700*l.* towards this desirable object.

Burton-upon-Trent Church-rate.—On Friday last, at a meeting of the inhabitants convened by public notice, a rate of 3*d.* in the pound for the present year was unanimously agreed to.—Derby Mercury.

A curious cause has been heard by Lord Jeffrey at the Court of Session, Edinburgh—"The General Baptist Assembly and others against Taylor," lime-merchant in Perth, as representing his brother, the late David Taylor, builder there, for recovery of the sum of 1000*l.*, bequeathed by the latter to the assembly for the maintenance of a preacher of their connection (Unitarian) in the city of Perth. The defendant pleaded, preliminary, inter alia, that the action was not maintainable, inasmuch as the object of the legacy was the propagation of tenets which are not only not recognised by the State, but are condemned by the law of the country as directly or inveterately hostile to the creed which forms part and parcel of the law of the land. Lord Jeffrey repelled the preliminary defences generally, and in particular the defence above quoted, "in respect that the purpose for which the legacy is left is not a criminal or illegal purpose, or one which can, in any sound sense, be regarded as dangerous to good morals, or offensive to decency or good order;" and in a note to the interlocutor his Lordship remarks—"Where there is nothing in the tenets of a religious sect which is contrary to express law, to good morals, or to public decency, the Lord Ordinary can see no ground upon which any distinction can be taken in a civil court between one tolerated sect and another." On this, his Lordship adds, "Those who belong to the great Establishment of the Church of England, it should also be considered, are but sectaries in Scotland, and depend for their protection on the same toleration which has now been extended to Unitarians."

Manchester Church Missionary Association.—The services in connection with the Anniversary of the Manchester and East Lancashire Church Missionary Association commenced on Sunday. In the morning of that day sermons were preached in aid of the funds of the Society at St. Saviour's Church, Chorlton-upon-Medlock, by the Rev. E. Bickersteth, Rector of Watton, Herts; at Ashton-under-Lyne, by the Rev. F. Barker, Incumbent of Edgehill, Liverpool; at St. Peter's, Oldham, by the Rev. J. E. White, one of the Secretaries of the Parent Society; and at Ellenbrook, near Worsley, by the Rev. W. J. Kidd, Incumbent of St. Matthew's, Manchester. In the afternoon sermons were preached by the Rev. J. Piccope, at St. Paul's; at St. Stephen's, Salford, by the Rev. F. Barker; at Hollingwood Chapel, by the Rev. J. E. White; at St. James's, Oldham, by the Rev. G. D. Grundy; at Ellenbrook, by the Rev. W. J. Kidd; and at Blackley, by the Rev. Edward Birch. In the evening, the Rev. Mr. White delivered an animated sermon in Hey Chapel. On Monday evening, the Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting of the members and friends of the Society was held. The Rev. Hugh Stowell, of Christ Church, Salford, was in the chair. The Report was read, and several animated addresses were delivered.

A Meeting of the Members of the Church of England was lately held in the Music Hall, Leeds, the Bishop of Ripon in the chair, for the purpose of forming a Board of Education on the principles of the Church of England, for this parish.

IRELAND.

New Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.—The following Address to the Queen has been voted by the Corporation of Dublin. Other Addresses, most numerous and respectfully signed, either have been transmitted or are in progress:—

"TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

"May it please your Majesty,—We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects of your ancient and loyal Corporation of Dublin, beg leave to approach your Majesty's throne with the renewed assurances of unalterable fidelity and allegiance.

"At the same time, we desire humbly to express to your Majesty the deep alarm and regret with which, in common with all your Majesty's loyal Protestant subjects in Ireland, we have witnessed the recent appointment of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

"In the full and entire conviction that your Majesty has been deceived in assenting to this appointment, in firm reliance upon your Majesty's justice and attachment to our common religion, we venture humbly to lay before your Majesty the causes of our alarm.

"The existence of the Protestant Church in Ireland is guaranteed to us by many solemn engagements, by the Act of Union between the countries, and by the solemn oath in which, at your Majesty's coronation, your Majesty was bound to maintain it. With the existence of that Church we believe that the prosperity of our country, the integrity of this great empire, and the security of your Majesty's throne, to be inseparably connected.

"The nobleman who has been appointed to represent your Majesty in Ireland is understood to come among us as an enemy to the existence of that Church, having publicly declared he was anxious for further aggressions on its integrity. We believe that those who have advised your Majesty to this appointment, have been anxious thus to create among the people of Ireland the impression that its Government would in future be administered upon principles of hostility to the Protestant Church, an impression which we humbly submit to your Majesty such a selection is too well calculated to produce.

"We, therefore, appeal from those advisers to your Majesty, as the hereditary defender of our faith, and as the representative of that illustrious line of princes who were called to the Throne of these realms to support Protestantism. We implore of your Majesty to rescind this appointment, and thus to give to your Majesty's most devoted and faithful subjects, the Protestant people of Ireland, assurance that you will protect their Church and their religion from those who are the enemies of your Majesty's throne and of Protestantism."

COLONIAL.

Voluntary System.—A Clergyman, writing from Kingston, Upper Canada, in speaking of the 160 rebels imprisoned there, says, "About one hundred never belonged to any church, and about seventy were never baptized. So much for voluntary religious support."

Colonial Church Society.—This society, which is instituted to send out clergymen, catechists, and schoolmasters to the colonies in need of such assistance, lately held a public meeting in the Hanover-square Rooms, for the purpose of forming a ladies' association, to be called "The Ladies' West-end Association," to promote the objects of the society, Mr. Henry Pownall in the chair. The chairman detailed the objects for which the society was established—to furnish in the whole, or part, the maintenance of clergymen, catechists, and schoolmasters in the British colonies, to aid in the erection of churches, and to procure for the missionaries, if necessary, Bibles, school-books, and religious tracts. Lady Barham was elected president, and the following ladies are among the vice-presidents:—Lady Roden, Lady Finch, Lady Bayley, Lady Radstock, Lady Teignmouth, the Hon. Mrs. Noel, &c. Lady Hope was elected treasurer. A committee was appointed, consisting of the following ladies:—Lady Bevan, Lady Bryant, Lady Grant, Lady Hart, Lady Raffles, Lady Barry, the Hon. Mrs. King, the Hon. Miss Hope, Mrs. Pownall, Mrs. Labouchere, &c.

Protestant Church at Malta.—At a Meeting of the Protestant inhabitants of Malta, convened by public advertisement, and held in the Government library, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., the following Address to her Majesty the Queen-Dowager was unanimously adopted:—

THE ADDRESS OF THE PROTESTANTS OF MALTA TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN-DOWAGER.

"We, the Protestant population of these islands, impressed with the highest admiration of your Majesty's munificent and pious intention to build a church for our use, desire, with the profoundest respect, to offer in common some testimony, unworthy indeed, but sincere, which shall mark the heartfelt gratitude with which we receive so inestimable a gift.

"From the hour of your Majesty's connection with the British empire, we have not failed to perceive, with the rest of our countrymen, the excellent influence of your Majesty's quiet example in the cause of virtue and religion upon the whole community, nor, less so, your Majesty's attachment to the pure and apostolic branch of Christ's Church established in the realm of England. Many have been the splendid occasions wherein your Majesty has been gratefully hailed as the liberal patroness of our Christian institutions; but, manifest as were these indications of your Majesty's pious zeal, we were unprepared to expect from your Majesty this accomplishment of our long-cherished and most ardent wishes; and we are confident, that the sacred edifice, now about to adorn this city, will not be reckoned the least of those noble acts which will render the honoured name of your Majesty conspicuous in the page of history, and in the pious annals of the Church.

"By means of your Majesty's Christian benevolence, a bright prospect has now opened upon us, and soon all our Protestant brethren, from the least to the greatest, will be enabled to join together in the public exercises of our holy faith.

"Your Majesty's visit to this island has been productive of great good to all. May it be blessed to your Majesty in a perfect restoration of health.

"Fervently we pray the Almighty that your Majesty may live long to hear of, if not to witness in person, the prosperity of this your labour of love and zeal for the glory of God. And may the Lord God cause righteousness and praise to spring forth from it, a glorious proof of the faithfulness of his word, that 'Kings shall be the nursing fathers, and their Queens the nursing mothers, of the Church.'

"Malta, Feb. 5, 1839."

To this Address her Majesty has been pleased to return the following most gracious reply under her own hand:—

"I thank the Protestant inhabitants of Malta for their affectionate Address. Nothing can be more gratifying to my feelings than to receive this testimony of their gratitude for a work which will give me so much real satisfaction to undertake.

"Although far distant when the sacred edifice shall be completed, I assure them that my prayers shall be offered up with theirs, that Saint Paul's church may prove a blessing and a spiritual comfort to themselves and their posterity.

(Signed)

"ADELAIDE.

"La Valetta, February 15, 1839."

And on Monday, the 18th inst., when his Excellency the Governor was pleased to read this answer to the Protestant inhabitants re-assembled in the Government library, it was unanimously resolved,

"That a frame, or box of gold, be provided, by subscription, for the purpose of preserving her Majesty's autograph letter, to be kept in the Protestant church of St. Paul, now about to be erected out of her Majesty's generous bounty."—Malta Gaz.

FOREIGN.

FRANCE.—THE GALRICAN CHURCH.

The history of the temporalities of the Gallican Church and of its constitution, in modern times, affords a lesson which may be of some use to the members of the Church of England at the present moment. We therefore give a few particulars respecting that Church, drawn principally from the first part of the Code des Paroisses. Paris, 1834.

It is well known that in the year 1789 the Clergy of the Gallican Church were induced by the enthusiasm of the moment to acknowledge their property to belong to the nation, and in effect to place the property of the Church at the disposal of the state. Accordingly, on the 2nd of Nov. 1789, the National Assembly made the following decree:—

"The National Assembly decrees, 1. That all Ecclesiastical property (tous les biens des Ecclesiastiques) is at the disposal of the nation, subject to the charge of providing in a proper manner for the expenses of worship, for the maintenance of its ministers, and for the relief of the poor, under the inspection and after the instruction of the administrators of the provinces.

"2. That in the arrangements to be made for the maintenance of the ministers of religion, a sum of not less than 1200 livres per annum shall be secured by way of endowment (à la dotation) to every incumbent (curé), not including the parsonage and gardens belonging to his benefice."

By other decrees, of the 12th of July and the 24th of August, 1790, the "civil constitution" of the Clergy was completely changed. The Bishops were limited to eighty-three, being one for each of the departments; all the rest of the Bishopsrics, amounting to fifty-two in number, were suppressed. Every church and parish in France, and every French citizen, were forbidden "to recognize, under any pretence whatever, the authority of any Bishop or metropolitan whose see should be established under the denomination of a foreign potentate, or of his delegates residing in France or elsewhere. All this being done without prejudice to the unity of the Faith and of the communion which shall be kept with the visible Chief universal."

The Cathedral Church in each diocese was to be "brought back to its primitive state; to be at the same time a parochial Church and an episcopal Church, by the suppression of parishes, or by the dismemberment of such portions as it may be judged convenient to re-unite for the purposes."

The episcopal parish was to have no immediate pastor but the Bishop. All the priests who should be established in it should be his vicars or curates (vicaires), and should do the duties of such.

In Cathedral towns, where the population exceeded 10,000, there were to be sixteen such vicars, and twelve only where the population was less than that amount.

There was to be but one seminary in each diocese for preparation for orders; and this was to be placed within the precincts of the episcopal residence, and near the Cathedral. Each seminary was to have one superior vicar, and three vicars directors, subordinate to the Bishop.

The vicars of the Cathedrals, and the vicars of the seminaries, were to form together the council of the Bishop; and he was to do no act of jurisdiction with regard to the government of the diocese or the seminary without first having deliberated with them.

The Bishops were to be elected by the same electoral body which elected the members of the National Assembly for each department.

The incumbents were to be elected by the same persons, and in the same manner, as the members of the administrative assembly for the district.

All Cathedral dignities, canonries, prebends, and chaplancies, were forthwith suppressed.

The Bishop was to choose the vicars of the Cathedral from the Clergy of his diocese who had exercised their functions for ten years, and he could only dismiss them after a trial, and by a plurality of votes in his council.

The stipends of the Bishops were fixed, the minimum at 12,000 francs, and the maximum at 30,000; except the Archbishop of Paris, who was to have 75,000; and they were to retain the houses and gardens situate in the episcopal city.

Besides this new organization of the Clergy, there was to be a new formation and circumscription of parishes throughout the kingdom, and the Clergy were to be paid according to a fixed scale, the maximum of incumbents being 6000 livres in Paris, and the minimum 1200, according to the general rule.

This civil constitution speedily created a schism. The great body of the Gallican Bishops protested against it. The National Convention insisted that they should take the oath of adhesion to it within eight days, on pain of being considered to have resigned. And on the refusal of the great majority, new Bishops were elected in their place, and consecrated by Talleyrand, Bishop of Autun, assisted by Gobel, titular Bishop of Lydda, and Miroulet, titular Bishop of Babylon.

The progress of destruction was afterwards extremely rapid. Tithes and Ecclesiastical payments of every kind were soon entirely abolished: and on the 19th of August, 1792, came a decree, of which the first article was as follows:—

"The property and fixtures belonging to the fabriques of cathedral and parochial Churches and Chapels, to whatever title and distinction they may belong, shall be sold forthwith in the same manner and on the same conditions as other national domains and property."

By another decree of Nov. 3, 1793, it was ordered "that the ornaments and vessels of gold and silver should be sent to the treasury, and converted into bars: those of copper and brass were to be sent to the mint, or to the nearest foundry for cannon."

Thus the temporalities of the Church were utterly destroyed. The Clergy were first ruined, and afterwards exiled or massacred. The Churches were shut up, or turned first into temples of reason, and afterwards into magazines or manufactories of various kinds; and in that state many of them remain to this day.

Magdeburg, March 11.—It is now nearly a year and a quarter since M. Micheln, chaplain to the Archbishop of Cologne, has been confined in our citadel. His confinement is very rigorous, and even the Catholic clergymen here are not admitted to see him without a permission in writing from the Chief President, which must be every time applied for. He is allowed to read mass in the Roman Catholic church only twice in the week—on Sunday and Thursday mornings, at 8 o'clock. On these occasions he is always accompanied by a police officer, who has strict orders not to suffer any intercourse with a third person. He occupies two very healthy chambers, which are well furnished, and setting aside the deprivation of his liberty and this seclusion, care is taken that he shall want for nothing, and the authorities here are directed to give him every accommodation consistent with his confinement. His mode of living is very simple. On his writing once to Mr. V. F. for some money, which he wanted, as he said, to purchase some books, he was informed by the authorities that this was not necessary, as they had orders to supply all his wants, and he had, therefore, only to ask for what he wished. He has hitherto made a very moderate use of this permission to have some books. He now spends his time entirely in literary pursuits. Hence it appears that there is no foundation whatever for the imputation cast on the Prussian Government, that it treats Micheln like a criminal, without bringing him to trial.

DEATHS.

DEATH OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF TUAM.
(From the Dublin Evening Mail.)

With feelings of deep regret we have to announce the demise of this amiable and virtuous prelate. The Hon. Dr. Le Poer Trench was in every sense and acceptance of the term a great and good man. Learned as a scholar, profound as a theologian, devout as a Christian minister, and, as a pulpit orator, unrivalled in his day, his life furnished a brilliant example of the force of gospel principles, acting on a vigorous intellect, and recommended in their practical effects by a courtesy of manners, which without suppleness was winning, and the advantages of a personal address, which, to the most unbending independence, added the most captivating suavity. In the pulpit, he rivalled the eloquence of Kirwan; in the senate he maintained the righteous dignity of the Christian prelate; in his diocese, he dispersed the bread of life with the piety and faithfulness of an overseer ready to give an account of his charge; in the house of mourning he was a friend to the afflicted; in the walks of famine and pestilence a ministering angel to the sick and needy; in his family, the Christian patriarch. In his lordship's demise the archdiocese of Tuam becomes extinct.

FEB. 27.—In his 36th year, the Rev. Evan Hughes, perpetual curate of Tallyllyn and Llanfihangel.

At the Government House, at Honduras, after a few days' illness, the Rev. Edward Strangways, Rector of Melbury, Dorset; patron, the Earl of Ilchester.

MARCH 4.—Aged 47, the Rev. James Pascoe, Vicar of St. Kevern, Cornwall; patron, Mrs. Hill.

Rev. John Lough Garrison, Chaplain of Bermuda.

At Margate, of a rapid consumption, the Rev. George Grinstead, M.A. of Magdalen College. He entered as Gentleman Commoner of that society in 1817; took his degree of B.A. Dec. 4, 1821; and proceeded M.A. Dec. 17, 1824.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO INCUMBENTS OF LIVINGS.

THE REV. JOHN HODGSON, (Vicar of St. Peter's, in the Isle of Thanet, and Secretary of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society), having been for some time engaged in investigating the course of mortality amongst the one particular class of society consisting of "the Clergy of the Established Church," would feel himself greatly obliged (and the profession may be very much benefited by it hereafter) if the Clergyman in every parish would assist him in the undertaking, which thus would be made easy, by procuring for him and sending to him in plain writing the following particulars sealed up.

1. The names of all and each of the Incumbents of his parish (specifying the parish and diocese), on and since the 1st of January, 1779; and, if possible, the dates, or thereabouts, of their becoming Incumbents of the same.

2. The date of their ceasing to be the Incumbents, and whether by death, or otherwise.

3. If by death, the date of their death, and their age at death; and whether the number of the years of the age specified be years completed, or to be completed next birth-day; if by removal, where removed to.

4. The authority for such age, whether from tablet, stone, register, or other source; specifying whence it is, and in what church found.

5. The account and particulars of 3 and 4, where the Incumbent of another parish may have been buried, and registered, or otherwise testified to, in his parish since the year 1778; specifying of what parish Incumbent, and in what county.

6. The account where an Incumbent was buried, if not in his own parish.

7. The date of the birth of the present Incumbent, in the year, and month, and day of it. It may appear that too much is asked under this head; but the information upon this one point alone would be very valuable in the mass; and the age of any individual would be kept strictly private.

The object of the investigation is to ascertain whether life amongst the Clergy be of more than common duration, and to find the lowest possible rates at which Clergymen may be invited to make Assurances upon Life. The Lord Bishop of London was pleased at the late visitation of his Diocese to request his Clergy to assist Mr. Hodgson in his inquiries.

If the Incumbents of Parishes throughout England and Wales will have the kindness to send in all the information which they can collect, Mr. Hodgson has no doubt that he shall be able by such means, aided through other channels, such as the University and Public School Registers, to perfect a very useful work in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Hodgson most sincerely thanks the Clergymen who have already furnished him with the Statements required, and requests an early return from those who have not yet been able to send them. As there are many hundred letters to consult and to enter up, the very "plainest writing" is desirable.

Observ.—It is earnestly requested that statements as above, if procured, may be left, at any convenient opportunity, by means of a friend visiting London, or so as to cause no expense, for Mr. Hodgson, at Messrs. Rivingtons; or Mr. Parker's, West Strand; or at Mr. Burder's, 27, Parliament Street; or at No. 40, Parliament Street.

TO BE SOLD, the Perpetual ADVOWSON of a VICARAGE in the County of Worcester (under peculiar advantages). Valued at upwards of 160*l.* per annum, exclusive of the Vicarage House, consisting chiefly of Glebe Land of a superior quality. The parish is small but entirely agricultural, and the roads are good. It is an easy distance from Cheltenham, Worcester, and Leamington. The house too small for the residence of an Incumbent. There is a small estate adjoining that can be purchased with it if desired.

Apply (if by letter, post paid) to Mr. W. Croome, Land Agent, Tewkesbury.

A CLERGYMAN who is preparing the Fourth Edition of a successful Work against the Roman Heresy, is desirous of DUTY in London, or within 30 miles. A minimum of stipend will gladly be accepted. If required, he will reside and take charge of the whole duty of the parish, without further remuneration than apartments rent free. His pastoral labours have met with much acceptance, and his Testimonials are approved by the Bishop. Address (post paid) Pastor, No. 17, Hatfield-street, Blackfriars.

AN UNMARRIED CLERGYMAN, in Full Orders and of active habits, who is a Graduate of Cambridge, of Orthodox principles, and at present only temporarily engaged, wishes to obtain a CURACY in an extensive sphere of action. As the Advertiser has had the charge of a large parish, and feels capable of taking the entire responsibility upon himself, he should not object to a Curacy where the Incumbent is non-resident. Satisfactory references can be given.

Address (post paid), with full Particulars, to P. Q., Post-office, Newbury, Berks.

CURATE.

WANTED, immediately, an active and zealous Clergyman as an Assistant Curate for a Parish in Cornwall, containing upwards of 4,000 persons. The church is large, and requires a strong and distinct voice. Salary, 100*l.* per annum.

The efficiency of this Society, which confers such benefits upon the poor Orphans of the Clergy of the Church of England, depends upon the support which is given to it. Contributions from the Laity and Clergy are, therefore, respectfully solicited, and they will be received on account of the Treasurers, Archdeacon Cambridge and Dr. Shepherd, by Messrs. Drummond, Bankers, Charing Cross, or by Mr. Stretton, the Collector, 67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

"You well know how soon, upon any call of patriotism and necessity, one of those stupendous masses, now reposing on its shadow in perfect stillness, would assume the likeness of an animated thing, instinct with life and motion; how soon it would ruffle, as it were, its swelling plumage; how quickly it would put forth all its beauty and its bravery, collect its scattered elements of strength, and awaken its dormant thunder."—Channing's Speech to the Corporation of Tynes.

The above Twenty-Four Vignettes are surmounted by an elaborately embellished Gothic Border, in the niches of which are contained the Figures of the Twelve Apostles, designed by Harvey. The Engravings are executed by Jackson, whilst the printing has been confined to the house of Vizetelly and Co. THE
CHURCH MAGAZINE,

Under the Direction of Clergymen of the Church of England.

THE chief object of this Magazine is to bring before the minds of the great body of the English people, in plain language, and in a Christian spirit, facts and arguments in defence of those Scriptural and Catholic principles by which the Church of England is contradistinguished from all sorts of dissenters, whether Romish or Protestant.

The unexampled success which THE CHURCH MAGAZINE has already received, and which has given it, in point of circulation, the lead of all the Monthly Magazines connected with the Church, encourages the hope that it will meet with general support, and prove highly advantageous to the Church of our country in a time of great persecution and danger. The style, language, and price are equally adapted for the mass of the people, and the Clergy and other Churchmen will render essential service to the glorious cause they love, by recommending it to all within the range of their influence.

Each Number will contain a finely executed Portrait of some distinguished Clergyman, worth double the price of the Magazine.

Portraits of the Bishop of London, the Rev. Dr. Hook, the Archbishop of York, and the Rev. E. Bickersteth, have already appeared. Portraits of the other Bishops, and of the Rev. George Townsend, Prebendary of Durham, the Rev. Dr. Dillon, the Rev. H. Melvill, the Rev. T. Dale, of London, the Rev. F. Close, of Cheltenham, the Rev. H. M'Nelle, of Liverpool, the Rev. Mr. Stowell, of Manchester, and others, will be given as soon as possible.

Besides various Original Articles, Letters, &c., THE CHURCH MAGAZINE contains a complete Register of the Ecclesiastical transactions of the month.

From the numerous unsolicited notices of the public press we select the following:—

RECOMMENDATIONS.

"The principle on which THE CHURCH MAGAZINE grounds its claims to the support of the British public, Lay and Clerical, is an unflinching advocacy of the Established Church against all attacks, public or otherwise, of dissenters from her holy communion; and as a determined champion of her rights and sacred ordinances, eschewing all new-fangled doctrines, and wisely believing, that 'the nearer the source the purer the stream,' it labours and will continue to labour, to steady unwavering opinions on the many veritate questions of the day. The articles are replete with sound doctrine and solid Church of England principles, and written in a temperate and convincing manner; and when we consider that for a Frenchman's paltry six sous a number of such excellent matter can be had every month, we cannot fall recommending its perusal to our readers. The Magazine has a beautiful engraving worth at least three times the entire price."—Dublin Evening Packet.

"This new periodical is conducted on right principles. It numbers amongst its contributors several of the most talented writers of the present day, and is in safe hands for speedy popularity amongst sound Churchmen. It is written with great force and perspicuity of language, and in a tone of piety and earnestness which gives assurance, that whilst the dignity of the Church is upheld, the true interests of Christianity will be carefully guarded. Without instituting any comparisons with other Church periodicals, which could be done most advantageously to the one before us, we may observe that THE CHURCH MAGAZINE is eminently entitled to the support and patronage of our readers."—Manchester Courier.

"The contents of THE CHURCH MAGAZINE are rich, varied, and popular, embracing subjects of daily increasing interest and importance treated in a superior style. At a time when the Church is attacked by foes without, and betrayed by false friends within its pale, it is gratifying and cheering to witness a combination of talent and exertion exercised in her defence; and THE CHURCH MAGAZINE will not be an inefficient guardian of her rights, whilst the dignified and fervent Christian spirit which breathes in every page will not fail to contribute to the advancement of the great principle which it humbly advocates."—Newcastle Journal.

"We sincerely congratulate the Church on the valuable aid which this unflinching advocate of Protestantism is likely to afford it. We could almost cease to regret hearing the cry of 'the Church is in danger,' when that cry gives birth to this and similar able champions of the Gospel truth. It is replete with valuable information, not only on doctrinal, but on general subjects; and when we perceive, as we must, that it exhibits amongst its contributions the productions of some of the most celebrated modern Divines, we have no doubt but that it will be amply supported by the Protestant public, and amply repay its spirited Proprietors. To our numerous clerical friends we would say, possess yourselves of this Magazine. It will prove a strong link of connexion and a medium of intercourse between the Clergy and our Church in both countries."—Limerick Standard.

"This Magazine appeals to all Churchmen for support, being itself the unflinching advocate for the Church, and the determined champion of her rights and sacred ordinances. The contributors to this work are, unquestionably, men of talent; their language possessing force and perspicuity, whilst there is never wanting that tone of piety and earnestness which is the sure guarantee for true Christian principles, and that in all things proper dignity will be observed. Portraits of the Clergy will be a great additional recommendation, as thus, upon terms the most reasonable, persons will possess themselves of the likenesses of our most celebrated Divines."—Exeter Flying Post.

"From the careful perusal which we have given THE CHURCH MAGAZINE, we have derived both pleasure and information. The articles are written with force and talent, and combine the most solid Church of England principles with great and exalted piety, zeal, and temper. The vigorous style of the articles leads us to hope that this new candidate for popular favour will be universally read and supported. It is under the direction of Clergymen of great talents and known piety. The distinguishing feature, however, of this new, but valuable periodical, is its cheapness. Its price is sixpence. It is thus within the reach of all classes, from the peer to the labourer; a circumstance at which we rejoice exceedingly. It is notorious that the Church of England has lost much of its influence among our humbler brethren, from the death of cheap periodicals devoted to its cause; whilst on the other hand, the many-headed and active schismatics have been weekly multiplying their organs, and thus unsettling, bewildering, and confusing men's minds with the conflicting nature of their separate creeds, errors, schisms, and heresies. To THE CHURCH MAGAZINE, therefore, we say, 'Go on and prosper.'"—Kidderminster Messenger.

"The Church Magazine deserves the support of every member of the Established Church; and its cheapness will go far to place it in the hands of many thousands. We sincerely wish it success."—Parley's Bristol Journal.

"We hail the appearance of a cheap and beautiful Magazine, undertaken for the sole purpose of defending our Established Church. It commenced with this year, and contains some very powerful articles; and we do not recollect to have seen so much of the valuable, the useful, the interesting, in so small a compass. The variety is very great. Should it go on, as we sincerely hope it may, in the same tone, we hesitate not to pronounce it to be one of the very best periodicals we have seen in the defence of our Church."—Northampton Herald.

"We have received the second Number of The Church Magazine, and much as we approved of the first, we approve of this in a higher degree. The table of contents is rich and varied; and from the talent discoverable in the different articles of which it is composed, it cannot, in our opinion, but ensure complete success. The opening paper, 'The Church, the Pillar and Ground of Truth,' is a masterly production. 'The Inconsistency of Dissent with itself,' an able and judicious exposé—and the Number, as a whole, is well calculated to uphold the Church against the intrigues of her plotting foes. We cordially recommend the work to the attention of our readers, as being sound, temperate, talented, judicious, and cheap."—Salisbury Herald, Feb. 23.

FABLES from ANCIENTS and MODERNS, versified by the Rev. JAMES GORIE, M.A., of Clare Hall, Cambridge, and Curate of Shelden, Warwickshire.

"A little book, of little pretensions, but great merit, calculated to make us think and do rightly."—Christian Remembrancer.

"This little volume contains seventy fables (many of them old acquaintances), done into octosyllabic verse, in a very pleasing way. The 'grave and gay,' the 'lively and severe,' are judiciously combined, with the design of setting before the young some lessons of proper temper and conduct. The thanks of parents are due for this useful and clever publication."—British Magazine.

"Mr. Gorie's Fables are pithy to the utmost extent compatible with distinctness, and his moral lessons are sometimes comprised in a single line, and seldom exceed half a dozen. The versification is also flowing and spirited, so much so that we read many of our old friends with greater gusto than ever. The author has also been happy in his selection, giving us not only the best old ones in a new dress, but the choicest from many modern fabulists."—Cambridge Chronicle.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

(Continuation of Monthly Report.)

GENERAL MEETING, APRIL 9, 1839.

The Rev. J. E. TYLER in the Chair.

MR. ROCHFORD CLARKE gave notice of his intention to move at the next General Meeting as follows:

"That this meeting, having taken into consideration so much of the answer recently returned by the Standing Committee to a memorial from seventy-four clergymen of Somersetshire in support of a memorial from five clergymen of Essex, complaining of the state of some of the Tracts of this SOCIETY, as is contained in the concluding paragraph, which is as follows:

"The Standing Committee are convinced from experience, and from the failure of all former attempts, that no revision of the Tracts could possibly be accomplished, which would afford satisfaction to the members of the SOCIETY at large. They therefore feel it their duty to decline recommending the Board to attempt a revision. And they venture to hope that all the members of the SOCIETY will perceive the disadvantages which may arise to its best interests from the further agitation of such questions;

feel called upon to record their conviction, that the interests of this SOCIETY will be best advanced, as well as the cause of truth, by a constant endeavour to bring the Tracts into perfect conformity with the Word of God, rather than by an attempt to retain them in their present state."

The following notice of motion given by the Rev. SANDERSON ROBINS at the last General Meeting having been read,

"That a humble address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that no system of National Education may be adopted, which does not include the free use of the Bible, or which would take the education of the people out of the hands of the parochial clergy;" Mr. Robins requested that the terms of the motion might be altered, and that the resolution might stand as follows:

"That the Standing Committee be requested to prepare an address to Her Majesty, humbly praying that no system of National Education may be adopted which does not require the use of the Bible, and Liturgy, and Catechism, of the Church of England and Ireland, or which would take the education of the people from the superintendence of the clergy, as heretofore exercised by them."

This was seconded by the Rev. C. J. LAPRIMAUDAYE.

MR. ROCHFORD CLARKE moved as an amendment, that, in the above motion, the word "Church" be substituted for the words "clergy as heretofore exercised by them."

This was seconded by Mr. W. W. HULL, and negatived on a show of hands.

MR. HULL moved, by way of amendment, that the word "Prayer-book" be substituted for the words "Liturgy and Catechism."

This was seconded by the Rev. R. J. ST. AUBYN, and negatived.

MR. HULL then proposed, as an amendment, the omission of the words, "and Catechism."

This was seconded by the Rev. W. H. HOWARD, and negatived.

The motion, as altered by Mr. ROBINS, was then put, and carried.

The Rev. R. MONRO gave notice of his intention to move at the General Meeting, as follows:

"That a petition to both Houses of Parliament against the fourteenth clause of a Bill for the better regulating of Prisons* be adopted by this SOCIETY, to the following effect:"

* "And be it enacted, That in every prison in which the average number of prisoners professing any one and the same religion, differing from that of the Established Church, confined at one time during the three preceding years, shall not have been less than fifty, it shall be lawful for the Justices or other persons having the appointment of the chaplains of such prisons, if they shall see fit, to appoint or remove as pleases a teacher or clergyman, acting as such at the

Mr. MONRO stated that he would send a draft of a petition for the consideration of the Standing Committee, in order that it may be laid before the Board.

A letter was read from the Rev. Archdeacon Coster, Secretary to the Church Society of the archdeaconry of New Brunswick, sending a bill of exchange for 60*l.* for a supply of books for distribution, lending libraries, and Sunday and other schools; and requesting, by a resolution of the committee, a grant of books from the SOCIETY.

It was agreed to grant books to the amount of 40*l.* in aid of the objects of the New Brunswick Church Society.

A letter was read from the Rev. J. Heavyaide, chaplain at Graham's Town, Cape of Good Hope, and president and secretary of the Albany district committee, stating the great necessity which is felt by the Church there for aid from its friends at home, and from the colonial government. He also forwarded an extract from the minutes of the proceedings of the committee, and a memorial, praying for assistance towards the erection of a church at Fort Beaufort, one of the principal garrison towns on the frontier, the head quarters of a regiment, and a market-town, containing at present 379 soldiers, and a large population, which is continually increasing. It appears by the minute that there are in that town at least 200 European and 500 coloured children residing in the town and its immediate vicinity without any means of instruction, except one Sunday-school, containing 80 scholars, conducted by the Wesleyans, who have lately sent a missionary thither. The memorial is signed by the five provisional trustees of the building, and by the Secretary. It is estimated that a church might be built at a cost of 1800*l.*, one-third of which the inhabitants purpose to raise among themselves. They have also memorialized Her Majesty's colonial government, and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

The Board agreed to grant 100*l.* towards the erection of a church at Fort Beaufort.

A letter was read from the Rev. W. B. Lewis, chaplain at Smyrna, in behalf of the chapel at Boudja, Asia Minor, towards the erection of which a grant of 100*l.* was made by the Board in January, 1837.

The Board agreed to grant 75*l.* towards the completion of the church at Boudja.

A letter was read from the Rev. Francis Trench, Incumbent of St. John's, Reading, requesting a supply of Common Prayer Books, for the use of a large body of workmen on the rail-road in his immediate neighbourhood.

The Board granted Common Prayer Books to the amount of 5*l.* on this application.

The Rev. Walter F. Hook, D.D. requested a grant of books for the use of a "Church of England library of religious and general literature," established in the town of Leeds, under his superintendence, and with the sanction of the Lord Bishop of Ripon.

The object of this institution is to disseminate, by means of books and lectures, sound religious and general instruction, and to convey information respecting the claims of the Church on its members, and their corresponding duties and privileges.

Books amounting to 25*l.* were granted.

An application of a similar nature was made by the Rev. Wm. Wales of Northampton, in behalf of a society of which the bishop is the president, established in that town, and the nature and objects of which are stated as follow, in an "Address."

"The object of this institution is to furnish to its members the means of mental improvement, by the formation of a well-selected library; by the establishment of classes for mutual instruction; and by the occasional delivery of elementary lectures on the more important branches of knowledge and science. It is hoped that a great and permanent time of such appointment in some chapel duly registered as a place of religious worship of the religion of such prisoners, for the instruction and spiritual assistance of such prisoners solely, and for the persons having the control of the funds applicable to the expenses of such prison to fix the salary to be paid to such teacher or clergyman, and to make order for the payment thereof out of the funds applicable to those expenses." (14th clause.)

benefit may thus be conferred, especially on the young, who are engaged in the various pursuits of trade and business, by inducing them to devote their leisure hours to the acquisition of such knowledge as will tend to elevate and strengthen their character, and make them useful and honourable members of society.

"The diffusion of mere secular knowledge, however, is not the sole aim of this institution. As 'the fear of the Lord' is pronounced, on inspired authority, to be 'the beginning of wisdom;' and as man is made not only for this life, but to last for ever, it will be a fundamental maxim of the institution, that the useful knowledge it tries to communicate, shall invariably be based upon, and auxiliary to, religious knowledge. Nothing that is of a controversial character, or that can be considered unsuited to 'the gospel of peace,' will be at any time imparted; and everything like intolerance or exclusiveness is strongly disclaimed. At the same time, as a bond of union, and a scriptural standard are indispensably necessary, the religious knowledge communicated will be in strict conformity with the doctrines and discipline of the Catholic and Apostolic Church established in this country."

The Board granted books to the amount of 15*l.*

The secretaries reported that the Lord Bishop of Durham had consented to undertake the office of preacher before the SOCIETY, on the occasion of the Anniversary Meeting of the assembled Charity-schools, in the Cathedral of St. Paul, on Thursday, the 6th of June next.

The secretaries also informed the Board, that the Annual Meeting of the Treasurers and Secretaries of the Diocesan and District Committees will be held at the SOCIETY'S House, on Wednesday, the 8th of May next, and not on the first Wednesday in May, as announced in the annual report.

At this meeting it was agreed to present a large Bible and Common Prayer Books for the Deaks, and books for the Communion Table, for the use of new churches at the following places:—Skipton, Yorkshire; Littleworth, near Faringdon, Berks; Chelsea, Stafford.

A Bible, two Common Prayer Books, and a book for the Communion Table, were granted for the use of each of the new churches at Moorsholm, Skelton, and Wincle, near Macclesfield.

A quarto Bible and Common Prayer Book were granted for the use of licensed school-rooms at Barnoldswick, Yorkshire, and Arclodon, near Whitehaven.

Several gratuitous grants of books and tracts were made.

A letter was read from the Right Rev. the Bishop of Vermont, acknowledging the SOCIETY'S present of a set of its bound books and tracts.

A letter was read from the Rev. Dr. Halfhead, Secretary of the Paris district committee, inclosing the following resolution:—

Paris, March 23, 1839.

"At the first General Meeting of the Paris District Committee of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, held in the British Episcopal Church, in Paris, March 20, 1839,

"The Right Rev. Bishop Luscombe in the Chair.

"It was resolved unanimously, 'That the most grateful thanks of this Committee be given to the SOCIETY for its generous and valuable gift of books and tracts, lately received, for sale and gratuitous distribution, which, with the blessing of God, will tend to the spiritual edification of many of their countrymen resident in a foreign land, and thus deprived of many sources of religious instruction.'"

Several other letters of acknowledgment were laid before the meeting.

A letter was read from the Right Hon. the Earl of Eldon, inclosing a draft for one hundred guineas as a donation to the SOCIETY.

The secretaries were directed to acknowledge this, and to request his lordship to allow his name to be enrolled among the members of the SOCIETY.

A letter was read from the Rev. Dr. D'Oyly, inclosing a donation of 20*l.* from the Lambeth District Committee Agreed to return thanks for this donation.

A letter was read from Messrs. Smith and Grover, of Hemel Hempstead, announcing a legacy of 1000*l.* bequeathed to the SOCIETY by the late Mrs. Nugent of Berkhamstead.

One hundred new members were admitted at this meeting.

The following members of the Society were appointed to form the Tract Committee for the year ensuing:—Rev. Dr. D'Oyly, Rev. Dr. Deatry, Rev. R. G. Baker, Rev. J. Lonsdale, Rev. J. E. Tyler, Rev. J. G. Ward, Rev. C. B. Dalton.

The following resolution, agreed to at the last general meeting, having been read; namely,

"That the Standing Committee be requested to prepare an address to Her Majesty, humbly praying that no system of national education may be adopted which does not require the use of the Bible, and Liturgy, and Catechism, of the United Church of England and Ireland, or which would take the education of the people from the superintendence of the clergy, as heretofore exercised by them;"

The Secretary stated; by direction of the Standing Committee, that the Committee had taken into consideration the matter referred to them, respecting an address to Her Majesty on the motion of the Rev. S. Robins, and had also received a draft of an address from Mr. Robins: that additional circumstances having taken place since the last meeting, connected with the subject of the intended address, it seemed to the Committee advisable that the matter should be again referred to them, and that such address, when prepared by the Committee, be presented to the Queen forthwith by the President, should his Grace approve it.

It was agreed, that this be referred to the Standing Committee accordingly.

A memorial was laid before the meeting, signed by the Rev. Hastings Robinson, D.D., Rev. Henry Budd, Rev. Guy Bryan, Rev. C. J. Yorke, and the Rev. H. B. Harris, requesting the reconsideration of a paragraph in the letter addressed to the Rev. C. Deedes, by direction of the Standing Committee. The memorialists also offered to the consideration of the Society certain passages in two of the Society's tracts, with a view to their alteration or removal.

This memorial having been read to the Board, it was agreed, on the motion of the Rev. Dr. Russell, seconded by the Rev. J. E. Tyler, That the memorial do lie on the table.

Mr. Rochfort Clarke brought forward the motion of which he had given notice at the last general meeting, and proposed the following resolution for the adoption of the Board:—

"That this meeting, having taken into consideration so much of the answer recently returned by the Standing Committee to a memorial from seventy-four clergymen of Somersetshire in support of a memorial from five clergymen of Essex, complaining of the state of some of the tracts of this Society, as is contained in the concluding paragraph, which is as follows:

"The Standing Committee are convinced from experience, and from the failure of all former attempts, that no revision of the tracts could possibly be accomplished, which would afford satisfaction to the members of the Society at large. They therefore feel it their duty to decline recommending the Board to attempt a revision. And they venture to hope that all the members of the Society will perceive the disadvantages which may arise to its best interests from the further agitation of such questions;"

feel called upon to record their conviction, that the interests of this Society will be best advanced, as well as the cause of truth, by a constant endeavour to bring the tracts into perfect conformity with the word of God, rather than by an attempt to retain them in their present state."

This was seconded by Mr. Thomas Dornford.

The motion was negatived.

The following letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Madras, dated February 2, 1839:—

"I fear that our venerable Society may accuse me of negligence in not having earlier announced my arrival at Madras. I felt, however, unwilling to state a circumstance in itself so unimportant, until I might have something of real interest to communicate.

"I will not at present hazard an opinion upon the prospects of Christianity in this country, my experience of India being so very limited; but I may safely say that I am full of hope. Much can be done, and I am satisfied that much will be done; for this most interesting land. If we proceed but slowly, may we not hope that the building which we are thus rearing upon the only sure foundation, will be the more durable?"

"I have now commenced my visitation of this still overwhelming diocese. I may fairly apply to it this epithet, when I find, that properly to visit every station, will most probably occupy at least twenty-six months out of three years.

"At present I can only request our venerable Society to continue to honour me with its confidence, and to feel assured that I will never neglect an opportunity of promoting its designs to the utmost of my very humble ability. I can truly say, my heart is in the cause.

"As yet I have not expended any part of the 500*l.* intrusted to my stewardship; but as I proceed on my long journey, I fully expect that urgent calls for assistance will be made at almost every station. And when it is taken into consideration, that this diocese is geographically almost as large as that of Calcutta, and that there are circumstances connected with Southern India, rendering it of especial importance to the Church of England, I venture to hope, that in the course of my visitation a further grant may be allotted to me.

"It is my intention to forward to the Society, at the end of each year, so long as it may please God to spare my life, a copy, or rather a series of extracts from my journal, which, in my opinion, may prove of interest.

"Our Diocesan Committee flourishes; and we have in the Rev. G. W. Mahon a zealous and able secretary.

"I have determined to recommend the Society most urgently at every great station which I may visit; and I shall endeavour to excite the liberality of the Christian residents in its behalf. Depend upon it, the Society is not known throughout India as it ought to be. Its claims shall not want an advocate, however incompetent, in me."

The Rev. S. Robins gave notice of his intention to move at the next general meeting, on Tuesday, the 4th of June, "That a committee be appointed, consisting of clerical members of the Society, who shall be requested to consider and report forthwith to the Standing Committee their opinion, as to whether any and what measures may be taken with most advantage by the Society, for the purpose of counteracting the designs of the Socialists."

The following notice of motion for the next general meeting was given by the Hon. and Rev. S. Best:—

"That on all motions proposing alterations in the rules, and for the election of the Standing Committee and officers, members be allowed to vote by letter, through the medium of the District Committees."

The Rev. R. Monro proposed the following motion to the Board, pursuant to notice given at the last General Meeting:

"That a Petition to both Houses of Parliament against the fourteenth clause of a Bill for the better regulating of Prisons be adopted by this SOCIETY, to the following effect:—

"To the Honourable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled,

"The Humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE,

"Sheweth,

"That your Petitioners cannot but regard with feelings of extreme anxiety a provision contained in the Bill for the regulation of Prisons now before your Honourable House, to the following effect:—

"And be it enacted, That in every Prison in which the average number of Prisoners professing any one and the same religion, differing from that of the Established Church, confined at one time during the three preceding years, shall not have been less than fifty, it shall be lawful for the Justices or other persons having the appointment of the Chaplain of such Prison, if they shall see fit, to appoint or remove at pleasure a Teacher or Clergyman, acting as such at the time of such appointment in some Chapel duly registered as a place of religious worship of the religion of such Prisoners, for the instruction and spiritual assistance of such Prisoners solely, and for the persons having the control of the funds applicable to the expenses of such Prison to fix the salary to be paid to such Teacher or Clergyman, and to make order for the payment thereof out of the funds applicable to those expenses."

"That your Petitioners would humbly urge, that the passing of the proposed enactment is at the present time wholly uncalled for, seeing that full toleration is afforded to those prisoners whose religion differs from that of the Established Church, inasmuch as such prisoners are now allowed to receive the instructions of those teachers whose doctrines may be in accordance with their own sentiments.

"That your Petitioners, however, desire most earnestly to call the attention of your Honourable House to the very important difference which exists between the toleration of such instructions and the actual establishment of teachers by the payment of a salary out of the public funds.

"That your Petitioners believe experience has fully proved that the class of persons in whose favour this enactment is proposed, are by no means adverse to the reception of religious instruction from the Chaplains of their respective prisons.

"Your Petitioners, therefore humbly beg your Honourable House to refuse your consent to a measure which has a manifest tendency to countenance and encourage extreme diversities of opinion in religious matters."

This motion was seconded by the Rev. David Ruell.

Mr. Cotton moved, by way of amendment,

"That this meeting, while they entertain the most decided objection to the principle of the clause alluded to in the motion of Mr. Monro, do not consider it a part of their duty to petition the Legislature on the subject."

This was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Russell.

The Amendment was negatived.

The original motion was put and carried.

It was then agreed that his Grace the President be requested to present the Petition to the House of Lords, and that Sir Robert Harry Inglis, Bart., be requested to present it to the House of Commons.

The Secretary laid before the meeting a Letter from Mr. Raassam, detailing the result of his inquiries in passing through Asia Minor. The Letter is dated Angora (the ancient Ancyra), December 24th, 1838.

A letter was read from the Right Rev. Bishop Walker, stating that Bishop Russell had kindly consented to represent him on Wednesday, April 17th, and lay the first stone of the Episcopal Chapel in Alloa, the trustees having made their final arrangements for building. The Bishop thankfully acknowledges the sum of 100*l.* granted by the SOCIETY towards this good work.

A petition was read from the Rev. Charles Pressly, Minister, and from the managers of the Chapel at Fraserburgh, in the diocese of Aberdeen, in behalf of the Episcopal congregation at that place. From their statement it appeared that in the year 1746 the old place of worship belonging to the Episcopalians at Fraserburgh, was burnt to the ground by order of government: that after assembling for several years successively in the upper room of a dwelling-house, the congregation had the present Chapel erected for their use, by subscription, in the year 1792; but that this building, owing to its dilapidated state, and inadequate size, requires much alteration and improvement: that the estimated cost of these will exceed 500*l.*, while the Petitioners have no available fund at their disposal for the purpose. They therefore begged the assistance of the Board.

A letter, accompanying this petition, was read from the Right Rev. Bishop Skinner. The following extract, containing a tribute to the memory of the late Bishop Jolly, will be read with interest:—

"Under a deep sense of gratitude for the many recent instances of munificent kindness displayed by your venerable SOCIETY towards our humble Episcopal Church in Scotland, I feel not a little reluctant in again appealing to its pious liberality. But being from personal knowledge thoroughly satisfied of the accuracy of every statement in the prefixed petition from the respectable clergyman and managers of the Episcopal Chapel in Fraserburgh, within the diocese and county of Aberdeen, I cannot refuse my cordial sanction to their application, or decline earnestly to solicit for it the generous attention of your Board. And I feel somewhat more encouraged in making this appeal, from my being enabled to inform the SOCIETY, that the congregation which now solicits their benevolent assistance formed the pastoral charge, for nearly the last half century, of the justly venerated and much lamented Bishop Jolly, whose meek and humble piety, and no less profound learning, gained for his name a richly merited reputation far beyond the limits of that portion of Christ's Catholic and Apostolic Church, of which through a lengthened term of years he proved so distinguished an ornament. But besides the necessity, which is felt, and in their petition affirmed to exist, for improved and extended accommodation, the Episcopal congregation in Fraserburgh are most anxious to obtain the erection of a suitable edifice, as a lasting memorial of one who, by his piety and virtues, was not only endeared to them and to their families, but who was universally acknowledged by persons of every religious denomination to have eminently adorned the clerical and the Christian character. And they are of opinion, that no monument could be devised for that purpose more strictly congenial with all the feelings and inclinations of their late revered Bishop and pastor.

"I am confident that an intention so truly pious, affectionate, and every way becoming a congregation of Christian worshippers, will be generously responded to by the worthy Members of your Board."

The sum of 50*l.* was granted in aid of this object.

A letter was read from the trustees of the Church at Wynberg, Cape of Good Hope, soliciting a further grant towards the completion of the building. It appeared from this communication, that the trustees had incurred a personal liability for 500*l.*, hoping to have been indemnified by subscriptions in England and India. They acknowledge with thanks the SOCIETY's former donation of 200*l.*, and add: "Without this we believe the other subscriptions would not have been raised, nor the church erected. In the event of another grant being made, we shall make no further application to the SOCIETY for pecuniary aid. We feel much gratified in being enabled to state, that by a recent act of the legislative council of this colony an annual salary has been appropriated for the maintenance of a resident Clergyman in this place."

The Board agreed to grant the sum of 100*l.* on condition of the whole sum which is required in addition being first raised.

An application, forwarded by Lord Teignmouth, was made by Mr. G. Leith, of Helensburgh, Scotland, in behalf of the township of Binbrook, near Hamilton, Upper Canada. This district, in which Mr. Leith has settled, contains full 3000 souls, among whom great spiritual destitution exists. The distribution of Bibles, Common Prayer Books, and Tracts, would be attended with excellent results.

The Board agreed to grant Books amounting to 20*l.*

Sir Walter R. Farquhar, Bart., applied by letter in behalf of the Rev. F. L. Osler, who in June last was stationed by the Bishop of Montreal as Minister of the townships of Tecumseth and West Guillemburg, Upper Canada, the geographical extent of his charge being an area of 240 square miles. The labours of Mr. Osler, who is the first clergyman ever stationed in these townships, have been unwearied and abundant. He officiates in two churches seven miles apart, and in a school-room at a village where he is now building another church. He has also established six schools, which were in a flourishing condition until the late rebellious outbreaks occurred in the province. His wife instructs the girls in sewing. No clergyman being located for many miles around him, he occasionally visits three stations, distant ten, fifteen, and thirty-seven miles respectively. The present application was made to the Board for a supply of useful Books and Tracts for a Lending Library, which, in addition to other good objects, this indefatigable Clergyman has set on foot.

The Board agreed to grant Books to the amount of 25*l.*

A letter was read from the Rev. Dr. Hook, thanking the Board for the grant of Books, made at the last General Meeting, towards the Leeds Central Church of England Library, and requesting a further supply for three district libraries formed at York Road, St. James's, and St. Peter's Bank.

Books to the amount of 15*l.* were granted.

At this Meeting a large Bible and Common Prayer Book, and Books for the Communion Table, were granted for the use of a new church at Barrowford, in the Chapelry of Colne.

Similar Books were granted in behalf of the church of Horsley, near Chalford, Gloucestershire, which is being rebuilt by subscription.

Several other gratuitous Grants were made.

INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL.

THE friends of this SOCIETY will be glad to see by the Report which has just been published, that a large addition was made to its income during the past year. Forty-five new District Committees have been formed; and the receipts from subscriptions, donations, &c. (exclusive of collections made under sanction of the Queen's letter) have exceeded those of 1837 by more than 5000*l.* In consequence, however, of a large extension of the SOCIETY's operations, its expenditure has more than kept pace with its income. The effort commenced in 1837 to supply the grievous spiritual destitution of Australia has been continued during 1838, and twelve additional clergymen have been sent out to assist in building up the Church of Christ in that immense continent. Others have since been appointed, and are now on their voyage out: one of them, the Rev. John Morse, M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford, sailed on the first of May, on board the Lady Raffles.

"It is impossible to conceive, without witnessing it, the crying need which exists for a supply of religious teachers, who, at the same time that they would set forth Christ crucified with all the earnestness of men who appreciate the Gospel from their own experimental knowledge of its blessings, would exercise the legitimate influence of a learned, a loyal, and a regularly constituted body, connected with the great national institutions of the parent state."

UPPER CANADA.

Extracts from an Official Report of the Bishop of Montreal to Lord Durham, dated 20th Nov. 1838.

"In travelling from the town of London to Goderich I passed through a tract of country sixty miles in length, in which there is not one clergyman or minister of any denomination. I believe I am safe in saying that the great majority of the inhabitants, among whom are comprehended the Land Company's settlers, are of the Church of England, and the services of some of our missionaries, who have partially visited this tract of country, have been thankfully received by those who pass under other names. Between Wodehouse, upon Lake Erie, and St. Thomas, a distance of upwards of fifty miles, which may be travelled by two different roads, there is not one clergyman upon either. From the reports made to me by one of our travelling missionaries, and by a solitary catechist stationed at Port Burwell, I know that there is a great body of Church people scattered through this part of the country. In the whole of the newly-erected district of Wellington, which is everywhere scattered over with a Church population, there is only one clergyman of the Church. In the district of Newcastle there are six. I have good reason to know, that if ten more could be immediately added, there would be full employment for them, with regular congregations.

"Up to this period, although not a few people have been lost to the Church from the want of her ministrations, and a far more extensive defection must inevitably follow if things are left much longer upon their present footing, yet very generally the privations which have been experienced in this respect have served to teach our congregations the full value of those privileges which are enjoyed at home. The importunate solicitations which I constantly receive from different quarters of the province for the supply of clerical services; the overflowing warmth of feeling with which the travelling missionaries of the Church are greeted in their visits to the destitute settlements; the marks of affection and respect towards my own office which I experience throughout the province; the exertions made by the people in a great number of instances to erect churches, even without any definite prospect of a minister, and the examples in which this has been done by individuals at their own private expense; the rapidly-increasing circulation of the religious newspaper which is called "The Church;" these are altogether unequivocal and striking evidences of the attachment to Church principles which pervades a great body of the population.

"I cannot forbear, my Lord, from introducing some mention of this Report of the labours of our clergy among the native Indians. There are two clergymen stationed among the six nations on the Grand River; one at the Mohawk village, and the other at Tuscarra. A missionary has been sent to the Manitoulin Islands, and another to the Sault St. Marie, at the upper extremity of Lake Huron. These four are engaged exclusively in the charge of Indians. There are two other clergymen who combine this charge with that of congregations of whites; one in the Bay of Quinte, where a branch of the Mohawk tribe is established, and one who resides in Carleton Place, and devotes part of his time to the Mounsees and Bear Creek Chippawas in his neighbourhood. I have never seen more orderly, and to all appearance, devout worshippers, than among some of these Indian congregations which I visited; and I have the fullest reason to believe, that the ministrations of the clergy among them has been attended with very happy effects.

"A great and promising field is here open to Christian philanthropy. A long debt is due to the Indians from the inhabitants of European descent, and it is by measures such as those which I have just stated that reparation must be made. They have been uniformly loyal. The Mohawks preserve to this day, with much veneration, a set of communion plate, and other appendages of divine worship, which were given them by Queen Anne, when they were seated in the colonies which now form part of the United States of America."

Extract from a letter of the Bishop of Montreal to Sir George Arthur, 20th Nov., 1838.

"My own opportunities of observation have been sufficiently extensive in my journey through the province, and my conclusions have been formed upon grounds strong to afford room for my suspecting myself prejudiced, when I state my deliberate belief in the retention of the province as a portion of the British empire depends more upon the means to provide and perpetuate a sufficient establishment of pious and well-qualified clergymen of the church, than upon any other measure whatever with the power of the Government; and I fervently hope that your Excellency's administration may be distinguished by some permanent and satisfactory statement of the long-protracted questions relative to the clergy reserves."

OFFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

The General Clerical Society "appointed to consider that means of making known throughout the country the objects and claims of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL," have lately published a very interesting report, in which they strongly recommend the general adoption of a plan of parochial sermons, at regular intervals, which has been found eminently successful in the dioceses of Framland and East Goscote, Leicestershire.

The following is a brief outline of the plan:—The parishes of the district are divided into three classes; in the first class have a sermon every year, in the second every other year, and those in the third class every fourth year. This classification has been adopted, in order that the sermon may recur frequently in those parishes where, from the great population or local circumstances, a more numerous attendance and larger contributions may be expected. At the first institution of the plan, thirty of the district were invited to join in it, as in which of the three classes they wished their respective parishes to be placed. A committee annually appointed, at the November meeting, consisting of the district secretary, and all the clergymen whose churches sermons are to be preached the ensuing year; and it is the business of this committee to nominate preachers, and arrange days for the sermons in the several churches, and to provide for the issuing of previous notices.

Not omit to mention, that the committee within this plan originated, recommended that the sermons should, where practicable, be preached in the evenings of week-days, early in the summer, not only with a view to the convenience of the preacher, but in anticipation of the benefit, which would result from the meeting of the neighbouring clergy, on these occasions, at each other's churches. An anticipation which appears to have been fully realized.

The success of the plan here spoken of, may be best appreciated by a comparative view of the sums remitted to London from the funds of the committee, in each of the last six years: the plan having been brought into operation in the year 1836.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

THE thirty-ninth annual meeting of this SOCIETY was held on Tuesday, the 30th ult. in the Great Room, Exeter Hall, which, long before the hour for commencing the proceedings, was crowded with a highly respectable assemblage of persons, the majority being ladies. On the platform were the Right Hon. Lord Mountsandsford, Lord Teignmouth, M.P., the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Chester, the Bishop of Ripon, the Bishop of Chichester, Rev. H. Raikes, Chancellor of Chester, J. P. Plumptre, Esq., M.P., H. Pownall, Esq., Sir George Rose, M.P., H. Hoare, Esq., &c.

THE EARL OF CHICHESTER, in opening the business, said, in looking back at the events of the past year, it is impossible not to feel that God has done great things for his Church in this our land, and if so, that that Church has incurred a proportionate debt of gratitude and love to our adorable Lord. Never, I feel convinced, during her history, has the Church of England been placed in so strong, and therefore so responsible a position as she holds at the present moment; never has she had such a hold on the affections of the people, never has she been blessed with such a number of faithful and zealous ministers, never have her appeals for aid in the extension of her operations at home been so cheerfully and liberally answered, as during the last two years.—(Applause.)—After having addressed the meeting at some length, his lordship called upon the Rev. W. Jowett, the Secretary, to read the Report, which related the operations of the SOCIETY in various parts of the world. The state of the funds was then detailed:—

"STATE OF THE FUNDS.

"The state of the SOCIETY's finances is such as to occasion the Committee serious anxiety.

"In pursuance of the course proposed in the last Report, the whole of the expenditure of the SOCIETY has been carefully revised by the Committee. The Committee have the satisfaction to state, that their investigation, which has been carried into the minutest details of expenditure, has led to the conclusion that, both at home and abroad, it is conducted with considerateness and economy. They trust, however, that their examination has led to some suggestions calculated still further to economise and advantageously regulate the expenditure.

"It will be found that the expenditure of the past year has very far exceeded its income. The income and expenditure stand as follows:—

Income	£71,306	19	8
Expenditure....	91,453	9	1

"It thus appears that the expenditure of the year has exceeded its income by no less a sum than 20,146*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*

"In order to explain more clearly the financial situation of the SOCIETY, an analysis of the receipts and disbursements of the year is necessary.

"The home expenditure is less than that of the preceding year. In 1837-8, it amounted, exclusive of building, repairs, painting, &c., at the institution, to 17,216*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* In 1838-9, the amount was 17,181*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* The excess, therefore, in the expenditure of the past year lies wholly in its foreign branch, the missions.

"The mission expenditure 1837-38, was 68,800*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* In 1838-39, 74,272*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.*, being an increase in the year of 5,471*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.*

"The income of the past year was 71,306*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* That of the preceding year, 82,701*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* The decrease of income during the year was, therefore, 11,394*l.* 12*s.*

"At the same time the missions' expenditure exceeded its estimated amount by 9,465*l.* 19*s.* The difference, 18,756*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.*, allowing for the expenditure of some of the missions falling short of the estimate, was provided for by sales of stock.

"The missions in which the most considerable increase of expenditure occurred last year, over the preceding one, are the following:—

West Africa	£2,170	6	4
New Zealand....	3,527	13	10
West Indies	4,943	16	6

£10,647 16 8

"The increase of expenditure in the West Africa Mission arose from the SOCIETY's having been compelled to take upon itself the erection of buildings for the residence of missionaries.

"In New Zealand, the excess is to be traced partly to the general enlargement of the mission, and still more to the destruction of property consequent on the late wars in the southern district.

"The very serious amount of expenditure in the West Indies has been occasioned by the solicitude of the Committee to render the agency of the SOCIETY as effective as possible in the great crisis of the transition from a state of slavery to a state of freedom. In pursuance of this design, no fewer than forty individuals, including females, went out from the SOCIETY to the West Indies within the last five years. The cost, too, of buildings, as well as the school-houses, aided by Parliamentary grants, as those for other purposes, has exceeded the estimated amount.

"The Committee have already stated that the income of the year has fallen short of that of the year before, 11,394*l.* 12*s.* The decrease occurs under the following heads:—

Benefactions (though 1837-8 included one of 3,000 l.)	£5,432	18	7
Legacies.....	3,551	9	5
Associations	3,348	8	1

£12,332 16 1

"The amount received from the Parliamentary grant this year was 1,000*l.* more than in 1837-38.

"The amounts from the first two heads, benefactions, and legacies, must always be variable and uncertain.

"With regard to association contributions, the Committee are persuaded that the above deficiency arises from incidental circumstances. Several large remittances, and others of a smaller amount, which in regular course belonged to the year 1838-9, did not reach the Committee until after the 31st of March, when the year's accounts were closed. These, in fact, amount to more than the sum deficient. The increased issue of publications for the use of collectors and contributors, and the collections after sermons and meetings, support the conclusion that the associations are in a healthy and progressive state.

"The facts relative to the SOCIETY's financial situation, which have been stated, impose on the Committee the duty of urging economy in every branch of its expenditure with increased earnestness. It will at the same time be their duty to watch with solicitude the state of the income, and the course of circumstances in the current year, so as to be prepared to take measures for contracting missionary operations in some quarter, should so painful an alternative be eventually forced upon them."

The Bishop of WINCHESTER proposed the first resolution, which was as follows:—"That the Report, of which an abstract has now been read, be received and printed under the direction of the Committee; and that, while the SOCIETY feels the serious difficulty of its present financial situation, it derives encouragement in its course from the many tokens which it has enjoyed in the past year of the Divine blessing resting on its proceedings."—The Right Rev. Prelate said, he confessed that, in addressing himself to that resolution upon the present occasion, he felt more than ordinary difficulty, in addition to all those difficulties which must press on the mind of any one who desired to speak with consideration on such subjects as were to be treated of that day, and in addition to the difficulty of addressing such an assembly as that he saw around him and before him, he could not but feel that the topics of the Report must press on the mind of every speaker in a way to well-nigh overwhelm and scatter his thoughts. He felt it his duty to recall the attention of the meeting from the varied view of missions which the pages of the Report had unfolded; and, though it was a somewhat ungrateful task, to ask them to abstract their thoughts from all those cheering topics which had been called up into their minds. The resolution pointed particularly to the financial state of the Society, and unpleasant as the task was to speak of money in connexion with the kingdom of Christ, and to call back their thoughts from reflections on Christ's kingdom, and the extension of his glory, he must still request their attention to those which were the sinews of earthly warfare, as they were the sinews of every warfare. But oh! let not the weapons of our warfare be in their spirit worldly or carnal, but even in this point spiritual! (Hear, hear.) The finances of the Society presented an unfavourable aspect. The excess of the expenditure over the income was more than 20,000*l*. An undue extension of missions was not the cause of the deficiency in the funds. But he believed the cause was that which mostly attended all Societies like this; the inherent tendency of all missionary efforts, as they proceed, to increase their own respective expenses. (Hear.) Then came the practical question, what was to be done? There were but two courses to be pursued: either they must raise the income up to the expenditure, or they must diminish the expenditure to meet the income. There was a word in the Report which seemed to intimate that such a feeling as the latter animated the minds of the Committee; that was the word "contraction," which grated heavily on his ear, as he trusted it did on the ears of all, and that it would give them a spirit to come forward and say, "No contraction! no diminution! but rather extension—enlarged efforts, more signal proofs of love, and greater devotion to the missionary cause!" He felt then that "contraction" was not a word that suited their cause. One point alone in the Report must have struck every mind. He had fancied from time to time that he was no longer within the walls of a Church Missionary Society. It seemed as if he were present at some Reformation Society, so often did the mention of Roman Catholic bishops and priests occur. (Hear.) At a time then like this, when popery is putting forth her energies, shall the operations of the Church Missionary Society be contracted? Is this a time for our Church to cease to send forth the beautiful feet of her own messengers of peace, in order that the feet of those who carry a far different message may the more easily invade the shores of heathen countries. With regard to the practical question, What is to be done? He would answer, in the first place, that he thought we wanted greater zeal for missions in our own hearts, to excite a deeper feeling of love for the cause of Christ in our families, in our parishes, in our respective occupations, in the secret recesses of our hearts, and in our intercourse with our fellow-men. If we endeavoured to cultivate this spirit, something more of Christian earnestness, of deep humility, of daily fervent prayer, we should not hear of an excess of 20,000*l*. over the income, but rather of an excess the other way, of our funds flowing in, of new missionaries extending the conquests of the kingdom of Christ, of success and triumph, and be enabled to thank God, and take courage. Then we want something more of unity. Satan divides to conquer. Let us take a lesson in this respect from the arch enemy of souls. Does he divide to destroy? Then let us unite to oppose him; for to unite is to be strong. Let love be paramount to all human selfishness; let every thing be made subservient to the honour of Christ and glory of God.

The Rev. F. CLOSE (of Cheltenham), in seconding the resolution, spoke at considerable length, and concluded by an eloquent appeal in favour of the charitable feelings of the meeting.

The Rev. H. RAIKES (Chancellor of the diocese of Chester) rose to move the second resolution:—"That the activity of the Church of Rome to extend its influence, especially in those countries wherein Protestant missions are carried on, calls for increased exertion, liberality, faith, and prayer on the part of members of our Protestant Church, to extend to the heathen that system of pure Scripture truth which is so fully embodied in her Articles, Liturgy, and Homilies." The Rev. Gentleman, in the course of his speech observed that, he hoped that whenever there was danger of Missionary Societies coming into competition, it would be remembered that the world was large—that the field of usefulness was most extensive—(hear)—and that whenever this association in particular might come into collision with any other, that its labourers would say, as was said to Lot, "If thou wilt go to the right hand, I will go to the left." (Hear.) But when it was not with missionaries from Protestant Societies that they came into collision, but with missionaries and emissaries from Rome, then he could only recommend a far different course, convinced that the line to be drawn between Protestants and Romanists was the line that separated light from darkness—the line that separated life from death.

The Rev. R. BURGESS (of Chelsea) came forward to second the resolution, and entered into details respecting the present increased exertions of the Roman Catholic Church; and concluded his remarks by making an energetic call upon the meeting to redouble their exertions in the cause of the Society, and "to hold no peace with Rome."

The Right Hon. Lord TEIGNMOUTH, M.P., proposed the next resolution, as follows:—"That the meeting regards with deep interest the present situation of the islands of New Zealand, both as it respects the natives and the mission; and earnestly hopes that her Majesty's Government may be induced to employ its own agency in devising and executing such measures for the correction of existing evils, as may at once secure the national rights to the natives, and promote their social and religious improvement." Notwithstanding the kindness which his friends had shown in placing that resolution in his hands, he felt that, as a layman, he was out of his place in speaking upon that occasion. He was confident that he could not do justice to that resolution; he had indeed, at first, felt doubts as to its propriety, for it seemed to touch upon political ground, and to refer to matters which were chiefly secular. But, upon examination, he found that it contained nothing more than such a declaration as might very naturally come from such a Society, under the very peculiar situation in which they were placed. He found that the resolution simply confined itself to a resolution which had been passed in the House of Lords, and which was the only official document which could with any propriety be referred to. When he looked at the peculiar situation of the inhabitants of New Zealand, amongst whom the missionaries of that Society had to labour, and when he thought of the danger which might result from associations, after having seen the mischiefs introduced by associations even in this country, he thought that the Society was bound, from a regard to the protection and security of its agents, to obtain all due protection, not only from its avowed enemies, but also from its mistaken friends. (Hear, hear.) He could not, however, but refer to the success which had followed the labours of their missionaries in New Zealand. It might have been said that you might as well attempt to tame and to yoke the wild beasts of the forest, as to bring the inhabitants of New Zealand into anything like a condition of order and civilization. But what had been done? Not only had civilization resulted from the labours of the missionaries, but good order, morality, and Christian conduct. (Hear.) He believed that the future historian, when he described upon his pages the condition of that country, would but record the results of the exertions of that Society; and while he conferred the palm on the patriot, and pointed with exultation to the monuments of valour, and to the triumphs of art with which he found himself surrounded, he would also refer to the tombs of the Christian missionaries who had laboured in the island, and be led into holy musings as he thought of a Marsden and others who laid the foundations of those noble edifices, sacred to religion, whose spires he saw towering above the trees of his native forests. (Cheers.) His Lordship concluded by an expression of his attachment to the Society, and his willingness to lend his humble effort to advance its best interests. (Cheers.)

J. P. PLUMPTRE, Esq., M.P., seconded the resolution. "The resolution," he said, "expressed the deep interest felt by the meeting in regard to the present condition of the island of New Zealand. That island might be regarded with interest on several accounts. The idea of sending missions to New Zealand was once regarded as an utopian scheme. It was said, 'Attempt to erect your standard in New Zealand, and your standard will be rejected, and your standard-bearer evoured.' But what was the result? The Gospels found to be there, as elsewhere, when it is duly received, the power of God unto salvation. (Cheers.) The most civilized and the most polished amongst mankind, if they knew not the Gospel to be thus powerful to save, had heard it altogether in vain; and the most benighted, and the most barbarous, hearing it aright, had found it mighty, through God, to the pulling down of strongholds."

Lord MOUNTSANDFORD introduced the following (the fourth) resolution, in a few appropriate words:—"That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Rev. John Norman Pearson, for a sermon before the Society last evening: to the Right Hon. the President; to the Vice-Patrons and Vice-Presidents; and to all those friends, who, during the past year have exerted themselves in its behalf; and that the following gentlemen be appointed a Committee for the year ensuing, with power to fill up vacancies; and that, considering the present financial situation of the Society, the meeting earnestly calls upon all its members, for such increased exertions in their several spheres as may, through their blessing, place the Society in a situation successfully to prosecute those important plans of usefulness, in which it is so hopefully engaged."

This resolution was seconded by the Rev. E. BICKERSTETH. In the course of his speech, he observed with reference to the funds, there have been large calls on the pecuniary resources of our best friends. Now, take London, 1800*l*. has been raised for building churches. Bhs God! We thank God for it, and take courage. But when I look at the associations, I find in every part of the kingdom similar efforts. And shall we be sorry? No! we will thank God, and take courage. But more immediately as to the subscriptions for missionary exertions. We have not got, in the country, that, during the last year we had the Queen's letter, and the collections for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, amounting to 50,000*l*. throughout the country, and shall we be sorry then? No! We will thank God, and take courage! I for my part do most heartily rejoice in the success of the Propagation Society, that it is enlarging its sphere, that it is increasing its missionary efforts, that it is coming forth in a noble simplicity of faith and love to spread the Gospel in times of difficulty where it never spread before. May we rejoice yet more fully! But, while we rejoice, let us not be surprised if our own funds have fallen back: Christians do not advance at once. The friends of missionary efforts have given far more to missionary objects in the last year than ever before in their lives. Well, then, we bless God for what has been done; and we have hopes that when your faith is increased, we shall be enlarged more and more.

The meeting concluded with singing the 117th Psalm.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

EVENING MEETING.

A FURTHER meeting was held in the same place in the evening, when the chair was occupied by the Most Noble the Marquis of Cholmondeley.

The meeting was addressed by the Rev. T. Vores, Rev. Charles Hodgson, Rev. J. Johnson, H. and Rev. Baptist Noel, and Rev. C. F. Childs.

CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY.

On Tuesday, May 7th, the anniversary meeting of the above society was held in the large room, Exeter Hall, the Right Hon. Lord Ashley, M.P., in the Chair. On the platform we observed the Earls of Winchilsea and Harrowby, the Bishops of Winchester, Chester, Ripon, Norwich, and Chichester, Chancellor Raikes, the Hon. W. Ashley, Colonel Conolly, M.P., Mr. J. P. Plumptre, M.P., Mr. J. Hardy, Mr. H. Pownall, Revs. Sir W. Dundas, Bart., R. Burgess, T. Dale, J. Hambleton, E. Tottenham, — Hulbert, — Hill, and a numerous body of clergy.

The meeting having been opened with prayer,

The Noble CHAIRMAN rose and said, it was a matter of very sincere congratulation to them, and he must say of the country at large, but above all, it was a matter of the most heartfelt thankfulness to Almighty God, that that society, from the hour it was first instituted, had never receded in public opinion, but had gone on from day to day, and year to year, with additional usefulness and additional estimation. Although the meeting he saw before him was not so large as the last year's, it was to be explained by the circumstance that there was another meeting of great interest being held, which carried away many of those who would otherwise have been present; yet let not the scantiness of their numbers damp their energies or decrease their exertions. Although he (Lord Ashley) had the honour of being the president of the society, he might yet speak in praise of its exertions, though he could not claim to himself any merit or share in its labours. He might say that the society had worked almost absolute marvels; it had been the means of carrying the word of God to thousands, and he might say millions, of those who had never heard of the word of God before it had brought back to the fold many a stray sheep, many of those who never entered that fold before. Although their exertions had been great, yet if they would advance still further, if they wished not to continue where they were, their exertions must be doubled and almost infinitely multiplied. There was much rich, yet uncultivated ground which remained to be broken, and large and spiritual possessions which they had gained, and which must be maintained. Not only was there a great demand for private resources, but there was now a new enemy brought into the field, and the private resources of individuals must be brought into contact with the state, and unless their exertions and generosity increased, they must be prepared to see the juvenile portion of the people of these realms transferred from their faithful pastors and teachers to the hands of Papists and Socinians, and to that class of men most useful in the utilitarian catalogue who altered the words of St. Paul, who took care to be every thing to all men, but nothing before God. Now, was it not a shame that they who enjoyed the blessings of reformed religion, and boasted themselves to be Protestants — was it not a shame that they should see before them on the right hand and on the left, and wherever they turned their eyes and opened their ears, the mighty progress that was made by the dread adversary and antagonist of their faith? They had read that a cathedral was to be built in the metropolis rivaling in splendour the temple of Solomon; and was it nothing that the pious Papist bequeathed enormous sums of money for the advancement of their faith, and yet they (the meeting), aving truth on their side, a body of efficient and faithful clergymen of the established Church, did not contribute one-tenth part of that sum, which, if contributed, would work fifty-fold, and stigmatize all that error was able to perform? He must gain appeal to them, because he must say that during the whole of his experience in public life he had never known times of such danger, or that they had stood in such an emergency as at present. The enemy might be less violent, but truly more insidious; he now clothed himself in the garb of religion, then made mockery of decent and religious aims, which would prevail over all their energies try their sagacity, test their principles, and see whether they were what they professed to be, truly Scriptural Protestants, standing on that grand plan of truth, which was the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible. (Cheers.) He had no scruples in appealing to them, because if there were a silent disposition, there was a zealous and faithful heart. Every person might do something; those that were wealthy might give of their abundance; the young, their time and their exertions; and those that were poor, the best of all — their best wishes and prayers. They had now arrived at a time which if they allowed to pass over, the opportunity might not occur again; they were really come to a crisis when the Church and State were in danger, when there were evident manifestations of assaults directed against them and the Church, and if that did not stimulate, nay, almost animate them with pleasure to the conflict, then he must say that those who professed the truth, but who were stingy in practising it, would experience the second fulfilment of the curse that fell on the old inhabitants of Meroz, who were accused most bitterly, yet justly, because the mammon of the state directed itself against the spirit of the Church, "and came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." The noble lord sat down amid general cheering.

The SECRETARY then read the report; after which.

The Bishop of CHESTER rose to propose the first resolution, — "That the Report be printed, &c." He should be more ungrateful than he ever wished to show himself had he not responded to the call of those who conducted the society, and indeed he would have rising against him at least forty of his clergy who had themselves been benefited by the Church Pastoral Aid Society in their highest concerns and interests, if he did not bear testimony to the truths so ably, and yet so truly, described in the report, and which he trusted would change the face of their youth. Indeed, they might wonder such a state of things as therein described existed in a country which was supposed to be under the superintendence of Christian ministers. The right rev. prelate concluded by moving the resolution.

The Earl of WINCHILSEA rose to address a few observations on the resolution proposed by the preceding speaker. He felt much gratification in having an opportunity of coming forward to give his strenuous and heartfelt support to a society which would bring so much comfort and happiness to so great a body of their countrymen. The Report, indeed, presented a painful picture, and one which must come home to the hearts of every individual. Was it not deplorable that they, living in the nineteenth century, in a country possessing so many Christian privileges, so great a mass of their fellow-countrymen were sitting in darkness who were anxious to enjoy those privileges? (Cheers.) There was no duty of such importance as that which called on them to give to those who were living under their government that religion which our Saviour came on earth to proclaim. (Loud Cheers.) He rejoiced that that society, in conjunction with another society, would extend a full and sound religious education connected with the religious principles of our truly apostolic Church to mankind in general. (The noble earl was loudly cheered on resuming his seat.)

The Bishop of RIPON seconded the resolution. He could assure them of the deep interest he took in all their proceedings, and concurred in the sentiment expressed in the resolution, which commenced by offering praise and thanksgiving to "Him from whom all blessings flow." It was true that prosperity was not the test of principle: but when they entered on their undertaking in the faith and fear of God, — when they committed their labours to His keeping in the spirit of prayer and humble dependence on His mercy, and when they saw those efforts crowned with success, it would not only be presumption not to ascribe them to their true source, but it would be impiety not to acknowledge it. (Cheers.)

The Bishop of WINCHESTER then rose to propose the next resolution, and briefly bore his testimony to the usefulness of the society in many respects, which he eloquently detailed; after which,

The Bishop of LLANDAFF, the Bishop of CHESTER, the Rev. E. TOTTENHAM, &c., addressed the meeting upon the resolutions intrusted to them in a similar strain to those of the preceding speakers.

Thanks were then voted to the noble chairman, and the meeting adjourned.

PRAYER-BOOK AND HOMILY SOCIETY.

THE Twenty-seventh Annual Meeting of the Prayer-book and Homily Society was held on Thursday, May 2, in the Lower Room, Exeter Hall, the Right Hon. Lord Bexley, President of the Society, in the chair. Prayers, selected from the Liturgy, having been most impressively read by the Rev. Mr. Dolman.

The CHAIRMAN opened the business of the day.

The Rev. Mr. DOLMAN then read the Report, from which it appeared that during the past year, viz. from the 1st of April, 1838, to the 31st of March, 1839, there had been 3650 ships and vessels visited in the London river; that 943 commanders had been spoken with, of whom 725 entirely neglected the duty of prayer on the Sabbath at sea. That 1790 books of Common Prayer and 200 Formularies had been distributed; fifteen books of selections in the French, German, and Spanish languages, had been purchased by sailors, at reduced prices; and 696 copies had been distributed gratuitously to the ships visited. In addition to this, supplies had been made to the Buckinghamshire and other emigrant ships. The Report further stated, that the difficulties which had presented themselves in the way of the Society had comparatively been few, and the principal difficulty which of late had presented itself, had arisen from the manner in which the Society's agent had been laughed to scorn and exposed to the grossest insults by the Roman Catholics in Ireland. The Report then went on to state, that the Branch Associations of the Society were in a flourishing and healthy state, and that many new branches had sprung up during the past year. From Ireland the applications for assistance were most numerous, and the Committee regretted that, for want of funds, they were unable to respond to all. An interesting letter from the Bishop of Calcutta, set forth the thanks of that Most Reverend Prelate for the receipt of two boxes, containing the publications of the Society, which had been distributed, and received with avidity in his diocese. The letter stated the interesting fact, that no less than thirty churches were then in progress of building in the parts of India over which he had spiritual control. Equally favourable accounts had been received from the Society's agents at Penang, Adelaide, Buenos Ayres, Pernambuco, Carthage, and from British North America. The new publications in progress by the Society were announced to be the form of the Consecration of Churches in the dioceses of London and Winchester; the Baptismal Service, in the form of a tract, for the use of sponsors; the English Liturgy, in the Portuguese language, from a copy published at Oxford, in the year 1695; Jewell's Apology; the Coronation Service, of which 23,000 had been disposed of; and the Family Prayer-book, of which three editions had been exhausted. The Committee stated, that they had yet, from want of funds, been unable to publish the Homilies in the Hebrew language, and to avail themselves of a copy of the Prayer in raised characters for the use of the blind, which had been presented to them by Mr. Alston, the treasurer of the Glasgow Blind Asylum. Both these important works were, however, in the Society's list for publication. The grand total of the issue of books by the Society was 365,972 copies, besides 2,226,337 tracts. The total revenue for the past year was audited at 2532*l.* 1*l.* 6*d.*, and the expenditure at 2588*l.* 1*l.* 3*d.*; leaving a balance due to the Treasurer, and it was also stated, that there were debts due last Christmas to tradesmen to the amount of 2218*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*

The Meeting was addressed by the Rev. T. Pyne of New York, Captain F. V. Harcourt, Rev. E. Sidney, H. Goulburn, Esq., Rev. W. Marsh, Rev. A. S. Thelwall, Rev. L. C. S. Tunshawe, Rev. R. Newstead, Rev. J. Sabine of Vermont, U. S., and M. A. Pering.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.

On Saturday, April 27, a meeting of the proprietors of this institution was held in the theatre of the establishment, for the purpose of receiving the annual report of the council, and the despatch of other business.

Among the persons present were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Hereford, the Marquis of Bute, Lord Bexley, Mr. Alderman Thompson, M.P., Mr. Alderman Copeland, the Rev. Dr. D'Oyley, Dr. Shepherd, Mr. Watson, Mr. Connop, Mr. H. Pownall, the Rev. C. Benson, &c.

The Archbishop of Canterbury was in the chair. The Secretary read the report, which was as follows:—

Report from the Council to the Annual General Court of the Governors and Proprietors.

"The Council of King's College have the gratification of being enabled to announce to the General Court the continued and growing prosperity of the college.

"In every department during the last year the number of students has increased; their conduct has been generally marked by order and diligence; and their progress in the acquirement of sound and useful knowledge has been satisfactory to those who have been intrusted with the task of their education.

"In the report of last year the Council announced their intention of forming a School of Civil Engineering. The arrangements for this purpose were completed during the succeeding summer, and the class was opened in October. The success with which this measure has been attended has fully justified its adoption. At Christmas the number of civil engineering students was 19; it is at present 31.

"The number of regular students and pupils in the several departments, during the last term, was as follows:—

"Classical, mathematical, and civil engineering	151
"Medical	65
"Junior department or school.....	396

"To these must be added 137 occasional students, who attend particular courses of lectures; so that the entire number of students and pupils during the last term has been 749. In making this enumeration, care has been taken in this, as in former reports, that the name of no student or pupil shall be reckoned more than once.

"As the business of the college has increased, the Council have found it necessary, from time to time, to fit up additional rooms for the purposes of education; but, in so doing, they have been careful to observe all practicable economy. In the course of the last year a new class-room for the junior department has been opened, and another for that of civil engineering is in preparation. By the additions made, through the kindness of the friends of the institution, to the valuable collections in the Museum, more fittings in that part of the establishment have also become requisite. Among those additions may be mentioned a valuable collection of specimens in mineralogy, presented by Professor Daniell, and a collection of specimens of copper ores, by Mr. F. Grellet.

"Since the last report the Senate of the University of London have put forth their plans of examination for matriculation and degrees. At present only a few students of King's College have been admitted at this university; the greater part of those who are desirous of academical honours having preferred to enter their names at Oxford or Cambridge, where, as is well known, many of them have obtained considerable distinction.

"The attendance of the students at the services of the chapel, both daily and on Sundays, continues to be extremely regular; and the attention paid to the lectures in divinity has been most satisfactorily proved by the weekly examinations in that branch of education. The Council think it right to make this statement on the present occasion, in refutation of certain assertions which have recently been made in public, whether in ignorance or disregard of the facts, with respect to the religious instruction given in King's College.

"The Council have long felt the great importance of attaching to the medical school of the college a hospital, where the students might have the advantage of attending clinical lectures under their own professors. They have never lost sight of this object, and they have now the satisfaction of announcing to the general Court that circumstances have very lately occurred which open a prospect of procuring a suitable building for this purpose in the vicinity of the college. They are taking steps to avail themselves of this opportunity; and if they should succeed, they will at an early period bring the subject before the public, with the view to raising such a fund as will enable them to establish a hospital, and bring it into immediate operation. They cannot doubt that among the excellent friends of King's College, as well as among the public at large, numbers will promptly and liberally contribute their assistance towards the accomplishment of a design which combines material improvement in the medical education of the college with provision for the relief of the diseased and suffering poor in a quarter of the metropolis where it is so much needed.

"Upon the whole, the Council feel that they have great reason for thankfulness to the Giver of all good for the condition and prospects of King's College; and they assure the proprietors that no care or exertion will be wanting on their part to turn to the best account all the means of continuing and extending its usefulness which shall be placed in their hands. They regret, however, to state that they have been seriously impeded in their efforts for this purpose by the non-payment of the arrears still due from some of those noblemen and gentlemen who put down their names as donors and subscribers to King's College at its first institution, but who have hitherto declined or omitted to fulfil their engagements."

MR. CONNOP moved, and Mr. WRAY seconded, the adoption of the report, and the motion having been carried unanimously, the meeting proceeded to fill up the vacancies in the Council, and the appointment of officers for the ensuing year.

LORD BEXLEY then moved a vote of thanks to the most rev. prelate in the chair, and the Marquis of Bute having seconded the motion, it was carried unanimously.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY, in returning thanks, said that it gave him the highest possible satisfaction to find that this excellent institution was progressing steadily. He entertained no doubt whatever of its ultimate success, and he must say that the students who had been sent from it to the universities of Oxford and Cambridge were highly creditable to the establishment in which their education had been commenced.

MR. H. POWNALL moved, and Dr. GOLDING seconded, a vote of thanks to the Council for the efficient manner in which they had conducted the affairs of the institution.

The Bishop of LONDON, as Chairman of the Council, returned thanks, and said that it gave him sincere gratification to be able in any way to promote the success of this university, which he could not help thinking was a very great advantage to the metropolis. Although no interest had yet been paid on the shares, there could be no doubt of their being ultimately productive in a pecuniary point of view; but in the mean time the shareholders were entitled to an advantage in being able to enter students at a less expense than other parties, which he considered as an equivalent for interest. This was a circumstance which he believed was not generally known. He regretted to say that some noblemen and gentlemen who had promised to support the institution had not fulfilled their engagements; and all he could say to them was, that if there were such things as debts of honour, they were bound to redeem the pledges in this respect which they had given, and on the strength of which other parties had been induced to enter into contracts which they would not otherwise have undertaken. The right rev. prelate then pronounced a high encomium on the manner in which the establishment was conducted, and said that the general proficiency of the pupils in all branches of education, moral and religious, reflected the utmost credit on their masters.

The whole of the business having then been disposed of, the meeting separated.

LICHFIELD DIOCESAN BOARD OF EDUCATION.

A MEETING of the friends of religious education in connexion with the National Church, was held in the great room at the Lion Inn, in this town, on Thursday last, under the presidency of the Earl of Liverpool, for the purpose of forming an association for the archdeaconry of Salop, in aid of the society already established at Lichfield under the sanction of the Lord Bishop of the diocese. The assembly on this occasion was the most respectable, perhaps, that has ever been witnessed in the county of Salop, although, as was observed by Mr. Lloyd, in the course of the proceedings, it could only be taken as representing the feelings of one-third of the county, the county being in three dioceses. The ladies, as usual in every work of beneficence, formed a large portion of the meeting; and not only the great room, but the ante-room and even the galleries were filled. Among those present we observed,

The Earl of Liverpool; the Viscount Duncannon; the Hon. Thomas Kenyon; Sir Rowland Hill, Bart.; Sir Francis Hill; the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Lichfield; Venerable Archdeacon Bather; Rev. Dr. Kennedy; J. A. Lloyd, Esq.; E. W. Smythe Owen, Esq.; Thomas Eytton, Esq.; Colonel Wingfield; R. A. Slaney, Esq.; John Edwards, Esq.; Richard Corbet, Esq.; G. A. Moultrie, Esq.; Rice Wynne, Esq.; T. J. Bather, Esq.; John Butcher, Esq.; John Loxdale, Esq.; W. H. Bayley, Esq.; John Lee, Esq.; J. Phillips Esq.; W. R. Stokes, Esq.; John Panting, Esq.; Rev. John Hill; Rev. H. C. Cotton; Rev. T. D. Taylor; Rev. H. Burton; Rev. Waties Corbat; Rev. G. L. Wassey; Rev. W. Hopkins; Rev. J. O. Hopkins; Rev. G. L. Yate; Rev. Richard Cofield; Rev. R. L. Burton; Rev. R. H. Leake; Rev. J. A. Cotton; Rev. Richard Scott; Rev. J. H. Mauley; Rev. R. Hutchinson; Rev. J. Steward; Rev. W. Jones; Rev. J. Justice; Rev. W. M. Rowland; Rev. John Yardley; Rev. T. B. Lutener; Rev. C. P. Peters; Rev. J. Harding; Rev. W. G. Barker, &c. &c.

Letters had been received from the Mayor of Shrewsbury; Sir Richard Jenkin, G.C.B.; W. Ormsby Gore, Esq.; Pantton Corbet, Esq.; C. K. Mainwaring, Esq.; St. John C. Charlton, Esq.; and the Rev. C. M. Long; all of whom, though unavoidably absent, expressed their entire concurrence in the views under which the meeting had been convened.

The Earl of LIVERPOOL, in opening the proceedings of the day, read that part of the advertisement which respected the purpose of the meeting, and proceeded to say, that although opinions differed widely as to the extent to which the education of the lower classes ought to be carried no difference of opinion could exist that it should be grounded upon religion; that the Church of England was, therefore, bound to put forward all her strength, at a moment when the tide of public opinion was setting so strongly in favour of education, to take into her own hands, and, as it were, foster in her own bosom, all the efforts that were made by her members; that by the Church of England was not meant the ministers of the Church only, but all those persons who, having been educated in her principles, adhered to them. That the purpose of the meeting was to connect this archdeaconry with the Diocesan Education Board; that at Lichfield a normal school would be formed, as a means of instructing and forming masters, and that the whole would be eventually so arranged that the schools which conformed might be visited by their resident clergy and notice taken by the rural deans and archdeacons, so that a more accurate knowledge might be forced in each district, both of the existing means of education and what might be required. That hitherto the greatest attention of the public had been drawn to the two extremes; to the great and splendid foundations at which the upper classes were mostly educated, and the national and other charity schools at which the lower classes were instructed; that it was now intended to fill up the chasm by forming establishments connected with the Church of England, at which the middle classes might be educated; that this was to be done either by conciliating those establishments which at present existed, or by forming new ones; that no restraint would be imposed that could in any way injure the prosperity of those which existed; but, on the contrary, it was thought that the countenance they would receive would be of essential service to them. That this part of the subject was one to which he (Lord Liverpool) wished to draw their particular attention, as it was on the education of this valuable class of persons (the middle classes) that our prosperity must mainly depend. Having thus generally explained his own views, he should proceed to call upon Archdeacon Bather to move the first resolution; but, before he did this, he could not help saying how fortunate he considered the archdeaconry in being conducted by a person who, to every other qualification of his profession, had added a long, zealous, and assiduous attention to the very subject that the meeting was then about to entertain.

Archdeacon BATHER then addressed the meeting in a very able speech.

The meeting was afterwards addressed by the Hon. Thomas Kenyon; the Dean of Lichfield; Viscount Dungannon; Rev. Dr. Kennedy; R. A. Slaney, Esq.; J. A. Lloyd, Esq.; Sir Rowland Hill, Bart.; T. Eyton, Esq.; W. E. Smythe Owen, Esq.

The addresses of the various speakers elicited the warmest testimonials of the approbation of their auditors; and at the termination of the proceedings a subscription in aid of the objects proposed was commenced.—From the Salopian Journal.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

THE Committee of the Lay Union have now to present to their members and correspondents, the "Scheme" of National Education just laid before Parliament by the Committee of Privy Council appointed on the 11th ultimo, and for which a grant of money will be shortly asked from the House of Commons.

Extract from the Minutes of the Committee of Council appointed to superintend the Application of any Sums voted by Parliament, for the purpose of promoting Public Education.

APRIL 13, 1839.

Read, The following scheme for the future guidance of the Committee, viz.:—

"To found a school, in which candidates for the office of teacher in schools for the poorer classes may acquire the knowledge necessary to the exercise of their future profession, and may be practised in the most approved methods of religious and moral training and instruction.

"This school to include a model school, in which children of all ages, from three to fourteen, may be taught and trained, in sufficient numbers to form an infant school, as well as schools for children above seven.

"Religious instruction to be considered as general and special.

"Religion to be combined with the whole matter of instruction, and to regulate the entire system of discipline.

"Periods to be set apart for such peculiar doctrinal instruction as may be required for the religious training of the children.

"To appoint a chaplain to conduct the religious instruction of children whose parents or guardians belong to the Established Church.

"The parent or natural guardian of any other child to be permitted to secure the attendance of the licensed minister of his own persuasion, at the period appointed for special religious instruction, in order to give such instruction apart.

"To appoint a licensed minister to give such special religious instruction wherever the number of children in attendance on the model school belonging to any religious body dissenting from the Established Church, is such as to appear to this Committee to require such special provision.

"A portion of every day to be devoted to the reading of the Scriptures in the school, under the general direction of the committee, and superintendence of the rector. Roman Catholics, if their parents or guardians require it, to read their own version of the Scriptures, either at the time fixed for reading the Scriptures, or at the hours of special instruction.

"To arrange the classes in separate rooms or sections of the same apartment, divided by partitions, so as to enable the simultaneous method to be applied to 40 or 50 children of similar proficiency.

"To adopt means to assemble a greater number of children for simultaneous instruction on subjects not so technical as to require a division into classes of 50.

"To include instruction in industry as a special department of the moral training of the children.

"To give such a character to the matter of instruction in the school, as to keep it in close relation with the condition of workmen and servants.

"Besides the physical training of the children in various employments, to introduce such exercises during the hours of recreation as will develop their strength and activity.

"To render the moral training of the children at all times an object of special solicitude.

"NORMAL SCHOOL.

"To provide apartments for the residence of the candidate teachers.

"To construct the class-rooms so as to afford the candidate teachers an opportunity of attending each class in the model school without distracting the attention of the children or of the teacher.

"To provide means for the instruction of the candidate teachers in the theory of their art, and for furnishing them with whatever knowledge is necessary for success in it.

"To appoint a rector to give lectures on the method and matter of instruction, and on the whole art of training children of the poor. To regulate the reading and exercises of the candidate teachers, and to examine them. To determine the order in which they may be admitted to the practice of their art in the school, and at length intrusted with the conjoint management of classes, and to superintend their ultimate examination, subject to the rules of this committee.

"The religious instruction of the candidate teachers to form an essential and prominent element of their studies, and no certificate to be granted unless the authorized religious teacher have previously attested his confidence in the character, religious knowledge, and zeal of the candidate whose religious instruction he has superintended.

"The religious instruction of all candidate teachers connected with the Established Church to be committed to the chaplain, and the special religious instruction to be committed (in any case in which a wish to that effect is expressed), to the licensed minister of the religious persuasion of the candidate teacher, who is to attend the school at stated periods, to assist and examine the candidate teachers in their reading on religious subjects, and to afford them spiritual advice.

"The candidate teachers in all other respects to conform to such regulations as respects the entire internal economy of the household as may be issued by the rector, with the approval of this committee.

"To provide accommodation in the model school for at least 450 children, who should lodge in the household, viz., 120 infants, 200 boys and girls receiving ordinary instruction, and 50 boys and 50 girls receiving superior instruction, and 30 children probably absent from sickness or other causes.

"To establish a day school of 150 or 200 children of all ages and both sexes, in which the candidate teachers may realize the application of the best methods of instruction, under the limitations and obstructions which must arise in a small village or town day school.

"GRANTS TO SOCIETIES.

"A grant not exceeding 2,500*l.* to be made to the National Society, and the British and Foreign School Society, for the establishment of their Normal Schools, but no further grant to be made.

"SECRETARY AND INSPECTORS.

"To appoint a Secretary.

"To appoint inspectors, not exceeding at first two in number, to carry on an inspection of schools which have been or may be hereafter aided by grants of public money, and to convey to conductors and teachers of private schools in different parts of the country a knowledge of all improvements in the art of teaching, and likewise to report to this committee the progress made in education from year to year.

"GRATUITIES TO TEACHERS.

"To grant gratuities to such teachers as may appear to deserve encouragement.

"GRANTS FOR BUILDING SCHOOLS.

"Not to adhere invariably to the rule which confines grants to the National Society and the British and Foreign School Society, and not to give the preference in all cases whatever to the school to which the largest proportion is subscribed.

"To advance in no case more than one-half of the expense of building a school.

"To expend in grants for the building of schools not more in any one year than 10,000*l.*"

Resolved, That, subject to such alterations as experience may hereafter suggest, the foregoing scheme be approved.

It will be seen from the above scheme, that already, at the very outset of the committee's labours, the views and opinions expressed by Lord John Russell, in his speech of the 12th of February, are, in the most important point, departed from. It was then stated by his Lordship, as his deliberate conviction, as appears by the journals of the day, that "a plan of combined union in education was an impossibility."

Now, however, the view of the Government is wholly altered, and this "combined union in education" is to be seriously attempted. The attempt, however, can only be successful at the sacrifice of everything which makes education really valuable, or entitles it to the support of the legislature. Let us consider, how the scheme is proposed to be carried out.

Religion, in name, is put in the very front of the new plan. But this is a mere delusion; for we immediately find, that "peculiar doctrinal instruction" is only to be given at "periods to be set apart," and is then to be given by such ministers, besides the chaplain, as shall be agreed to or chosen by the scholars or their parents! The "general religion," so called, which is to be "combined with the whole matter of instruction," is to be a religion having no "peculiar doctrines;" a religion, in short, to which neither Jew, nor Socinian, nor Romanist, nor infidel, could object! No argument can be needed to show, that a "religion" of this kind must be utterly useless and nugatory; and that, in short, the introduction of the term can have no other effect than to delude and deceive.

But if this first proviso be nothing more than a vain pretence, the next is something far worse. We now come to the "special religious instruction,"—to the "peculiar doctrinal instruction."

A chaplain is to be appointed for such children as belong to the Church of England. But every other child may be visited by the licensed minister of his own persuasion; and where such children are sufficiently numerous, such licensed minister is to receive a permanent appointment in the school. Thus, in the first, or model school at present projected, with 450 children, there would probably be, besides the chaplain, a Romish priest, a Socinian minister, a Jewish Rabbi, a Baptist or other Dissenting minister, as permanent religious teachers; and, in addition to these, as many other "licensed ministers," of every variety of sect and belief, as the parents of any of the children might choose to introduce. There is nothing whatever to prevent the introduction of any number of such teachers at one and the same time. But whether anything deserving the name of "religious instruction" could be carried on amid such confusion as this, is a question which every man's common sense will answer in the negative.

The next proviso is, if possible, still more alarming. The Scriptures are to be read daily in the school, but Roman Catholic children are to be allowed to use their own version. Of course it would be impossible to deny to the Socinians the use of theirs.

Thus, then, with perhaps eight or ten different teachers of religion, distracting the school weekly, there would also be the daily use of three different books, each professing to be the word of God! And different, also, be it remembered, not in a few words merely, but in whole chapters, and whole books: fundamentally different, too, both in the doctrines they contain, and in the precepts they inculcate. Nothing can be clearer, than that the inevitable effect of the establishment of such a system as this throughout the country, would be to spread widely amongst the humbler classes, the fatal belief, that no certainty whatever exists with regard to religion; and that the truth is altogether undiscoverable, amidst such endless contradictions.

Lastly, over the whole school an officer called a "rector" is to be appointed; who is to "regulate," to "determine," and to "superintend" the entire establishment. But not one syllable is said as to the religious character and qualifications of this individual; who, while the general character of the school must mainly depend upon him, may be a Socinian, a Romanist, or even a disguised infidel.

Such is the sort of scheme which is now offered to the attention of Parliament and of the country. A scheme which would afford ample evidence, if that were wanting, of the unfitness and impropriety of the whole proceeding. Without any previous appeal to Parliament, without any reference to the heads of the National Church, a board of five laymen is formed, which board undertakes, at three days' notice, to do what Lord John Russell had in February last announced to be "impossible," namely, to devise a plan for the combined education of all classes of believers and disbelievers; and that, too, professedly on the basis of religion itself.

But the country will assuredly protest against the adoption of this most anomalous and dangerous scheme. It will not permit the name of religion to be prostituted to such purposes, or the youth of the country to be exposed, by an early familiarity with all the varieties of mingled sectarianism, to the obvious danger of ultimate scepticism and infidelity. Nor will it view, without the greatest alarm, the proposed establishment of a body of Romish and Socinian teachers, to be paid by the Government, as "licensed instructors" of youth, in a country which has hitherto been distinguished for its Scriptural Church and its Protestant Constitution.

Nor must it be said, that in giving the present scheme our most strenuous opposition, we are exhibiting any dislike to the progress of education. The Church of England, which instructs within her own schools, at this moment, more than a million of poor children, is not to be reproached with a negligence or disregard of this duty. Nor has she exhibited anything of a narrow or exclusive spirit in this matter. For six years past, an annual grant has been made by Parliament, in aid of the erection of schools; and that grant has been shared impartially by Churchmen and Dissenters, in proportion to the sums raised by the voluntary efforts of each; and never has the Church complained of the aid thus given to those who are not within her pale. Yet this grant is now to be reduced one-half, apparently with a view to its discontinuance, when the rival schools proposed to be constructed according to the new scheme, shall be prepared to supersede the existing institutions. Other changes for the worse are also announced. In future it is proposed,

"Not to adhere invariably to the rule which confines grants to the National Society, and the British and Foreign School Society, and not to give the preference in all cases whatever to the school to which the largest proportion is subscribed."

According to the rule heretofore observed by the treasury, the Parliamentary grant was distributed through the channels afforded by the National Society, and the British and Foreign School Society; and the money was given in proportion to the sums voluntarily subscribed. Now, however, both these salutary guarantees are withdrawn, without any reason being assigned, and a power of disposing of the money upon undefined and arbitrary conditions is substituted. Thus, in every way, a disposition is manifested, to withdraw the support of the Government from the efforts of the Church, and even from that education which, as in the British and Foreign School Society, is merely scriptural; and to establish in the room of both, a plan which wholly disregards the constitutional principle of the union of Church and State, and deals with religious truth as a thing uncertain and undefinable. The scheme now promulgated is wholly irreconcilable with the doctrine of a National Church, and tends to dissolve the connexion which has hitherto existed between Christianity and the State. With these convictions, the committee of the Lay Union have framed the following petition, which they recommend to the general adoption of the friends of the Church throughout the empire.

By order of the Committee,
SAMUEL MILLS, Secretary.

TO THE HONOURABLE THE COMMONS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

The Petition of the undersigned Inhabitants of the Parish of —, in the County of —.

Humbly Sheweth,

That your petitioners have seen with the greatest surprise and alarm, a scheme of education recently laid before Parliament, as approved by the Committee of Privy Council, and proposed to be carried into effect.

That your petitioners are of opinion that the said scheme violates the first principles of our National Church and Protestant Constitution, inasmuch as it sets aside the proper functions of the parochial clergy; contemplates the employment by the state of Romish and Socinian teachers, and recognizes corrupted copies of the Holy Scriptures, as of equal authority with the authorized version.

That your petitioners also believe that the endeavour to instruct the children of the poorer classes according to every variety of religious belief or opinion, can only lead to universal disbelief and scepticism.

That your petitioners also regard, with the greatest apprehension, the attempt to place the whole education of the poor in the hands of a board, consisting wholly of official laymen, and from which the heads of the Church are purposely excluded.

For which reasons your petitioners humbly trust that your Honourable House will refuse your sanction to the said scheme.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

NATIONAL EDUCATION ON THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH.

ON Wednesday, May 1st, the annual meeting of "The National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church throughout England and Wales," took place in the Central School-room, Sanctuary, Westminster.

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury presided on the occasion.

The company were very numerous, and amongst them were the Bishops of London, Chester, Winchester, Llandaff, Bangor, Durham, Norwich, Ripon, Salisbury, and Hereford; Archdeacons Watson, Hamilton, and Thorpe; the Deans of Chester and Norwich; Rev. Lord J. Thynne; Lord Kenyon; Sirs T. Acland, W. Heathcote, and W. Farquhar; the Rev. Sir H. Dunkerfield; the Revs. Dr. Short, Dr. Williamson, Spry, &c.; the Hon. and Rev. S. Best, the Hon. and Rev. H. Legge; Messrs. T. D. Acland, M.P.; and P. Ainsworth, M.P.; Dr. Nairne, Page, and Sutherland, &c.

There were also a great many ladies present.

The children were examined by the Bishop of London, and acquitted themselves in such a manner as to merit the expressions of strong approval bestowed upon them by the Right Rev. Chairman.

The Report was then read. It stated that the triennial Report of the Commissioners went to show, that there had been as many as 6,778 schools established on the principles of the National Society, affording education to 597,000 children. (Hear, hear.) The Report also went on to say, that the results of the Queen's letter had far exceeded those of the King's letter in 1823, inasmuch as by 10,200 parochial returns the receipts accruing therefrom had amounted to 24,800*l*. In the concluding part of their Report, the Committee strongly recommended the formation of a large boarding and training Institution, for the better instruction and improvement of schoolmasters and mistresses, with a view to their being rendered the more capable and competent to preside over the schools established by the Society. In that Institution it was proposed to afford the best religious and moral course of instruction. Over that establishment the Rev. G. Moody had been appointed to act as superintendent. The Report, in conclusion, said that, however much the Society had been at one period buoyed up with the hope of powerful assistance, under the recommendation of the Privy Council, being received from public grants, yet that a recent intimation from that body had clearly convinced them that they should be compelled to depend and trust far more on private benevolence than on Government support.

Sir W. FARQUHAR moved, "That the Report just read be adopted, printed, and, under the directions of the Committee, circulated." He sincerely hoped that ere long they would find that the Society had succeeded in establishing an efficient system of religious and moral education in every parish throughout the kingdom.

The Rev. S. WILBERFORCE, in a speech of considerable force, seconded the Resolution, and assured the meeting, notwithstanding the difficulties alluded to in the Report, that the Society had not the least ground for apprehending that any but a triumphant result would arise from their exertions. (Hear, hear.)

The Resolution having been put, was carried.

The Hon. and Rev. Lord J. THYNNE said, he had been called on to move the next Resolution, but in doing so he could not refrain, indeed he could not allow the opportunity to escape, from expressing the readiness of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster to afford every facility in their power with a view to enable the Society to "lengthen the cords," and to "strengthen the stakes" of the good work in which they were embarked, to the end that they might be the better able to accomplish the proposition on which they had set out. (Hear, hear.) He had considered it to be his duty to the Chapter of which he was an humble member to say thus much, more especially as existing circumstances demanded increased efforts on the part of the members of the Established Church, to exert themselves in carrying out a system of education founded on the principles of that Church, as well as from the fact that the attention of the public was just at the present moment particularly directed to the subject. (Hear.) Indeed, he need not refer to the present aspect or position of existing circumstances, to show the necessity for a proceeding similar to that contemplated by the Society. (Hear.) On referring to what was going on elsewhere, he found that it was proposed to put forth a scheme of national education, in which no principle was acknowledged, in which no foundation of principles was pointed out, nor in which even the received version was to be held as the foundation of the instruction to be afforded. (Hear.) Why, if that principle of education were to be admitted, if the Roman Catholic was to be permitted to have his version of religious education to be introduced into their schools, that of the Unitarian, in which would be blotted out the early chapters of St. John, would next be admitted. (Hear, hear.) He would ask, if such a system of education were to be allowed to be forced into their schools, what would become of the union of the Church and the State—where would that union be? (Hear, hear.) In his opinion, that solemn and sacred union would then be broken through. (Hear, hear.) This was the ground on which he would object to the proposed system of national education. (Hear, hear.) As yet the public were not fully aware of the real principles, or the real effects to which that system must lead; and most sincerely did he trust they never would have occasion to reap the results of so prejudicial, so baneful a system. (Hear, hear.) He hoped the Society would not only be enabled to meet the obstacles which as yet presented themselves in the way of their rapid progress, but that they might quickly be in a condition to carry out their plans in every district throughout the country. (Hear.) From his connexions in various parts of the kingdom he had had an opportunity of ascertaining the opinions of the yeomen on the subject of education, and the establishment of the Society's schools, and he had the greatest satisfaction in communicating to the meeting, that that body were almost unanimous in their desire to leave the education of their children in the hands of the clergymen of their respective parishes.

(Hear, hear.) He had oftentimes heard it made matter of complaint amongst the yeomen of the country, that the system of education was such as frequently to give the children in the charity-schools greater opportunities than were afforded to the offspring of the middling classes. (Hear, hear.) He had recently returned from a diocesan county—from Wells, where he had communicated to many of the yeomen, that it was intended to establish schools, not partaking of the character of charity-schools, but as "National-schools," in which their children would be brought up in the prescribed principles and formularies of the Church of England. To this they every one and all had replied—"That is just what we want, and we hail with delight the news you give us." And when he had subsequently informed them, that in order to enable the Society to carry out their objects, their contributions would of course be looked for, they had as readily not merely promised, but put down their names, some for liberal annual subscriptions, and others for donations. (Hear, hear.) The Resolution he had to submit to the meeting was, "That existing circumstances call for increased efforts for the promotion of national education in the principles of the Established Church; and that a public meeting for this object be convened, at which his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury be requested to attend."

The Rev. Sir H. DUKEFIELD having seconded the Resolution,

The ARCHBISHOP, in putting the motion for the approbation of the meeting, said that he should derive the highest pleasure from presiding at the proposed meeting.

The Resolution was then agreed to.

Sir T. ACLAND moved a vote of thanks to his Grace the Archbishop, for the great attention he had shown to the interests of the Society, and for the able manner in which his Lordship had conducted the proceedings of that day.

Sir W. HEATHCOTE seconded the motion with the greatest satisfaction, which having been put by

The Bishop of BANGOR, was carried with general acclamation.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY then rose to return thanks. He had taken the chair on that occasion with the highest satisfaction. He was firmly impressed with the necessity for them to do every thing in their power to secure a good education for the youth of the country, but more particularly a system of education which was founded on their holy religion according to the principles of the Established Church. (Hear, hear.) He must say, that he did conceive they had arrived at a crisis, when they were called on to determine for the children who were spread over the country at large, whether they should be brought up in the principles of the Church of England, whether they should continue to receive that instruction which had been given them in the schools of the National Society, or whether they should be submitted to a system of a totally different character, similar to that which had been already established in some parts of the country. (Hear, hear.) For it was absolutely impossible for the Society to shut their eyes to the fact, that there were many schools, in various districts of the kingdom, in which religion was not thought of at all, and that there was a still greater proportion of those schools in which the principles of religious education were but very inadequately afforded or administered. (Hear, hear.) He could scarcely conceive any greater mockery than that where a school, professing to give instruction, refused to afford to the children such explanations as were necessary with respect to their proper understanding the information they might read. Was it the mere act of reading words which made children understand their real effect and meaning? Most undoubtedly not. Was it by such a course of learning that the children whose examination they had that day heard had arrived at their knowledge? Assuredly it was not. Why, there could not have been a person in the room but must have noticed the readiness with which they had given their answers throughout the examination to which they had been submitted. (Hear, hear.) Did the meeting conceive that those replies could have been made in the very satisfactory manner in which they were, had the children not been properly instructed in the doctrines and principles, those doctrines and principles being fully explained to them by competent persons, of the Established Church? (Hear, hear.) The meeting had witnessed the results of the system under which the children had been taught to comprehend and understand what they had learned; and he would ask whether, if they had not been directed to the meaning of the texts they had so read by the teachers, how they could by possibility have acquired that knowledge and intelligence on the subjects which they had displayed? (Hear, hear.) He knew of no more gratifying exhibition than that presented by the examination of the pupils of the National Schools. And when he heard it said that particular creeds or forms of faith, or explanations of faith, were denounced as the inventions of fallible or false men, and when it was said that the Scriptures were to be put into the hands of the children without note or commentary, he could not help exclaiming, "Why, the thing is a perfect mockery!" It was utterly impossible that children, without having the Scriptures properly explained to them, could arrive satisfactorily at the meaning of what they read. (Hear, hear.) And then with regard to the creeds alluded to—why, they were derived from sources of the greatest antiquity, and had met with and received the approbation of the most learned and able men of past ages. (Hear, hear.) But some persons there were who said that the children must have the Bible put into their hands without note or comment. Now if that were done, it must be perfectly clear, whilst the sacred book was unaccompanied with such note or comment, that the schoolmaster, be he whom he might, necessarily became the commentator (hear, hear); and considering what human nature was, and how such schools were supplied, it was easy to conceive how imperfect and deficient must be the instruction so imparted, when compared with the assistance rendered by the teachers which the Society proposed to provide. (Hear, hear.) Now, when the meeting called to mind that it was the command of the Scriptures, it was to be found in the Old as well as in the New Testament, by the words of Moses and David, in the former as showing the spirit, and also in the latter in the command of our Lord, as well as that of the Apostles—"To bring up our children in the admonition and nurture of the Lord," it was undoubtedly their duty to educate them to that end. That was the description of education they were called upon to give to the children, and he must say that those who received them, and who did not do so, were false to the duty they owed to those children. (Hear, hear.) He did not mean to denounce the creed of any particular denomination of Christians. (Hear, hear.) There were persons who conscientiously differed from the doctrines and forms of the Church of England. Well, then, let those parties educate their children according to their own peculiar principles, and let their teachers explain and endeavour to make them understand what they read. (Hear, hear.) But to give them an education as to their religious and moral duties by merely placing the Bible in the hands of children, and saying, "There, read and judge for yourselves," did appear to him to be the most perfect mockery he had ever heard of. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, he begged to say, that he should take the chair at the proposed meeting on the 28th instant with the utmost satisfaction. (Hear, hear.)

The meeting then separated.

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

A Bill intitled "An Act for the more effectually enforcing Church Discipline."

(Presented by the Lord Chancellor, and ordered to be printed, April 12th, 1839.)

I. WHEREAS the present mode of proceeding in causes for the correction of clerks is attended with great expense, delay, and uncertainty, occasioned as well by the number of courts which now have jurisdiction in such causes, as by the multiplicity of appeals allowed by law from the decrees of such courts; and whereas it would tend very materially to diminish the evil aforesaid, and to promote a more uniform, speedy, and effectual administration of justice, if one court were appointed to have exclusive jurisdiction in all such causes, subject to an appeal to Her Majesty in Council: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that an Act passed in the first year of the reign of King Henry the Seventh, intituled "An Act for bishops to punish priests and other religious men for dishonest lives," shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it enacted, that, unless it shall otherwise appear from the context, the term "Preferment," when used in this Act, shall be construed to comprehend every deanery, archdeaconry, prebend, canonry, office of minor canon, priest vicar, or vicar choral, having any prebend or endowment belonging thereto, or belonging to any body corporate, consisting of persons holding any such office, and every precentorship, treasurer'ship, sub-deanery, chancellorship of the church, and other dignity and office in any cathedral or collegiate church, and every mastership, wardenship, and fellowship in any collegiate church, and all benefices with cure of souls therein, comprehending all parishes, perpetual curacies, donatives, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries, and chapelries or districts belonging or reputed to belong, or annexed or reputed to be annexed, to any church or chapel, and every curacy, lectureship, readership, chaplaincy, office, or place which requires the discharge of any spiritual duty, and whether the same be or be not within any exempt or peculiar jurisdiction; and the word "bishop" when used in this Act, shall be construed to comprehend "archbishop;" and the word "diocese" when used in this Act shall be construed to comprehend all places to which the jurisdiction of any bishop extends under and for the purposes of an Act passed in the first and second years of her present Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to abridge the holding of benefices in plurality, and to make better provision for the residence of the clergy."

III. And be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act no Ecclesiastical Court whatsoever, whether royal, peculiar, or otherwise, now possessing any jurisdiction to hear, determine, or adjudicate upon any suit against any spiritual person below the rank or degree of a bishop, for the purpose of procuring any sentence of excommunication, suspension ab officio or ab officio et beneficio, deprivation, deposition, or degradation, or any spiritual censure, shall possess or exercise any such jurisdiction, save and except the Court of Arches, which Court shall exclusively possess and exercise original jurisdiction in all such suits in the manner hereinafter directed, subject nevertheless to an appeal to her Majesty in Council, to be referred to the judicial committee of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council.

IV. And be it enacted, that in all such suits as aforesaid the jurisdiction of the said Court of Arches, and all its citations, processes, and sentences, shall extend to and be executed in every part of England and Wales, and in and to all preferments, and may be enforced by the same means as any citation, process, or sentence of the said Court of Arches may now be enforced.

V. And be it enacted, that all such suits now pending in any Ecclesiastical Court (other than the Court of Arches) shall be and the same are hereby removed and transferred before the Court of Arches; and the same suits, and all suits for the correction of clerks now pending in the Court of Arches, shall there be proceeded in, either according to the law and forms and in the manner heretofore in force and use in the said Court, or in the manner directed by this Act with respect to suits hereafter to be instituted, according to the discretion of the judge of the said Court; and the decisions of the Court of Arches in such suits may be appealed from, and such suits proceeded with before the judicial committee of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, as if this Act had not passed.

VI. And be it enacted, that all such suits now pending before the judicial committee of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council shall proceed in all respects as if this Act had not passed.

VII. And be it enacted, that in all suits to be hereafter instituted in the Court of Arches in pursuance of this Act the proceedings shall be conducted and evidence shall be taken, by commission or otherwise, in the same form and manner as proceedings and evidence have been heretofore conducted and taken in causes of correction depending in the said Court, save as such proceedings are altered by this Act, or may hereafter be altered by any order or orders of Court which may from time to time be issued by the judge of the said Court of Arches, to adapt such proceedings more conveniently and summarily to carry into effect the provisions of this Act, and which order or orders such judge is hereby empowered to make, and from time to time to rescind or alter, at his discretion; and the order or orders so to be made shall be as valid as if the same had been inserted in this Act; and save also when the judge of the said Court shall in pursuance of the powers given to him by this Act take evidence or direct evidence to be taken by word of mouth.

VIII. And be it enacted, that every such suit shall be commenced within two years after the commission of the offence in respect of which the suit shall be instituted, and not afterwards: provided always, that whenever any such suit shall be brought in respect of an offence for which a conviction shall have been obtained in any Court of Common Law, such suit may be brought against the person convicted at any time within six months after such conviction, although more than two years shall have elapsed since the commission of the offence in respect of which such suit shall be so brought.

IX. And be it enacted, that upon the articles of charge in any such suit being allowed by the Court as admissible, the defendant shall be required forthwith to give a separate issue to each of such articles, and that all further pleading shall be concluded before the taking of any evidence in the said suit.

X. And be it enacted, that when all the several pleas in any such suit shall have been concluded, and before witnesses shall have been examined, or afterwards, it shall be lawful for the judge, on motion in open Court on behalf either of the promoter of the suit or of the bishop of the diocese within which the defendant may hold any preferment, or if he hold preferment within more than one diocese, on behalf of the archbishop of the province, to suspend the defendant from performing any spiritual offices during the pendency of such proceedings, if the said judge shall think fit; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese within which such defendant may hold any preferment to provide in the meantime for the performing the duties of such preferment, and if necessary by sequestration, as in the case of non-residence on a benefice: provided always, that the salary to be assigned in any such case to the person appointed to perform the spiritual duties of such preferment shall not exceed one half of the net annual value thereof, nor the salary which the ordinary would have been empowered to assign to the curate of such defendant if non-resident, under an Act passed in the first and second years of her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to abridge the holding of Benefices in Plurality, and to make better Provision for the Residence of the Clergy."

XI. And be it enacted, that when any spiritual person shall have been suspended from performing any spiritual offices during the pendency of any such proceedings, and the duties of his preferment shall have been provided for by the bishop by sequestration or otherwise, it shall be lawful for the judge of the said Court of Arches, if he shall see fit, at the termination of such proceedings, to certify under his hand that the said proceedings were frivolous and vexatious, and thereupon, in addition to the taxed costs of such proceedings, to award to the said spiritual person, nomine expensarum, a further sum not exceeding the salary assigned by the bishop, and actually paid to the person appointed to perform the duties of the preferment during such suspension, and to enforce payment thereof from the prosecutor, as in the case of taxed costs.

XII. And be it enacted, that in any such suit witnesses shall be examined on such parts only of the several pleas as the said judge shall, on motion in open Court, direct.

XIII. And be it enacted, that in any such suit the said Court of Arches (if it shall think fit) may summon before it and examine or re-examine witnesses by word of mouth, and either before or after examination by deposition or before a commissioner, as hereinafter mentioned: and such evidence shall be taken down in writing by the registrar, or by such other person or persons, and in such manner, order, and course, as the judge of the said Court shall direct.

XIV. And be it enacted, that the said Court may, if it shall think fit, in any such suit issue one or more special commissions to some person, being an advocate or examiner of the said Court of Arches of not less than seven years standing, or a barrister of not less than seven years standing, to take evidence by word of mouth, at such time or times, place or places, and as to such fact or facts, and in such manner, order, and course, and under such limitations and restrictions, and to transmit the same to the registry of the said Court in such form and manner as in and by the said commission shall be directed; and that such commissioner shall be attended, and the witnesses shall be examined, cross-examined, and re-examined, by the parties, their counsel, proctors, or agents, if such parties, or either of them, shall think fit so to do; and such commissioner shall, if need be, make a special report to the Court touching such examination, and the conduct or absence of any witness or other person thereon or relating thereto; and the said Court of Arches is hereby authorized to institute such proceedings and make such order or orders upon such report as justice may require, and as may be instituted or made in any case of contempt of the said Court.

XV. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judge in any such suit to direct one or more feigned issue or issues to be tried in any Court of Common Law, and either before a judge of assize or at the sittings for the trial of issues in London or Middlesex, and either by a special or common jury, in like manner and for the same purpose as is now done by the High Court of Chancery.

XVI. And be it enacted, that it shall be in the discretion of the said judge to direct that on the trial of any such issue the depositions already taken of any witness who shall have died, or who shall be incapable to give oral testimony, shall be received in evidence; and further, that such deeds, evidences, and writings shall be produced, and that such facts shall be admitted as to the said judge shall seem fit.

XVII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said judge to direct one or more new trial or new trials of any issue, either generally or upon certain points only; and that in case any witness examined at a former trial shall have died, or have through bodily or mental disease or infirmity become incapable to repeat his testimony, it shall be lawful for the said judge to direct that parole evidence of the testimony of such witness shall be received.

XVIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful in any such suit for the judge of the said Court of Arches, or for any such Commissioner appointed in pursuance of this Act, to require the attendance of any witnesses, and the production of any deeds, evidences, or writings, by writ to be issued by such judge or commissioner in such and the same form, or as nearly as may be, as that in which a writ of Subpœna ad testificandum, or of Subpœna duces tecum, is now issued by her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster; and that every person disobeying any such writ so to be issued by the said judge or commissioner shall be considered as in contempt of the said Court of Arches, and shall also be liable to such and the same penalties and consequences as if such writ had issued out of the said Court of Queen's Bench, and may be sued for such penalties in the said Court of Queen's Bench.

XIX. And be it enacted, that any witness who shall be examined vidu voce in pursuance of this Act shall give his or her evidence upon oath, or upon solemn affirmation in cases where an affirmation is allowed by law, instead of an oath, which oath or affirmation respectively shall be administered by the said judge or his surrogate, or by any commissioner appointed in pursuance of this Act; and that every such witness who shall wilfully swear or affirm falsely shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished accordingly.

XX. And be it enacted, that the costs of such issues, or of such commission as aforesaid, as the judge of the said Court of Arches shall under this Act direct, shall be paid by such party or parties, person or persons, and be taxed by the registrar of the said Court of Arches in such manner as the said judge shall direct, and that payment of such costs shall be enforced in the same manner as costs between party and party may be enforced in any Ecclesiastical Court.

XXI. And be it enacted, that when in any such suit any spiritual person shall be suspended by any definitive sentence, or decree having the force and effect of a definitive sentence, from any preferment or preferments, the bishop shall during such suspension sequester the profits of such preferment or preferments, and by order under his hand direct the application of the profits of the same respectively, after deducting the necessary expenses of providing for the duties of the same respectively, in the first place, to the payment of the costs and expenses which shall have been incurred in the prosecution of such suit, and in relation to such suspension and sequestration; and in the next place towards the repair or sustentation of the chancel, house of residence of any such preferment, or of any of the buildings and appurtenances thereof, and of the glebe and demesne lands, and in the next place towards the augmentation or improvement of any such preferment, or the house of residence thereof, or of any of the buildings or appurtenances thereof, or towards the improvement of any of the glebe or demesne lands thereof, or to order and direct the same or any portion thereof, and any surplus of such profits remaining after the before-mentioned purposes have been, according to the opinion of the bishop, sufficiently provided for, to be paid to the treasurer of the bounty of Queen Anne, for the purposes of the said bounty, as such bishop shall in his discretion, under all the circumstances, think fit and expedient; and that no part of such profits shall be paid to the spiritual person so suspended, nor applied for his use or benefit, or in satisfaction of a sequestration previously or subsequently obtained at the suit of a creditor, unless, on special cause shown, the said bishop, in and by an order under his hand and seal, shall think fit otherwise to direct; and that such order shall set forth the circumstances and reasons which induce the bishop to make the same, and shall be filed in the registry of the said bishop by the registrar thereof, and shall be open to inspection.

XXII. And be it enacted, that when in any such suit a sentence of deprivation shall have passed upon the defendant, it shall be lawful for the said Court, if it shall see fit, to direct that the costs of the promoter shall nevertheless be charged upon the preferment of which the defendant shall be deprived by such sentence, and the same shall be accordingly raised out of the profits of such preferment by such instalments and in such manner as the said Court shall by its order direct; and for the purpose of raising such costs it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese within which such preferment shall be situate, and he is hereby required, to sequester the profits thereof.

XXIII. And be it enacted, that in all such suits there shall be an appeal from the said Court of Arches to her Majesty in Council, to be referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and to be proceeded in in the same manner as appeals from the said Court of Arches are now proceeded in: provided always, that there shall be no appeal from any interlocutory decree or order not having the force or effect of a definitive sentence, and thereby ending the suit in that Court, save by the permission of the judge of the Court of Arches.

XXIV. And be it enacted, that the appellant shall be required to give such security as the said Court of Arches shall think fit for the costs to be incurred by such appeal, and for all other costs previously incurred.

XXV. And be it declared and enacted, that so much of an Act passed in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to prevent frivolous and vexatious Suits in Ecclesiastical Courts," as enacts that no suit shall be commenced in any Ecclesiastical Court for fornication or incontinence after the expiration of eight calendar months from the time when such offence shall have been committed, does not and shall not extend to charges or suits against spiritual persons for fornication or incontinence.

XXVI. And be it enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to affect any authority over the clergy of their respective provinces or dioceses which the archbishops or bishops of England and Wales may now according to law exercise personally and without judicial process.

XXVII. And be it enacted, that this Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland, nor to the Isle of Man, nor to the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, or Sark, nor to any appeal from any Court within the said Isle or Islands.

XXVIII. And be it enacted, that this Act may be repealed or amended or altered by any Act or Acts to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

ECCLESIASTICAL DUTIES AND REVENUES BILL.

WE, the undersigned members of cathedral and collegiate foundations, are desirous of declaring to the friends of the Church, and her institutions, our views and wishes respecting the Bill now before Parliament for the future regulation of the duties and revenues of these ecclesiastical corporations.

We refrain from repeating the many objections which we have formerly urged, and still continue to feel, against the principle as well as the details of that measure, because they are already well known to those whom we have now the honour of addressing, having been enlarged upon in memorials presented by several of our chapters to the late ecclesiastical commissioners, as well as in the publications which have advocated our cause, and in the petitions which have been submitted to Parliament; and we have also dwelt upon them at some length in a paper which we ventured to lay before many members of the House of Commons during the last session.

We beg, however, to observe, that these objections, though not now recapitulated, remain in their full force upon our minds; and no counter statements which have yet been made have tended to remove them. On the contrary, they have been strengthened by the now generally admitted fact, that the proposed measure has been supported, even by its original projectors, chiefly under a conviction that, although the alarming spiritual destitution of some parts of the country calls aloud for an increase of religious instruction and pastoral superintendence, the necessary funds for the purpose cannot be obtained from the piety and liberality of the nation at large; and that as the revenues of cathedral and collegiate bodies furnish, in their opinion, the first available source from which those funds can be drawn, it has become necessary to sacrifice a portion of these institutions to the pressing wants of the Church.

We have long contended, and we continue respectfully, but firmly, to contend, that the case of spiritual destitution, which has been forcibly and truly stated, cannot render the present measure expedient; for the evil it will produce will far overbalance the good it proposes to effect, even were that much greater and more immediate than its warmest advocates expect it to become. And we believe that the religious feelings and zeal of the nation have been scarcely estimated at their true value by those who imagine that no fund for the fitting extension of parochial ministrations and worship can be found, but in the reduction of cathedral and collegiate establishments.

We are not, however, insensible to the pressing nature and lamentable extent of the evil which the late ecclesiastical commissioners desired to remedy; nor are we unwilling to contribute to its alleviation, or removal, in any way compatible with the preservation of our sacred establishments in their integrity, and the accomplishment of those recorded designs of our founders and benefactors which we are bound by the most solemn obligations to fulfil.

We do not, indeed, allow that a claim can be equitably made on us to supply any deficiencies which time and altered circumstances have occasioned in the parochial arrangements of the Church, further than a due regard for the increase of the vicarages under our own care or patronage may require. The purposes for which our revenues were given have been clearly defined and described by the donors. We hold them under the most stringent sanctions of law for the fulfilment of those purposes; and we are ready and anxious to apply them to their full and complete accomplishment, in the largest and most comprehensive sense, which the wills of our founders, and the language of our charters and our statutes will bear.

But, though we thus maintain that no equitable claim can be made on us for more than this, still, under the present circumstances of the Church, we are willing, as far as our duty and our oaths will permit, to devote a portion of our funds to the relief of the spiritual wants of parishes either connected with us, as being holders of property within their boundaries, or united with us under the same episcopal superintendence. We believe that by an altered, perhaps an improved management of some parts of our property, without injuriously affecting the interests of our tenants, a sum might be raised by nearly all the cathedral and collegiate establishments, which, distributed by their own officers, and in their own dioceses, might materially assist in removing the spiritual destitution so justly lamented. Nay, more, that the better endowed foundations might and would contribute from such a fund as they might thus form, to the necessities of the poorer dioceses.

We are willing and ready to attempt the formation of such a plan; and we will undertake, both individually and collectively, to recommend it to the favourable consideration of the several chapters.

But, that we may do this with effect, time must be allowed us. We are well aware that there are difficulties to be encountered and removed. Many apparently conflicting interests must be reconciled; many distant individuals and corporations must be consulted and conciliated; and the peculiar laws and practices of different chapters must be so regarded as to overcome the obstacles they may at first present to any tolerably uniform course of proceeding. But, though convinced of the laborious and delicate task we offer to undertake, we are not disheartened at the prospect; nor do we doubt of success if time for due deliberation and mutual consultation with our chapters and with each other is not refused us. This, however, is indispensable; if for no other reason yet for this, that many of our chapters cannot legally enter on the consideration of any plan we may propose but at their stated times of meeting, when only can they determine on such questions as we shall have to lay before them.

We therefore feel justified in requesting the friends of the Church in Parliament to support us in our entreaty that the Cathedral Bill may be postponed to a future session of Parliament; and we pledge ourselves that we will faithfully and diligently employ the time thus allowed us in endeavouring to digest a scheme by which cathedral and collegiate bodies may contribute liberally and efficiently to the spiritual necessities of the Church, at the same time that they are preserved in integrity of their statutable numbers, and thus enabled to carry out, to the utmost limit of their charters and their statutes, the valuable and pious purposes for which they were founded.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METROPOLIS.

The Tithe Commutation Act.—We have been requested to call attention to the great benefit which may be derived by the resident Clergy from the 29th clause of the Tithe Commutation Act, which facilitates the commutation of part of the rent-charge for 20 acres of land. This offers to the country Clergy a desirable means of adding to their domestic convenience and comfort; and when they are fortunate enough to have in their parishes either a considerate landlord, or land belonging either to Cathedrals or Colleges, they have under this Act an opportunity of receiving immediate benefit themselves, and of handing down to their successors a valuable acquisition.

St. Etheldreda's Chapel, Ely Place, Holborn.—This beautiful Chapel, which was formerly attached to the palace of the bishops of Ely, in Holborn, has been an important place of worship for upwards of five hundred years, the date assigned to the building being the year 1320. It is still in excellent preservation, and has remarkably rich eastern and western windows. Several distinguished prelates have preached in the Chapel, and some have been consecrated within its walls. The last consecration which took place here was that of Dr. Edmund Keene, Bishop of Chester, on March 22, 1752. He afterwards became Bishop of Ely; and during his time, in the year 1772, the estate, including the Chapel, was alienated from the see for a certain consideration, taken into the hands of the crown, and sold. Until the reign of King George III. the bishop's palace, which stood on the site of Ely-place, had been the constant town residence of the bishops of Ely. Several of these prelates died here. Hollinshed states, that John of Gaunt, after the destruction of his palace in the Savoy by the mob, resorted to Ely Palace, Holborn, where he died in 1399. The garden, where Hatton Garden now stands, produced the fine strawberries praised by the tyrant Richard, who asked Bishop Morton for a "mess" of them on the morning of Lord Hastings's murder. It also abounded in roses in the reign of Elizabeth, who bestowed the estate on Christopher Hatton, her chancellor, much to the concern and annoyance of the bishops; they losing thereby a desirable residence in the metropolis at a time when their state duties, as well as those of an ecclesiastical nature, required a near attendance on the court. The exemplary and gifted John Evelyn records his satisfaction at witnessing in this Chapel, on the 27th of April, 1693, the marriage of his beloved daughter Susannah to Mr. Draper. The service was performed by Dr. Tenison, Bishop of Lincoln, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury. Evelyn, after describing her as beautiful, learned, accomplished, and good, says, "This character is due to her, though coming from her father." Queen Anne, when Princess of Denmark, wrote to Dr. Turner, Bishop of Ely (one of the seven bishops), requesting him to secure her a place in his Chapel, on the following Sunday afternoon, that she might hear Bishop Ken (of Bath and Wells), "expound." In the year 1820 the Chapel was presented to the National Society by the treasurer of that Institution.

British and Foreign Bible Society.—The 35th anniversary of this Institution was held on Wednesday, May 1, at Exeter Hall. Lord Bexley presided, and was supported by the Bishops of Winchester, Chester, Chichester, Norwich, Vermont, U. S., Lord Glenelg, the Earl of Harrowby, Lord Mountsandsford, Lord Teignmouth, M.P., Sir T. D. Acland, M.P., J. Plumptre, Esq., M.P., W. Evans, Esq., M.P., Mr. Sheriff Wood, W. Allen, Esq., H. Pownall, Esq., Rev. Dr. Patten, from New York, &c. &c. The Report spoke of much success, notwithstanding the continued difficulties which were thrown in its way by the enemies of the Society, particularly the emissaries of Popery on the continent of Europe, and other parts of the globe. It noticed the general activity of Popery, the spread of infidelity, the power of superstition, and the pertinacity of heathenism and false systems of religion; but stated that, notwithstanding all this, there was a growing and almost universal desire among the people of all climes for the possession of the Scriptures. It stated that a Ladies' Association had been formed at Windsor, of which Her Majesty had consented to become the Patroness; 125 new Societies had been formed; and now the number of affiliated institutions were, 352 Auxiliary Societies, 327 Branch Societies, and 1,730 Bible Associations, making a total of 2,409. The receipts of the past year amounted to 105,255*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*, being an increase of 8,015*l.* 1*s.*; the payments to 106,509*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*, being an increase of 16,329*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* The issue of Bibles and Testaments, 658,068, being an increase of 63,670.

Wesleyan Missionary Society.—The annual meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society was held at Exeter Hall. Mr. Plumptre took the chair. From the Report read it appeared that the Society is in a flourishing condition. The amount of the subscriptions received during the past year is 73,537*l.*, and the total amount of receipts 84,818*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.*, and the expenditure 100,077*l.*, leaving a deficiency of more than 10,000*l.* to be made up. Mr. Evans, M.P., Col. Conolly, M.P., the Rev. Dr. Payton, the Rev. Dr. Beaman, the two latter from America, and many other gentlemen, addressed the meeting.

St. Peter's School, Mile-End.—On Thursday, April 18, the foundation-stone of a new National and Sunday school, attached to the recently-erected church of St. Peter, in Globe-road, Mile-End, was laid by Lord Ashley, M.P., assisted by Major Wood, M.P., the clergy of the neighbourhood, and the parochial authorities. The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Robins, of Christchurch chapel, Maida-hill, by Mr. Burgess, rector of Upper Chelsea, and by Dr. McCaul, of the Episcopal Jews' chapel. A hymn was then sung by the children present, after which Lord Ashley performed the ceremony of laying the first stone in the usual manner. His lordship then shortly addressed the company, and set forth the advantages likely to accrue from the work in which they had been that day engaged. Major Wood also spoke to the same purpose. The dismissal hymn was then sung by the children, and the company departed, highly gratified by what they had witnessed.

Visitation of the Archdeacon of Middlesex.—On Tuesday morning, pursuant to ancient custom, the annual visitation of the clergy of the archdeaconry of Middlesex was held in the parish-church of St. Paul's, Covent-garden, before the Venerable George Owen Owen, A.M., the archdeacon, who was assisted by Dr. Phillimore, the official, and Mr. Shepherd, the registrar. The business of the day commenced with the swearing in of the churchwardens of the several metropolitan and sub-mural parishes included in the archdeaconry of Middlesex, and who were introduced to the court by the retiring churchwardens. By this time the whole of the clergy of the archdeaconry had arrived, and were assembled in the church, attired in their full canonicals. The archdeacon shortly afterwards entered the sacred edifice, and took his seat with the other officers at the altar. The names of the clergy were then read over from the list by Dr. Phillimore, and the rev. gentlemen having answered to the call, the archdeacon proceeded to deliver his charge, which was listened to by the clergy with great attention. The proceedings of the day excited great interest.

PROVINCIAL.

Bath.—Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and the National Society for the Education of the Poor.—The twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Bath and Bathminster district committees of the above invaluable societies was held at the Assembly Rooms, Bath, on Wednesday, the 3rd inst. Divine service was performed in the morning at Trinity church, when upwards of two thousand three hundred children of the schools were present. A most admirable and impressive sermon was preached by the Ven. W. T. P. Brymer, A.M. F.A.S. Archdeacon of Bath, from 1 Cor. xiv. 12: "Forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the Church."

The Lord Bishop of the diocese presided at the annual meeting, which was very numerous and highly respectfully attended. Prayers having been offered up by the Ven. Archdeacon Brymer,

The Lord Bishop expressed the very great gratification which he felt in being present on that occasion, and called on the Rev. W. D. Willis to read the Annual Report.

This is a great victory on the part of the Church, a rate of the same amount, proposed by the churchwardens in July, 1838, having been defeated by a majority of 63.—Standard.

Brighton.—The churchwardens of Brighton applied on Thursday for a church-rate of 1*d.* in the pound, to defray the necessary legal expenses of the parish church of St. Nicholas, and the chapel-of-ease called St. Peter. This was met by an amendment, that the further consideration of the question be adjourned for 12 months; thereupon a poll was demanded and kept open for two days: it closed on Saturday evening, when the numbers were—for the rate, 445 persons, 1057 votes; for the adjournment, 417 persons, 747 votes; majority for the rate, 28 persons, 310 votes.

The Earl of Egremont has recently erected at his own expense a very handsome church in the parish of Blackborough, of which his Lordship is the patron.—Western Luminary.

Fidelity rewarded.—The Rev. Mr. Veasey, of St. Peter's college, whose decease we recorded last week, has left to his late servant, Mr. Daniel Barber, now porter of the college, a legacy of one thousand pounds, in grateful acknowledgement of his long-continued and faithful services to his master during his declining years. The rev. gent. also left 100*l.* to his gyp, Mr. Philip Buck.

New Church.—It is in contemplation to erect a new church in the populous parish of Chardstock, the present edifice being insufficient, and at too great a distance from some parts of the parish for the proper accommodation of its inhabitants.—Salisbury Herald.

Durham.—A handsome font, made by Mr. Jackson, Durham, has been presented to Trinity church, Stockton, by the Venerable Archdeacon Thorpe.—Newcastle Journal.

The New Church at Finchfield, Essex.—Among the subscribers to the fund for the erection of the new church at Finchfield are the Bishop of London, 25*l.*; the Rev. B. Goodrich, 10*l.* to the building fund, and 40*l.* to endowment; the Rev. J. Westerman, vicar of the parish, 50*l.*; J. R. Brise, Esq., 100*l.*; Miss Ruggles, of Colchester, 50*l.*; and the Rev. J. Hopkins, Rector of Stambourne, 100*l.*—Essex Standard.

WALES.

Denbighshire County Meeting.—On the 8th inst. a meeting of the county of Denbigh, duly convened by Sir John Williams, Bart. the High Sheriff, on a requisition signed by the grand jury at the last assizes for the said county, was held in the County Hall at Ruthin, "for the purpose of petitioning the legislature against the alienation of any portion of the Church revenues of North Wales to other parts of the kingdom."

The High Sheriff took the chair, and stated the object of the meeting to a very numerous assembly of gentlemen, clergy, freeholders, and inhabitants of the county.

The Viscount Dungannon, R. Myddelton Bid-dulph, Esq. and others, then addressed the meeting, and the following petition was read, and unanimously agreed upon:—

"That your petitioners view with sorrow and alarm those measures now pending before your honourable house, affecting the revenues of the Established Church.

"That they consider the transfer of the sinecure rectories and the surplus revenues of the two dioceses of Bangor and St. Asaph, to the general fund for the augmentation of poor livings throughout England, would be productive of the most injurious consequences to the welfare of the North Wales Church, the exigencies of which, as respects the population, parochial extent, difficulty of access, and poverty of the benefices in general, are far greater than in English dioceses.

"That the Church property of the English dioceses bears a ratio of sixty-six pounds to every square mile, while in North Wales the proportion is only twenty-six pounds to every square mile.

"That in England the number of churches is one to every five square miles, while in North Wales the proportion is only one to every ten square miles.

"That the average extent of the English dioceses does not exceed two thousand one hundred and nine square miles, while those of St. Asaph and Bangor, if united, would comprise three thousand two hundred and fifty square miles.

"We therefore pray your honourable house will direct that the sinecure rectories and the ecclesiastical property in North Wales, arising from the projected union of the two dioceses of North Wales (if carried into effect) be not transferred to the general fund, but appropriated for the benefit of the diocese in which such revenues arise.

"And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray."—Salopian Journal.

Church Extension in Carmarthenshire.—We announce with the purest feelings of grateful satisfaction, and look forward with the greatest pleasure to the speedy completion of a new chapel of the Established Church in the large and populous parish of Llandilo-fawr, the noble present of the Right Hon. Lord Dynevor, of Dynevor Castle. On Tuesday last, the 2nd of April, the very interesting ceremony of laying the first stone of this new chapel took place. It was performed by the Hon. Miss Rice.—Carmarthen Herald.

MEETING AT WELSH POOL TO PETITION ABOUT THE CHURCH REVENUES OF WALES.

This meeting, which was most respectfully attended, was held at Welsh Pool, on Wednesday, April 10th.

The High Sheriff (D. Hamer, Esq.) briefly opened the business of the day, and directed the requisition to be read.

The Viscount CLIVE, having been requested to state to the meeting the proceedings which had taken place in London with reference to the subject for which the meeting had been convened, his lordship, with his usual courtesy, readily assented; and in an address characterized by much feeling and knowledge of the subject, detailed at considerable length the proceedings which had taken place in town, and placed before the meeting the present state of the question, in order that the meeting might afterwards adopt such resolutions as the circumstances of the case might seem to require. His lordship stated, that at the request of the committee formed in town to watch the progress of the measures affecting the Church in the northern part of the principality, and consisting principally of the county and borough members of North Wales, a deputation had waited on Lord John Russell to explain the hardship and injustice already inflicted on this part of the country by the tithes of many large and extensive parishes having been withdrawn to other districts, and appropriated to other purposes than the religious instruction of those parishes; and to point out how this evil would be greatly aggravated if the "Ecclesiastical Revenues Bill" now before Parliament should pass into a law in its present state. The representation of the deputation evidently made an impression on the noble secretary for the Home Department. He admitted the hardship of the case, and promised to give the subject his best consideration, and intimated that the discussion of that portion of the bill would be postponed till after the Easter recess. The same deputation had subsequently waited on his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London. His Grace (observed his lordship) received the deputation with that peculiar Christian courtesy for which he is so eminently distinguished; and entered into the subject with that deep interest and concern with which he attends to all questions relating to the interests of the Church. The Archbishop and the Bishop of London appeared not to have been previously fully aware of the injurious operation of the "Ecclesiastical Revenues Bill" on that portion of the Church situated in North Wales. They admitted the peculiar circumstances of the Church in North Wales, and promised to give all due attention to the representations laid before them by the deputation. His lordship then said that he was happy to inform the meeting that there was, he believed, a good prospect of ultimate success; but they must not relax in their exertions. Lord Clive then urged on the meeting the necessity for co-operation and unanimity, and the great advantages of having county meetings throughout all North Wales, in order to show to Her Majesty's ministers and the two houses of parliament that there was but one feeling and one mind on this subject (cheers); that where the interests of our Church were affected, we were firmly united as one man; and that we were all Welsh on this subject (much cheering). His lordship then observed that Monday next was fixed for the Ecclesiastical Revenues Bill going into committee, and that there was no time to be lost in sending up petitions to the House of Commons. After again urging the necessity and advantage of being firm and united, his lordship resumed his seat amidst much cheering.

The meeting was addressed by several influential gentlemen, and various resolutions were passed.

IRELAND.

Additional Curates' Fund Society, Ireland—Important Meeting.—The first annual meeting of the Protestant Additional Curates' Fund Society was held, 4th April, in the round room of the Rotunda, Dublin, for the purpose of introducing the subject of the establishment of the Society to the Protestants of Ireland. The principal dignitaries of the Church were on the platform, and the body of the building was crowded by a most respectable assemblage. Among those present were the following:—The Lord Primate, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishops of Down and Connor, Cashel, Meath, Clogher, Killaloe, Limerick, Derry, Dromore, the Lord Mayor, Lord Downes, the Right Hon. F. Blackburne, the Archdeacons of Kildare and Dublin, T. B. C. Smith, Rev. J. H. Todd, F.T.C.D., Rev. Sydney Smith, F.T.C.D., the Dean of St. Patrick's, Mr. Sergeant Jackson, Mr. John Beatty West, &c. The Lord Primate presided. His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin moved the first resolution, "That the powers of the parochial clergy in many large and populous parishes are by no means commensurate with their professional calls;" seconded by the Marquis of Downshire. Several resolutions were passed for the purpose of carrying into effect a remedy for the evil, in the proposing and seconding of which several able speeches were made.

Malta.—Government Notice.—His Excellency the Governor has great satisfaction in announcing, that the commencement of the very munificent undertaking of Her Majesty the Queen Dowager of England, to build a Protestant church, took place on Wednesday last, Her Majesty having been graciously pleased, at 2 o'clock on that day, to lay the foundation-stone on the appropriated site in Strada Vecova.

Her Majesty, attended by her suite, was received at the entrance of the ground with the honours due to her illustrious rank; and, accompanied by His Excellency the Governor, and Admiral the Honorable Sir Robert Stopford, proceeded to the excavation, the Protestant clergy and the members of the committee leading the way.

As soon as Her Majesty had taken her station, the 132nd Psalm and a prayer was read by the chaplain to the forces; after which Her Majesty was conducted by His Excellency the Governor, attended by the admiral, and the members of the committee, to the spot where the foundation-stone was suspended. The architect having made the usual preparations, His Excellency presented to the Queen the silver trowel, with which she was pleased to spread the mortar; and the stone having been lowered into its bed, Her Majesty proved its correct position in the accustomed manner. His Excellency then read the following Latin and English inscriptions:—

"LAUS DEO.

"Hic lapis ædis sacræ Sancti Pauli fundamentum propria excellentissimæ et pientissimæ Adelaidis Reginae Viduæ Nobilis manu positus est, die 20 Martii A. D. 1839. Cujus et pietate et sumptu hoc templum in usum Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ ædificatum est."

"GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST, AND ON EARTH PEACE, GOODWILL TOWARDS MEN.

"This foundation-stone of the Church of St. Paul in the city of Valletta, for the celebration of Divine Worship, according to the ritual of the Church of England, and to be erected out of the free and Christian bounty of Her Majesty Adelaide the Queen Dowager, was laid by Her Majesty in person, on the 20th day of March, A. D. 1839.

"His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir Henry F. Bouverie, G.C.M.G. K.C.B. Governor of the Island of Malta and its dependencies."

The coins, namely, a sovereign, a half-sovereign, a crown, a half-crown, a shilling, and a six-pence, a fourpenny silver piece, a penny, a half-penny, a farthing, and a British grain, also a coronation medal of their Majesties William and Adelaide in bronze, having next been presented were deposited, together with the English inscription on parchment, in a glass vessel, within the cavity in the stone, and the brass plate with the Latin inscription was immediately placed over it and fastened down.

At the completion of this part of the ceremony a royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired, and the guard of honour presented arms, the band playing the national anthem. Her Majesty having ascended to her former station, the 100th Psalm was sung by the children of the regimental schools, and the ceremony was concluded by the government chaplain reading a prayer, together with the Lord's Prayer, and pronouncing the blessing.

Her Majesty, on quitting the ground, was graciously pleased to express to His Excellency the Governor her entire approbation at the manner in which the whole of this very interesting and imposing ceremony had been conducted.

By command of His Excellency,

H. GREIG,

Chief Secretary to Government.

I.a Valletta, 22nd March, 1839.

By a recent proclamation of the Governor of Malta, an ordinance was enacted "for abolishing the censorship and for providing against abuses of the consequent liberty of publishing printed writings," of which the following is an extract:—

ridiculing, or otherwise insulting, any doctrine of the Established Church of England, or its government, discipline, or rites. 4. The negotiations between the Prussian government and the Archbishop of Posen have been broken off, the prelate obstinately refusing obedience to any but the authority of the Pope. —Times.

Hamburg, April 30.—The Prussian State Gazette contains a letter from Munster, of the 23d of April, which gives the Cabinet order issued by the King of Prussia, in reply to the application for permission to the Archbishop of Cologne to go to the estates of his family, in Westphalia, for the recovery of his health. His Majesty generously grants this request, on condition that the Archbishop shall not quit this new place of abode without His Majesty's permission; and that if the Archbishop should happen to have particular confidence in a foreign physician, care shall be taken to send for him. The King desires that the President of the government shall express to the Archbishop His Majesty's regret at his ill-health, with the wish that the change of air may contribute to relieve his sufferings. The order was received at Minden by express on the 19th, and immediately communicated to the Archbishop, who, with feelings of gratitude, acknowledged His Majesty's favour, and most readily promised not to leave Darfeld without his permission. He left Minden on the 21st, and arrived at Darfeld on the 22d.

The note of the Papal Court, in answer to that from Berlin, which was communicated to the Foreign Ambassadors at Rome a short time since, is published by the Augsburg Gazette. The Holy See endeavours to define the limits between spiritual and temporal authority, insisting that it has not attempted to extend its powers in a degree incompatible with the sovereign rights of the King, but that it is the Prussian government which has arrogated to itself rights in opposition to the immutable institutions of the church, and even in violation of treaties. The Pope rejects the suspicion that he is inclined to refuse to its fullest extent the principle that obedience and submission are due from subjects to their temporal rulers.

A worthy old rector of a parish in the department of the Nièvre, over which he had been pastor nearly 20 years, received a better piece of preferment from his bishop about a fortnight ago. He was greatly beloved by his flock, and was no less attached to them himself. He expected to have a parting scene which would be painful to his feelings when he came to leave them, and he determined to take himself off quietly, without letting any one into the secret. The other morning, therefore, he left the village at break of day, and journeyed towards his new benefice; but he had not walked above a league or two before his departure became known, the inhabitants of the village assembled en masse, and determined to fetch him back. Away they went after him, and in due time overtaking, not the lost sheep, but the stray shepherd, brought him back in triumph to his rectory, where they have since kept a guard of six men posted round his house to hinder any new attempt at flight. The old rector, overcome by the rather boisterous testimonials of affection from his parishioners, has subsequently written to the bishop, begging to decline the preferment offered to him. —Galignani's Messenger.

DEATHS.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH.

It is our painful duty to announce the melancholy intelligence, of the death of the Right Rev. Herbert Marsh, D.D., F.R.S., Lord Bishop of Peterborough, and Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity, and formerly fellow of St. John's Coll., Cambridge. After a long illness, his lordship departed this life, at the Palace, Peterborough, on the evening of Wednesday last, the 1st inst., in the 83d year of his age. This eminent prelate took the degree of B.A. in 1779, on which occasion he was the second wrangler; that of M.A. in 1782; and the degrees of B.D. and D.D. in 1792 and 1808 respectively. In 1807 he was elected the Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity, was raised to the Bishopric of Landaff in 1816, and in 1819 was translated to the see of Peterborough. In the earlier part of his life, he published his "Translation of Michæli's Introduction to the New Testament," with original notes, many of which are learned disquisitions on points of great moment. This work was succeeded by his "Letter to Mr. Archdeacon Travis," containing information of indisputable value to those who are engaged in the study of the Greek manuscripts of the New Testament. After he became the Lady Margaret Professor, he put forth his "Comparative View of the Churches of England and Rome"—a volume of much importance at the time, and rendered still more important by subsequent events. His "Lectures in Divinity," containing a more systematic arrangement of the several branches of theology than had previously appeared; together with many volumes and treatises, the very titles of which would occupy a considerable space, and of which it may be affirmed that they all abound in matter most useful to theological students. Whatever came from Bishop Marsh's pen evinced unwearied assiduity in research, extreme acuteness in discovering circumstances that could elucidate the subject of his investigation, and the utmost clearness in stating the result of his labours. In fine, his writings are certainly destined to rank with those which will "profit in the after-time."

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

Palace, Gloucester, April 24, 1839.

MY DEAR ARCHDEACON,

YOU will perhaps remember the passage of the Charge to the Clergy at my late Visitation, in which I spoke of the Bill which was before Parliament last session for Clergy Discipline, and expressing my wish to learn the sentiments of our Clerical Brethren on the subject, before it became again the matter of discussion in the legislature. A Bill has now been introduced into the House of Lords, which appears to be substantially the same as that of last Session. I shall be happy to be put in possession of the sentiments of my Clergy on this subject as soon as they have had an opportunity of considering it. This may be done either by petitions to the Legislature, or by any other means which may appear to themselves most appropriate.

Believe me to be, with great truth,

My Dear Archdeacon,

Your most faithful brother and servant,

J. H. GLOUCESTER and BRISTOL.

To Archdeacon Thorp, of Bristol.

The following is the passage of the Charge alluded to:—

"No measure has yet been enacted on the subject of Church Discipline, for correcting the intolerable evils which exist in the present state of the law. Two bills have been propounded for this purpose; both aiming at the same end, but by very different courses. The first, which passed the House of Lords two years ago, committed the trial and censure of delinquent Clergymen to the Bishop in person, assisted by a legal assessor and a jury of incumbents: the other, which was introduced and withdrawn within the last few weeks, assigned the jurisdiction in all such cases, in the first instance, to the Court of Arches, from which there lay an appeal to the Privy Council. In regard to the object itself, the removal of that scandal which, at present, an unworthy clergyman has it in his power to bring upon our profession, and the prevention of injury resulting to his flock, there can, I think, be no difference of opinion; nor have I any thing to add to the remarks which I made on this topic at our last meeting. My reason for now adverting to it is this—it has been alleged as a main argument against the first of the two modes of proceeding just mentioned, that it is generally disliked by the clergy. It would be satisfactory to me to learn, before the matter is again brought into discussion, what are the sentiments entertained by you upon these opposite plans, or upon any other method, by which justice may be procured to the Church and the individuals concerned, without the present evils of enormous expense and endless procrastination."

This Association has a Capital exceeding £100,000, invested in Government securities, which is increasing from £13,000 to £14,000 per annum. It is founded on the principle of Friendly Societies, and in conformity with their Act of Parliament, whereby it obtains the highest rate of interest on its investments, and other important advantages appertaining thereto. It also secures a larger return to its annuitants than any other mode of life insurance.

It is worthy of remark that the present annuitants exceed £20 each, the estimated value of which may be taken at £400; but if a person, aged say 20, insures his life for that sum, the annual payment will be about £10, whereas for one of these annuitants it is only £2.

This Society, therefore, is admirably adapted to those persons whose income will cease, or be diminished on death, as by a trifling yearly sacrifice they may thus provide for their widows, children, or other relatives, to the extent of six annuities.

Prospectuses and every information may be had on application at the Office as above, where the annual reports may also be inspected.

THE CHURCH MAGAZINE,

Under the Direction of Clergymen of the Church of England.

THE chief object of this Magazine is to bring before the minds of the great body of the English people, in plain language, and in a Christian spirit, facts and arguments in defence of those Scriptural and Catholic principles by which the Church of England is contradistinguished from all sorts of Dissenters, whether Romish or Protestant.

The unexampled success which THE CHURCH MAGAZINE has already received, and which has given it, in point of circulation, the lead of all the Monthly Magazines connected with the Church, encourages the hope that it will meet with general support, and prove highly advantageous to the Church of our country in a time of great persecution and danger. The style, language, and price are equally adapted for the mass of the people, and the Clergy and other Churchmen will render essential service to the glorious cause they love, by recommending it to all within the range of their influence.

Each Number will contain a finely executed Portrait of some distinguished Clergyman, worth double the price of the Magazine.

A Portrait of the LORD BISHOP of WINCHESTER will be given in the June Number.

Portraits of the Bishop of London, the Rev. Dr. Hook, the Archbishop of York, the Rev. E. Bickersteth, and the Rev. George Townsend, have already appeared. Portraits of the other Bishops, and of the Rev. Dr. Dillon, the Rev. H. Melvill, the Rev. T. Daic, of London, the Rev. F. Close, of Cheltenham, the Rev. H. M'Neile, of Liverpool, the Rev. Mr. Stowell, of Manchester, and others, will be given as soon as possible.

Patronised also by Archbishops, Bishops, and many hundreds of the other Dignitaries and Clergy, by a large portion of the Magistracy and Influential Gentry, and by Conservative Clubs and Associations in general.

THE CONSERVATIVE JOURNAL, which has just been placed under the sole Editorial management of a CLERGYMAN, well known in the literary world, is conducted on those sound Church and Constitutional principles on which the Throne of the Monarch, and the Liberties of the People, have been preserved, and Great Britain raised to that lofty position of glory and renown which she has so long enjoyed above all the nations of the earth. And by its consistent and unflinching vindication of those grand principles of religion and loyalty which Pitt, Wellington, Peel, and the many other illustrious Statesmen, supported by the wealth, character, and Intelligence of the British Empire, have so nobly advocated, THE CONSERVATIVE JOURNAL has attained its present highly-respectable, extensive, and increasing circulation.

As the alienation of the minds of the people from the eternal principles of truth and virtue, and the great prevalence of Revolutionary opinions, are to be attributed to the wide circulation and demoralizing tendency of Radical Papers, so by a like extensive distribution of right-principled Conservative Newspapers, the pestilence must be checked, the mischief remedied, and the good old English feeling restored to its wonted state of health and influence, and the salvation of our liberties and birthrights as Britons and Protestants thereby permanently secured.

To the Nobility, the Clergy, the Gentry, and the middle classes of society, we therefore confidently appeal for an increase of their patronage and support. We call upon them, as devoted champions of our venerable Church—as zealous defenders of the ancient Monarchy of these dominions—as firm supporters of the Laws and Liberties of the realm—to further our efforts to uphold and propagate the sacred principles so long cherished by every loyal and virtuous Englishman. Be it remembered, this is not a time for lethargy or indifference; at such an important crisis, "England expects every man to do his duty" cheerfully and nobly. And in no way can good to our country be more cheaply, more easily, or more effectually accomplished, than by the circulation of Newspapers of sound Constitutional principles.

THE CONSERVATIVE JOURNAL is published every SATURDAY MORNING and AFTERNOON, price SIXPENCE, with the latest Foreign, Colonial, and Domestic Intelligence, and is now one of the Largest, Cheapest, and most Elegant Newspapers in the Kingdom; and the Proprietors are determined to spare neither trouble nor expense to present to the public a paper of first-rate character and ability, worthy of the great cause to which it is devoted. It contains the largest quantity of well-digested information on all Political, Ecclesiastical, Agricultural, Commercial, Military, and Naval affairs, as well as the Parliamentary Debates, Law and Police Reports, the Gazettes, the Funds, the Prices of Shares, the Corn, Cattle, and Coal Markets, and all the interesting News of the Week; and as every thing objectionable to the virtuous mind is scrupulously excluded, it may be laid upon the table of every Church and Conservative family.

The Morning Edition is sent off by the morning Mails, by which it reaches within the distance of about 200 miles from London. The Afternoon Edition is published with the latest News, in time for the evening Post. Subscribers, in ordering the paper, must state which Edition they prefer. Orders received at the OFFICE, 12, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND, LONDON; and by any Bookseller or Newsvender in the Kingdom.

"We have seldom read a work containing more just views of what Education should be. It is worthy the attention and serious perusal of every teacher, every parent, every magistrate, or divine, in the Kingdom; and if read, will not be without its effects in convincing Society, not only of the highest importance of Education itself, but of the imperative necessity which exists of its being both publicly and privately fixed on the sure basis of religion; of a religion in spirit and in truth, drawn from the fountain head, the word and will of the living God."—Educational Magazine.

THE SCRIPTURAL CHARACTER of the ENGLISH CHURCH CONSIDERED, in a SERIES of SERMONS, with Notes and Illustrations.

By the Rev. DERWENT COLERIDGE, Master of Helleston Grammar School, Cornwall.

The series of Sermons, bearing the above title, were written exclusively for perusal, and are arranged as a connected whole. The author has adopted this form to avail himself of the devotional frame of mind, presupposed on the part of the reader, in this species of composition; but he has not deemed it as necessary to preserve with strictness the conventional style of the pulpit, for which these discourses were never intended: they may, consequently, be taken as a series of Essays, or as the successive chapters of a general work.

London: John W. Parker, West Strand.

Now publishing,
SCRIPTURAL BREVIAES; or, SHORT COMPENDIUMS of FAITH and PRACTICE, for the SICK; consisting of Exhortations, Passages of Scripture, and Prayers, applicable to the several circumstances of their Visitations.

The object of the Breviates, of which the above is a portion, is to assist the Parochial Clergy in the Pastoral care, by providing suitable religious instruction for their Parishioners, of every age and condition. The whole form a series systematically arranged for the instruction both of Children and Adults in the principles of the Christian Religion, and the duties of their respective callings, in conformity to the rule of faith, doctrine, and discipline of the United Church of England and Ireland.

It is intended that the number of the Breviates should be increased as the opportunity may offer, should they prove to be acceptable to the Parochial Clergy, and to the public generally.

The Scriptural Breviates are published at the rate of 2s. per 100 copies. As it is very desirable that they should circulate through the medium of the Booksellers in Town and Country, the Breviates cannot be sold in smaller quantities than 50 copies; but the 50 may be either a perfect set, as of Class K; or consist wholly of any one Breviate in the Class.

The set of Breviates for the Visitation of the Sick, Nos. 1 to 50, (preceded by The Order for the Visitation of the Sick, The Ministration of Private Baptism of Children in Houses, and The Communion of the Sick,) may be had bound a volume, price 2s. In orders for this volume, it should be called Scriptural Breviates, Volume K.

A Case for the Pocket, to hold a Set of loose copies of the Breviates, has also been prepared. The price of the Case without the Breviates is 1s. It should be ordered as The Case for the Scriptural Breviates, Class K.

The Order for the Visitation of the Sick; Private Baptism; and Communion of the Sick; may be had separately, price 2d. London: John W. Parker, Publisher; to whom Communications for the Editor may be addressed.

It may, therefore, be employed as a general present to one, who either neglects the Scriptures through carelessness, or despises them through scepticism, which will find itself here confronted with the collective wisdom of all nations and ages."—Evangelical Magazine.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. Hodgson, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

THE DEAN OF CHICHESTER in the Chair.

At the General Meeting of the SOCIETY held on Tuesday, the 4th of June 1839, a letter was read from the Rev. J. C. Wigram, Secretary to the National Society, transmitting a copy of the resolutions unanimously adopted at a public meeting of the friends of National Education in the principles of the Church, at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Tuesday, the 28th of May last. He says, "The Committee of the National Society feel assured that the proceedings on that occasion will be regarded with interest by the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE; and I have to request that you will communicate the resolutions to the Standing Committee, at the first convenient opportunity."

The following are the resolutions forwarded by Mr. Wigram:—

Proposed by the Earl of CHICHESTER, seconded by the Lord Bishop of LONDON,

1. "That it is an object of the highest national importance to provide, that instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity should form an essential part of every system of education intended for the people at large; and that such instruction should be under the superintendence of the Clergy, and in conformity with the doctrines of the Church of this realm, as the recognised teacher of religion."

Proposed by the Lord ABINGER, seconded by the Lord Bishop of SALISBURY,

2. "That the incorporated 'National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church,' by the formation of numerous schools in immediate connexion with the Church, has rendered eminent service to the cause of Christian education; and that the general principles upon which it was originally founded ought still to be adhered to in every plan for extending more widely the benefits of education, whether by multiplying National Schools, or by enlarging the circle of instruction in those which already exist."

Proposed by the Rev. Dr. Hook, seconded by the Lord BARRINGTON,

3. "That this meeting contemplates with satisfaction the establishment of Diocesan and Local Boards of Education in connexion with the National Society, having for their object the extension of the benefits of education, contemplated in the foregoing resolution, as well as the establishment and encouragement of schools for the education of the middle classes, upon principles conformable to those which are embodied in the Society's charter."

Proposed by the Dean of CHICHESTER, seconded by R. BETHELL, Esq., M.P.,

4. "That, in order to supply one of the principal defects which at present limit the operations of the National Society, and retard the improvement of education throughout the country, efforts should be made to raise the qualifications of those persons who are employed as teachers in our Parochial and National Schools; and that the resolution, adopted by the National Society in August last, to establish a Training Institution for the education of young persons intended for that office, is calculated to promote the attainment of this object."

Proposed by the Archdeacon of SALOP, seconded by Sir THOMAS DYKE ACLAND, Bart. M.P.,

5. "That, in order to furnish the National Society with the means of establishing a Training Institution, and generally extending and improving the Education of the Poor, an immediate exertion be made to increase its resources, and that the Committee of Inquiry and Correspondence be requested to act as a Committee for the purpose of soliciting and collecting subscriptions, with power to add to their numbers."

The Secretaries then stated, that the Standing Committee, having taken the subject into their consideration, recommended that at the General Meeting in July the sum of 6,000*l.* should be granted by the Board, in furtherance of the objects set forth in these Resolutions.

The Secretary informed the Meeting, that the Standing Committee, having considered the expediency of presenting an Address to Her Majesty on the subject of National Education, had agreed to recommend to the Board the adoption of the following Petition to both Houses of Parliament in lieu of such Address.

"To the Honourable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

"The Humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

"Sheweth,

"That the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE was the first Society in the kingdom which came forward to advocate and support the general education of the people; and that, from its first establishment in the year 1698, it has endeavoured, by all the means in its power, to promote religious instruction upon the principles of the Church of England.

"That, whilst your Petitioners disclaim all interference with the education of those who differ from them in their Religious principles, they are of opinion that the authority of the State ought not to be given to any scheme of Education which involves principles contrary to the constitution of the Church, as established by the laws of the land.

"That your Petitioners strongly object to any plan of National Instruction which may remove the education of the people from the pastoral care and guidance of the clergy.

"That your Petitioners have heard with extreme regret that a scheme of education has been laid before Parliament, under the sanction of a Committee of her Majesty's Privy Council, by which teachers of any sect or religion, however erroneous, or hostile to the Church, may be admitted to give instruction in the school, or schools, established under the authority of the State; and that into such school, or schools, erroneous versions of the Holy Scriptures may also be introduced under the same authority.

"That such scheme appears to your Petitioners to be calculated to throw discredit upon the authorized version of the Bible, to encourage indifference and error, and to be injurious to the interests both of the Established Church and of Christianity itself.

"Your Petitioners, therefore, most humbly pray that your Honourable House will refuse to support or sanction the said scheme, or to grant any portion of the public money for these, or any such purposes."

It was agreed, on the motion of Mr. J. POYNTER, seconded by the Rev. J. ENDELL TYLER, that this be adopted.

It was also agreed that it be advertised in the public newspapers, and that Sir ROBERT H. INGLIS, Bart., be requested to present it.

The Rev. SANDERSON ROBINS brought forward the motion, of which he had given notice at the last General Meeting. After a full consideration of the subject, the resolution was put to the Board in the following shape; and having been approved by Mr.

ROBINS, and seconded by the Rev. Dr. HOOK, it was adopted unanimously.

"That the Standing Committee be requested to appoint forthwith a sub-Committee, charged specially to consider the best means which may be devised for the counteraction of the anti-Christian and immoral principles that are at present obtruded on the young and inexperienced, in our populous towns, and throughout the country."

It appeared from the statement of a member of the Tract Committee, that a Tract recently placed on the permanent catalogue, entitled "Christian Evidences," was of a nature calculated to do good in counteraction of the efforts of infidels.

The Hon. and Rev. S. BEST brought forward the motion of which he had given notice at the last general meeting, namely,—

"That on all motions proposing alterations in the rules, and for the election of the Standing Committee and officers, Members be allowed to vote by letter, through the medium of the District Committees."

This was seconded by Sir HENRY MARTIN, Bart., and negatived.

The following letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Calcutta to the Secretary, dated Bishop's Palace, Calcutta, March 10, 1839:—

"Rev. and dear Sir,

"1. My time is so unusually pressed upon by Lent lectures weekly at the cathedral, and theological ones three times each week at Bishop's College, during the affecting absence of both the reverend professors, from severe illness, that I must cast myself upon the venerable SOCIETY's indulgence this winter for a brief letter.

"2. I have most cordially to thank the SOCIETY for the generous gift of another 500*l.* for the promotion of the designs of the SOCIETY in my diocese. This rich and most opportune supply shall be employed to the very best purpose.

"3. I am unable at present to send you a copy of Dr. Mill's learned and most curious Christa Sangita, from the circumstance of the second part of it being out of print. The moment my excellent and dear friend (to whom, if you see him, please to express the thousand regrets which continue to attend him from all here who enter into the subject of Christianity) can find time to complete his revision of this lacking portion, and it is again printed, your SOCIETY shall have the desired copy.

"4. It will be interesting to the SOCIETY to learn, that the Rev. Mr. Parish, late chaplain at Kurnaul, furnished two copies of this wonderful work to the Pundits, whom I met at Thunassar, by the hands of the Rev. Armand Mussech of that station.

"5. I have now the honour of enclosing the opinions of the several members of the District Committee of your venerable SOCIETY, on the subject of the Native Schools taught by heathen masters, which I thought it desirable to obtain, in addition to those by the reverend missionaries themselves before transmitted.

"6. If the SOCIETY should please to concur in these opinions, the sooner the schools are dissolved the better. My own judgment, I confess, agrees with the decision of my brethren.

"7. The venerable archdeacon is still your Calcutta secretary, and, I think, has been sending you home a little money: he is a most energetic friend to your sacred cause.

"I have the honour to be,

"Rev. and dear Sir,

"Your most affectionate and faithful,

"D. CALCUTTA.

"Rev. W. Parker, Secretary.

"P. S. The opinions are, 1, from the Ven. Archdeacon Dealtry; 2. Rev. H. Fisher; 3. Rev. H. Fisher, jun.; 4. Rev. W. V. Ruspini; 5. Rev. R. B. Boyes; 6. Rev. R. Boswell; 7. Rev. J. H. Pratt."

The above clergymen concur in opinion that the principle of employing heathen teachers in these schools is bad, and that no success attends the teaching. It appears from the communication of Archdeacon Dealtry, that these heathen masters teach the children, in the course of their lessons, that the Gospel is a fable.

It was agreed that the recommendation of the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, with regard to the dissolution of these schools, be carried into effect.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Australia, dated Sydney, Nov. 29, 1838, from which the following are extracts:—

"Upon the subject of our general proceedings I have nothing at this time of very prominent importance to communicate to the SOCIETY. Our Diocesan Committee continues its operations with much regularity and success. Owing to the recent arrivals of emigrants from the United Kingdom, the deficiency of mechanics has been very much abated, and the works at the several churches are now proceeding, with every prospect of being terminated within reasonable intervals. The church of St. Thomas, at Mulgoa, I have already consecrated. Those at East and West Maitland, at Penrith, at South Creek, and at Goulburn, are in a forward state; and St. Andrew's, in Sydney, with several others in various parts of the country, are in various stages of progress, especially the church of St. Peter, at Cook's River, which has been carried on with uniform energy, highly creditable to the gentlemen who act as trustees of the fabric. The Society for Propagating the Gospel has rendered a service little to have been anticipated when I quitted England, by supplying the colony with the ministrations of fifteen additional clergymen. In testimony of the gratification with which their arrival is regarded, I am most happy to say that the Diocesan Committee has voted to each of them a donation of 50*l.* to provide for their more comfortable settlement in the colony.

"We are proceeding, as opportunities are offered, in erecting and repairing school-houses in various parts of the colony, by means of the grant which the SOCIETY was pleased to entrust to me for that purpose. We have purchased grounds, and completed substantial buildings in several places, as Hunters' Hill, Dural, Wollongong, and others; and we are proceeding to do the same at Windsor, Bathurst, and Narellan, and many other places in succession, as the wants of any particular district are made apparent. Authority is also given for the erection of School-houses, which may also be used temporarily as Churches, at three stations on the river Colo, at Sackville Reach, on the river Macdonald, at Mangrove Creek, and at Brisbane Water; all of them settlements of rising importance on the river Hawkesbury, and containing great numbers of children. I must beg leave, also, to introduce to the attention of the SOCIETY, a subject connected indeed with a very distant part of the colony, but in its consequences, probably not inferior to any which I have yet had occasion to mention: I mean, the expedition under the command of Captain Sir Gordon Bremer, which has recently sailed for the purpose of establishing a settlement on the northern coast of New Holland, at a harbour named Port Essington. Not only the number of individuals composing the crews of the ships in this expedition, and the great augmentation which, in all probability, those numbers will speedily receive from the access of settlers, to a spot so favourably situated for commercial purposes, rendered me anxious that some attention should be paid, from the outset, to the establishment of the ordinances of religious worship in this new colony; but I was additionally compelled, by knowing that there are, in the immediate vicinity of Port Essington, many islands, whose inhabitants have been Christianized by the Dutch missionaries, from Java and Amboyna; and as our countrymen must be brought into contact with them, I was desirous that we might be able to manifest to them, that we also were worshippers of the same God, and not be mistaken for heathens, without any form of worship or sense of religion, as (to our discredit it must be spoken) the English have hitherto appeared in most of the colonial enterprises which they have undertaken. Unfortunately, and much to the regret of Sir Gordon Bremer, the commander of the expedition, I had no clergyman whom I could detach from duty here to proceed to the northern coast: but I have most earnestly besought the interposition of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL to engage the services of one qualified to fill so important an office. In the mean time, not to be wanting in providing, as far as I had means, for the future institution of religious worship in that distant settlement, I engaged to furnish a Church, composed wholly of wood, and so framed that it admitted of being taken to pieces, for stowage on ship-board, and can be easily erected when it reaches the place of its destination. It is a very solid and capacious structure, perfectly adapted to the warm climate for which it is intended, and capable of containing a numerous congregation. I also supplied the expedition with Bibles, Prayer-Books, and publications of the SOCIETY, to the amount of 20*l*.; and I have now to solicit that, with its accustomed liberality when any religious undertaking is to be accomplished, the SOCIETY will sanction my drawing upon it for the sum of 120*l*. for these special purposes; viz. 100*l*. towards the cost of the Church, and 20*l*. for books. I most earnestly pray and sincerely wish, that both of these donations may tend, by God's blessing, to encourage and maintain reverence for the truths and principles of the Christian faith; where, in the absence of any preacher thereof, our countrymen are placed under circumstances too apt to render them forgetful of, and indifferent to, those means of grace, of which there is nothing at hand to put them in remembrance. I am fully persuaded, from what I observe around me, that irreligion is first introduced, and afterwards becomes inveterate, in new settlements and communities, chiefly in consequence of the total omission of all provision for the maintenance of external piety with which they are too commonly undertaken. The ordinances of God are undervalued and omitted, and, as a necessary consequence, God himself is neglected and forgotten. and I feel assured that the SOCIETY will approve the steps which I have taken to prevent, if possible, in one instance at least, the recurrence of this too prevalent evil. Commending the SOCIETY and its undertakings most earnestly to the favour and protection of the Almighty,

"I remain, Reverend Sir,

"Your very faithful humble servant,

"W. G. AUSTRALIA."

"Rev. W. Parker, Secretary," &c. &c.

The Board granted 100*l*. towards the Church at Port Essington, and books to the amount of 20*l*. for the purposes of the expedition.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, applying for a grant towards the erection of a Church at Chester in this diocese. The cost would be at least 800*l*.; the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS has contributed 100*l*.

The Bishop also requested aid towards rebuilding a Church at Greenwich in New Brunswick, which was burnt down in the course of last winter.

He adds, that there are ten Churches in poor settlements in his diocese, to each of which a grant of Books for the performance of Divine service would be a valuable gift.

It was agreed to grant 100*l*. towards the Church at Chester;

The sum of 25*l*. towards the Church at Greenwich;

And a quarto Bible and Common Prayer Book, and a book for the Communion Table, for each of the ten Churches mentioned in the Bishop's letter.

A letter was read from Archdeacon Spencer, dated Woodstock, Bermuda, 28th Feb., 1839, announcing his safe arrival in the colony, after a stormy and dangerous voyage. He incloses a tabular return of the number of Schools under his visitation, by which it appears that they are twenty in number, and that they afford instruction to upwards of 860 children. He requested a grant of books for the use of these schools.

Books to the amount of 25*l*. were granted.

A letter was read from the Rev. G. W. Tyrrell, Secretary to the "Down and Connor Diocesan Church Education Society," requesting a grant of books for the use of Schools about to be opened, under the auspices of that institution. The Schools, which it is intended to establish in those parishes in which none at present exist, will be placed under the care of the parochial clergy; masters and mistresses being properly selected for the purpose. It is also the object of the SOCIETY to assist Schools already established.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Down and Connor, strongly recommending this application, and expressing a hope that something may be done by the Board. His Lordship estimates the number of members of the Church in his united diocese at 100,000 persons.

The Board agreed to grant books to the amount of 100*l*. and to hold out a hope of further assistance should application be made.

Letters were read from the Rev. R. Carus Wilson, vicar of Preston, and the Rev. J. Rigg, incumbent of St. Paul's, Preston, requesting the grant of Bibles and Common Prayer-Books, for the purpose of lending to the poor in the course of pastoral visiting in that town.

The Board agreed to grant books to the amount of 48*l*. 7*s*. 6*d*. (the cost of the quantity required), on this application.

Several grants of books for the performance of Divine Service were agreed to.

Several letters of acknowledgment were laid before the meeting.

The following donations were announced:—

Banbury, Deddington, and Chipping Norton Committee, by the Rev. Chas. Barter	£50	0	0
Brentford Committee, by the Rev. Dr. Stoddart	50	0	0
Hornsey Committee, by the Rev. Richd. Harvey	10	0	0

Sixty-five new members were admitted at this meeting.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

DURING the last month meetings in aid of this SOCIETY have been held at Leominster, Ludlow, Monmouth, Ross, Uttoxeter, Rugeley, and Lichfield. At all of these meetings, the Bishop of Nova Scotia attended, and stated the urgent necessities of the Colonial Church.

The friends of the SOCIETY will be happy to hear of the formation of a Parochial Association in one of the principal London parishes—St. Giles's in the Fields. It is hoped that the other great Metropolitan parishes will not be backward in following the example set by St. Giles's.

With a view to facilitate the proceedings on such occasions, the following paper has been circulated by the Parent Society:—

"SUGGESTIONS FOR THE FORMATION OF PAROCHIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

"To circulate a short address, signed by the Clergyman of the parish, explaining to his parishioners the main objects of the SOCIETY, and giving a summary of its history and present operations.

"To call a meeting of the parishioners in the School-room (provided with a map of the principal spheres of the SOCIETY's missionary labours), and to invite the neighbouring gentry and clergy to attend.

"In many places it may be expedient to keep up an interest in the SOCIETY's operations, by means of quarterly meetings; and it is believed that a great stimulus would be given to the exertions of its friends, if the duty of Christians 'to propagate the Gospel in foreign parts,' were made the subject of an annual sermon."

The following resolutions would furnish an opportunity of setting forth the importance of missionary exertions:—

"1. That it is the duty of every sincere Christian to contribute according to his means to the extension of Christ's kingdom, by making known his Gospel in foreign lands.

"2. That the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, being the oldest Missionary Society in connection with the Church of England, has an especial claim to our support.

"3. That an association be formed in this parish, to be called the — Parochial Association, in aid of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL. That the subscriptions be due on the 1st January for the year then commenced, and be paid to the local Treasurer or Secretary, as soon after as may be practicable.

"4. That the bishop of the diocese be requested to accept the office of President;—the nobility, principal gentry, and dignitaries of the Church, that of Vice-Presidents.

"In small rural parishes, the Clergyman would naturally preside at the meeting, and act as Treasurer to the Association. In many cases the National Schoolmaster would probably undertake the duties of Secretary and Collector.

"5. That all persons subscribing annually, or collecting in one year, be members of the Committee; and all persons subscribing one penny a month, or one shilling a year, be members of the association.

"The Secretary should always have on hand a supply of the SOCIETY's Reports and occasional publications, together with forms for receiving subscribers' names, blank receipts, and ruled books, for the convenience of those who are willing to engage as collectors.

"The great object of parochial associations is, to enrol all members of the Church as contributors of something; and if only five shillings a year in addition were sent up from each parish, the Society would be enabled to maintain twenty additional missionaries."

NOVA SCOTIA.

"Picton, Jan. 1st, 1839.

"It afforded me inexpressible pleasure to return to my labours in Picton. Until the waves of the Atlantic rolled between us, I did not think that I was so much attached to the spot of my early exertions in the ministry, and I hope the affectionate regard which subsists between the people and myself, will be carefully cherished by us both.

"The Church at Picton has been much improved during the past year, by several outward repairs and internal alterations. It is now a very pretty and interesting building, but what is of more importance, the people who assemble there are evincing a greater sense of religion than formerly, and giving evidence that the services under God are able to make them wise unto salvation. May the period arrive when your Clergy will all be enabled to assert that 'the Lord is daily adding unto the Church such as shall be saved.'

"The people are poor, and the assistance I obtained in England, has been lent to a deserving object, and I hope to a grateful people. Perhaps I shall be pardoned in stating that I received a donation of 10*l*. for this object from the Rev. Dr. Warneford, the distinguished subscriber to Church Building Associations, and I rejoice to learn a munificent benefactor of King's College, Nova Scotia. A similar sum was given by C. O. Cambridge, Esq., brother of the venerable Archdeacon. This testimony of Christian sympathy emanating principally from my native county, Gloucestershire, was very gratifying to my own feelings, and will, I hope, be instrumental in advancing the honour of God.

"You will learn with much joy, that the building erected at Pugwash, as a place for the diffusion of the principles of Universalism, has been purchased for less than half its original cost, by members of our Church, and when finished will be a very handsome building. Two years ago, and Universalism overspread that section of the province, and under great excitement, this building was erected by the proselytes to Universalism, and a minister in the United States was invited to become their pastor; but no Universalist preacher ever crossed its threshold, no infidelity was ever disseminated within it. The prayers of our Church have already on several occasions been offered there, its walls have already echoed with Jehovah's praise, which, within its portal, has already been proclaimed 'the truth as it is in Jesus.' Thus does God overrule the wicked devices of men for good, making even the violence and madness of the people subservient to His eternal glory.

"The past year, on review, presents many instances of the divine blessing, which should animate me in the discharge of my high and important duties, many tokens of a Saviour's love, which should win us all to Christ. That the review may have this desired effect—'That we may continue His for ever, that we may daily increase in His Holy Spirit, more and more, until we come to His everlasting kingdom,' is my fervent prayer."

Extracts from a letter of the Rev. Jas. C. Cochran to the Bishop of Nova Scotia.

"Lunesburg, Jan. 8, 1839.

"Spared to the commencement of another year, I am permitted to forward for the information of your lordship and of the venerable SOCIETY my usual report for that which has just closed.

"I have performed service during the year 175 times; travelled 2,001 miles; made upwards of 55 visits to separate settlements; 461 pastoral visits; and 170 visits to afflicted individuals.

"There has been little variation in the routine of parochial duty or events during the year. I continue regularly to attend St. James's Chapel at Mahone Bay, seven miles distant, every second Sunday, preaching in town a third time in the evening. I have also a Thursday evening lecture in town. I have to regret being still without such assistance as will enable me to meet effectually the spiritual necessities of this large parish, containing 480 square miles, and 7,959 persons. I can only refer to, and confirm, the statements in my last on this subject, and indulge the hope that the Lord may incline more labourers to come to the aid of the few now scattered along this southern shore of Nova Scotia, on which, both eastward and westward of Halifax, so many languish for want of the bread of life and the ordinances of the Church.

"We have been greatly delighted to hear of the general interest that seems to have been awakened in England in behalf of the SOCIETY, and of the increase which their funds have received. In this province, too, the people will not be backward; and as soon as the Church Society is in full operation, will, no doubt, be ready to do what they can for the supply of our destitute places.

"While the improvement in temporal things is thus gratifying, I trust that we are not without some grounds of encouragement in the infinitely more important matter of growth in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. If iniquity and carelessness and worldly-mindedness, alas, too much abound, we are occasionally cheered by evidence that our labours are blessed; and we would also fondly hope, that even where good fruit does not yet appear, something may, notwithstanding, have been done for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, which may not be fully known until the great and final day.

"My schools continue to afford me much satisfaction, and engage much of my thoughts and time."

Extracts from a letter of the Rev. Henry Fry, one of the Society's Australian Missionaries.

"Cape Town, Cape of Good Hope,
"March 2, 1839.

"I send you a hurried letter to inform you that the ship Trafalgar, of Liverpool, in which I sailed for Sydney on the 20th of November, was unhappily wrecked here on the 21st of February. By the mercy of God, exemplified in several providential circumstances, we were all rescued from the wreck, with a single exception of a Mrs. Troy, killed by the fall of the mast. She was the mother of nine children, all on board. We remained ten hours on the wreck, the sea beating over us, amid the vain efforts of the crew and people on shore to rescue us. Boats sent from town could not approach us, and the surf prevented landing. We were at last saved by a rope sent on shore. An Independent minister, named Beck, afforded Mrs. F. and myself refuge: we have since removed to the house of Mr. Judge, garrison chaplain, a most kind man. The Governor here has granted me 150*l.* to take us on to Sydney; the passage to which is almost as expensive from hence as from Liverpool. We sail this day in the Arabian of Bristol for Sydney.

"You may imagine how complete has been the destruction, and imminent the danger, when even the ship's papers could not be saved. The women got on shore almost naked. My loss has been very great, including a large collection of books, 700 or 800 vols., and all the Fathers of the six first centuries. This is equally deplorable and remediless; but in gratitude for the preservation of our lives all losses are forgotten. We have got a few clothes to proceed with.

"I was fortunate in the captain, crew, and passengers of the lost Trafalgar. You will be pleased to hear that I scarce heard an oath during the passage. We had regular divine service, weather permitting, and Scripture readings, in which all, from the captain to the cook, read their verse. This was delightful. I had it in my power to make myself of use, and am pleased to think that though weak, sinful, and inconsistent in my conduct, 60 or 70 persons will not think of me unkindly or unfavourably. The poor Troys will be sent on by subscription. Mrs. F. takes with her one of their little ones. I also have managed to get passage for two well-behaved but destitute boys, half on my credit, the other half on that of an uncle. The other passengers either proceed on or settle here."

During the past month the SOCIETY has sent out three more missionaries to the principal spheres of its operations. The Rev. John Samuel Le Gros, B.A., of Downing college, Cambridge, sailed about the 14th of May, for Jamaica. The Rev. J. Jennings Smith, M.A., of Catharine hall, Cambridge, sailed yesterday for Sydney, Australia, making the twenty-fifth clergyman sent to that colony within the last two years. Mr. Richard Lonsdell, of Trinity college, Dublin, sailed a few days ago for Canada, where he expects to be ordained by the Bishop of Montreal.

The 138th anniversary of this SOCIETY was held on the 17th of May, at the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside. There were present, among the company, the Archbishops of Canterbury and Armagh, the Bishops of London, Winchester, Ely, Bangor, Llandaff, Ripon, Chichester, Lincoln, and Nova Scotia; the Venerable Archdeacons Pott, Cambridge, and Hamilton; the Rev. Drs. Mill and D'Oyly; the Lord Mayor, Alderman Copeland, Sir C. Hunter, &c. The Lord Bishop of Ely preached the sermon, taking his text from St. Matthew's Gospel, chap. v. ver. 16. The SOCIETY's income during the past year exceeded that of 1837 by upwards of 5000*l.* It was announced that the government had agreed to appoint a bishop for Newfoundland and Bermudas, in the place of the two archdeacons of those islands. The archdeaconry of Newfoundland is at present vacant; and it is understood that Dr. Spencer, the Archdeacon of Bermudas, (brother of the present Bishop of Madras,) will be nominated to the new see. The allowance from government will be the same as that granted to the two archdeacons, which amounted together to 700*l.* per annum, and the SOCIETY have agreed for the present to vote 500*l.* per annum in addition.

Committee.

All Clergymen, who are Members of the Society, and twenty-four elected Lay Members.

At the Annual Meeting of the SOCIETY, held on Tuesday, May 7, 1839.

The Right Hon. the PRESIDENT in the chair.

The Report of the Committee was read as follows:—

"The Committee are thankful at the close of the third year of the SOCIETY's operations to be able to state that the piety of its design, and the excellence of its constitution, are daily gaining for it more and more of that support on which, instrumentally, its usefulness and stability depend.

"At a period when the state of our country furnishes material upon which all the powers of darkness seem but too ready to work—when Popery is striving by every effort to regain her former ascendancy—when Infidelity is eating like a canker into the heart of our crowded cities and manufacturing towns—and when new townships and hamlets are springing up in every direction, without any due provision for their spiritual care, it is a matter of deep thankfulness to see this SOCIETY so supported; and a privilege of no ordinary kind to co-operate in promoting the interests of religion by means so eminently calculated as those it furnishes, to put into fuller exercise that beautiful machinery presented by our parochial system, in furthering the objects of a National Church.

"The designs of this SOCIETY, which are fully set forth in its regulations, may not improperly be once more repeated in the words of the synopsis published by the Committee:—

"SYNOPSIS OF THE SOCIETY.

"OBJECT.—The salvation of souls, with a single eye to the glory of God, and in humble dependence on his blessing, by granting aid towards maintaining faithful and devoted men to assist the incumbents of parishes in their pastoral charge.

"PRINCIPLES.—That in a Christian land a Church established should adequately provide for the spiritual instruction of all the people; and that it is part of the duty of a Christian Legislature to furnish the Church with means to this end; but that, if the Legislature should fail of this duty, then, rather than souls should perish, Christian men must join together to supply the deficiency, and make the Church as effective as it is in their power to do.

"PLAN.—The CHURCH PASTORAL-AID SOCIETY strictly regards the wants of the Church on one hand, and the order of the Church on the other. It would make the Church efficient; it would carry the Gospel, by means of the Church, to every man's door, but it never obtrudes its aid: the incumbent must apply for aid, or sanction the application; and until this is done, the SOCIETY cannot move. When aid is sought and granted, the parochial minister must say how it is to be employed;—he must nominate the persons to be employed—he must engage them, as well as superintend and entirely control them; all that the SOCIETY does is to provide for their remuneration; and while so doing, to ask satisfactory proof of their qualifications.

"The erroneous statements which are so frequently made render it advisable to keep this simple statement of the design and principles of the SOCIETY constantly in view.

"OPERATIONS.

"Since the last Report the operations of the SOCIETY have been greatly enlarged. From the date of its institution, on the 3d of February, 1836, it has voted, in all, 267 grants to the incumbents of 219 parishes or districts, having a population of 1,587,468 souls. Some of these grants were but temporary, or, through change of circumstances, were not required to be continued.

"The new grants during the past official year, amount to 8,038*l.*, and have been made for the maintenance of eighty additional curates, and eight lay-assistants, and eight for miscellaneous aid, and to eighty-seven incumbents of parishes having a population of 557,773 under their charge. The total existing grants of the SOCIETY amount to 16,712*l.* per annum, to 194 incumbents of parishes and districts with a population of 1,460,113, in whose spiritual care, before the aid of this SOCIETY, only 212 clergymen were engaged. The average income of the incumbents is 155*l.*; and ninety-six have not parsonage-houses. The average population to each is nearly 8,000 souls, varying from 1,500 to 30,000. Besides the amount of the SOCIETY's aid, the incumbents have themselves, chiefly from personal resources, guaranteed the sum of 3,483*l.* to meet the grants; so that, when all are in operation, a sum of 20,045*l.* will be made available, for the maintenance of 188 more clergymen, and twenty-nine lay-assistants for this population of 1,460,113. There are now engaged in their important labours 115 curates and twenty-six lay-assistants, and the grants on their account amount to 10,337*l.* per annum.

"Besides the above-mentioned grants for curates, &c. eighteen, amounting to 1,001*l.* have been made towards the finishing or fitting up as many new chapels or school-rooms, to be licensed for public worship, in hamlets or townships distant from the parish churches, containing a population of 79,000 souls. Further, the grants for curates to labour in such distant places have directly led to the erection of twelve new churches or chapels, and to the appropriation to the services of the Church of seven unoccupied chapels formerly used by Dissenters."

FUNDS.

"In respect to the SOCIETY's funds, the Committee are thankful to be able to report a progressive increase. The income of the SOCIETY during the year ending 31st March, has been about 10,400*l.*, being an increase on the previous year of 2,400*l.* It has also fully met the expenditure of the current year. Thus has the Lord provided. But when all the existing grants come into operation by the nomination of curates to occupy them, the required income will be more than 16,000*l.*, even if the Committee were to declare their purpose to extend its aid no further; but this they cannot do. With thousands upon thousands, in this professedly Christian land, perishing for lack of knowledge, and living in worse than heathen ignorance and vice, they cannot doubt that the members of the Church of England will be stirred up to increased exertions and liberality, to meet the pressing wants which this SOCIETY seems designed to be the instrument of supplying.

The Committee have peculiar satisfaction in stating, that during the past year the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells, and the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, have become Vice Patrons of the Society*, and that the list of the clergy who are among its supporters, has increased by the addition of 200 names.

The Committee are happy in being able to announce the formation of 54 new auxiliaries and Associations, with 7 additional corresponding members, who have kindly offered to assist it in furthering the prosperity of the Society.

The auxiliary Associations form an important source of income, and the Committee hope to see them considerably increased and enlarged; and they have reason to feel assured, that if the clergy would call the attention of their people to the proceedings of the Society, a considerable augmentation of its funds might reasonably be expected."

Some interesting extracts from the correspondence of the SOCIETY are given in the Report, which concludes thus:—"The Committee refrain from adding to this Report any further extracts from the SOCIETY's correspondence, but beg to call attention to the Appendix, in which will be found an important series of letters in reply to a circular addressed by them to the clergy aided. These letters, at the same time that they furnish matter of deep interest to the Church at large, exhibit most fully the very important operations of this Society.

"But among the many results which the Committee rejoice in having it in their power to present to the subscribers and friends of the CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY, there is one which they would neither lose sight of themselves, nor fail to present to the consideration of their fellow-Christians. It is this: that the operations of the SOCIETY have greatly tended, as an instrument in the hands of God, to call forth the sympathies of the great body of the Church in the spiritual necessities of thousands of our fellow-immortals, and in the sufferings and anxieties of those faithful and laborious ministers, to whose pastoral care they have, in the providence of God, been committed. Before the existence of this SOCIETY, little, comparatively, was known of the difficult circumstances in which a large body of the clergy are placed; surrounded, in many instances, by a population too vast to permit them to exercise that pastoral superintendence which the spiritual need of the people required, and their own hearts suggested. In the midst of a multitude almost as sheep without a shepherd,—earnestly desiring the co-operation of fellow-labourers in the vineyard, but unable from their slender means to procure such help,—how many faithful ministers and servants of the Lord have been continually bowed down by the burden of responsibilities which they could not discharge, but which they dared not attempt to relinquish! How many, too, amidst their scattered flocks, whose cases have needed their kindly visits, and whose hearts were open to receive from their ministry the consolation with which they themselves were comforted of God, have, unknown to their pastors, been removed from the fold! How many an infidel, blasphemer, Sabbath-breaker, and drunkard, has thus gone to his account unwarned!

"To supply the need which the growing exigencies of the people thus present, and which the legislature has hitherto failed adequately to provide for, the PASTORAL AID SOCIETY was instituted; and the Committee trust the truly affecting cases of spiritual destitution, and insufficient ministerial provision, weekly presented for their consideration, will not have to be declined on the plea of an exhausted treasury. They will not, they cannot, believe that Christian people will fail to extend still more widely that liberality which God has enabled this SOCIETY to be instrumental in calling forth. They will not for a moment yield to the supposition. Rather will they continue to respond, as they have hitherto been enabled to do, to the pressing appeals for help that are constantly brought before them, resting in the full assurance that Christian love, the blessed bond which should bind together as one the members of the mystical body of Christ in union with Him, who is both the Lord Jehovah and the sympathizing Brother of His people, will, as fresh demands for its exercise are made, expand and increase according to the spiritual necessities of a growing population. The Committee, when they contemplate the fact that multitudes of their fellow-countrymen are now in the enjoyment of the means of grace, through the operations of this SOCIETY, desire to be filled with praises to Him who has enabled them to do so much; but they must not, they dare not, withhold the fact, that the light which they have been instrumental in extending, has, in some cases, done little more than exhibit the fearful darkness which yet remains. They see before them a mighty work; a work which the increasing appeals for help from every quarter of the country tell them will require much larger contributions than have hitherto flowed into their treasury. They trust, indeed, that the time will come when the legislature will deem it a primary duty to make that national provision for the spiritual welfare and instruction of the people which the present necessities of the Church, and the eternal interests of the population, so evidently demand. In the meantime, the Committee feel it to be a duty in themselves, and they would earnestly press the same on all their fellow-Christians, to do what in them lies to supply, by voluntary contributions, that assistance which the legislature has hitherto neglected to provide."

On the motion of the Lord Bishop of CHESTER, seconded by the Earl of WINCHELSEA, and supported by the Lord Bishop of RIPON,

Resolved, "That the Report of the Committee now read be adopted, and that this Meeting desires to return thanks to Almighty God for the abundant blessing with which He has been pleased to accompany the operations of the SOCIETY."

On the motion of the Lord Bishop of WINCHESTER, seconded by the Lord Bishop of LLANDAFF, and supported by the Lord Bishop of CHESTER and the Rev. CHANCELLOR RAIKES,

Resolved, "That this Meeting, deeply concerned for the spiritual necessities of our increasing population, and sincerely sympathizing with those ministers of the Church who are overburdened with the anxieties and difficulties of their charges, rejoices in the progress of a SOCIETY which, by enabling such ministers to engage well-qualified assistants, must, under the blessing of God, be largely instrumental to the promotion of His glory in the present and eternal welfare of their fellow-countrymen."

On the motion of the Rev. EDWARD TOTTENHAM, of Bath, seconded by the Hon. WM. ASHLEY,

Resolved, "That this Meeting, regarding it as a primary duty of a Christian state to provide for the religious instruction of the people, and lamenting that, at the present time, no such provision is adequately made, would earnestly press upon the members of the Church the importance of soliciting from the legislature the performance of its duty, and of supplying, in the meanwhile, as far as possible, by self-denying contributions, the existing deficiency, till, through the favour of Almighty God, the benefits of our parochial system shall so appear as to awaken in the minds of both the people and the rulers of this land, an anxiety to extend the blessings of the Church of England to the full measure of the wants of the population."

On the motion of the Very Rev. the Dean of SALISBURY, seconded by the Rev. JOHN HARDING, Rector of Blackfriars,

Resolved, "That, considering the extent of this SOCIETY's pecuniary engagements, and the pressing demands which are continually made upon its resources, this Meeting pledges itself, and would call upon the members of the Church of England generally, to make renewed and earnest efforts in order to augment its funds, and to entreat, in fervent prayer, a still larger measure of the blessing of Almighty God upon every department of its operations."

On the motion of SIDNEY GURNEY, Esq., seconded by the Rev. F. TRENCH, of Reading,

Resolved, "That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Right Hon. Lord ASHLEY, M.P., for presiding over the business of the Institution from its commencement, and for his kind attention to the proceedings of the Meeting; to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of WINCHESTER, for his Sermon preached last evening, on behalf of the SOCIETY; to the Committee of the past year; and to the Honorary Secretaries for their services; and that the Gentlemen whose names are now to be read by the Secretary do constitute the Committee for the year ensuing."

A Report of the Speeches, &c., in 24 pages, 18mo, is published by Messrs. Seeley, Fleet-street, price One Penny.

The Full Report of the Committee, with the Annual Sermon, by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of WINCHESTER, and an Appendix, containing several Letters from the Clergy aided, List of Subscribers, &c., will be shortly published by Messrs. Seeley, Fleet-street, price One Shilling, of whom may be had all the SOCIETY's publications.

Contributions will be thankfully received at the SOCIETY's Office, Temple Chambers, Falcon-court, Fleet-street; at Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co.'s, Birch-lane; at Herries, Farquhar, and Co., St. James's-street. Also at Messrs. Hatchard's, Piccadilly; Seeley's, Fleet-street; and Nisbet's, Berners-street.

Also, any sum may be safely, and free of expense, remitted through Country Bankers, who will desire their London correspondents to credit the same to "Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., Bankers, for the CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY." In either case, the Contributors are requested to write to the Secretaries, advising payment.

TWENTY-FIRST REPORT OF THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE ENLARGEMENT, BUILDING, AND REPAIRING OF CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

MAY 31, 1839.

It is with mingled feelings of thankfulness and regret that the Committee present their Annual Report on this the twenty-first meeting of the SOCIETY. While they desire to acknowledge with unfeigned gratitude the providential favour which has prospered their labours, and the support by which they have been enabled during the past year to carry forward the work entrusted to them, their satisfaction is damped by the recollection that, in some instances, the aid which they have given has been less than could have been wished, through the scantiness of the means placed at their disposal. The last Annual Report stated the balance at the disposal of the SOCIETY on the 31st of March, 1838, to be 4,518*l*. This has been increased by contributions from diocesan committees amounting to 4,393*l*, and by donations amounting to 1,085*l*. To these must be added the annual subscriptions, which did not exceed 516*l*; so that the whole fund which they had at their command for the year was 10,512*l*. They have ventured, however, to pledge themselves for more than such a statement would seem to justify, in confidence that any present deficiency will be made good by contributions from the country at large before the sums granted shall be called for. Such contributions may be looked for before many months shall have elapsed, in consequence of a call by a Queen's Letter, which, it is hoped, will shortly be issued, a memorial for it being now in progress. But though the necessities of the places from which applications have been received have induced the Committee thus to act, they regret to state that, in many instances, they have felt themselves compelled to make less liberal grants than, under more favourable circumstances, they would gladly have made. The consequence is, that while the number of applications received during the past year has been greater than in any other, except that of 1837, which exceeded those of the present year by fourteen only, the money granted has been considerably less in proportion. It has fallen short of the sum granted in 1838 by 5,775*l*. This is the more regretted by them, because the applications which came before them continued to increase in number as the year advanced; and they cannot but feel pain in even appearing to check the growing desire which is thus manifested through the country for additional means of worshipping God in the communion of the Church of England. They would, however, take encouragement from the very desire, though they have been themselves unable to satisfy it. The effect of the establishment of this SOCIETY has been to make the people of this country know and feel the value of the services of our Church, and to awaken a wish, which had slept in the breasts of many, to do something for the glory of God and the extension of His public worship. Many individuals have put their hands to this work, and made large and willing offerings for the purpose of promoting that pure and reformed religion which has been planted, and it is humbly hoped will be perpetuated, by the blessing of Divine Providence, in our land.

Nor do the Committee think that they should be taking too much upon themselves were they, in some degree, to attribute to the example set by this SOCIETY the pious liberality which has been shown by individuals in the building and endowment of churches in England, without any pecuniary assistance from this SOCIETY, and the progress that has been made of late in carrying forward the same work. Of this progress a striking proof is furnished by the list of grants (amounting to nearly 20,000*l*.) made by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, in the course of the last eighteen years, to forty-six places out of England. But whatever may be the cause, it is a matter of congratulation to the members of this SOCIETY that so strong a desire is manifested in various places to join in the communion and partake of the benefits of the Church. Another circumstance is worthy to be mentioned, as it may gratify the feelings of those who take a part in promoting the designs of this SOCIETY; namely, that wherever a new church is built, the establishment of a school is almost sure to follow,—a becoming, and it may almost be said a necessary, appendage,—whereby national education is connected with the national Church, and hallowed and blessed by its prayers and thanksgivings.

The munificent legacy of 2,000*l*. from the late Lord Farnborough, which was announced in the last year's report, has been received; and the Committee have very great pleasure in now reporting another of the same amount, and free of legacy duty, from the Rev. W. Richardson, of Chester; and one of 300*l*. from the late P. Frost, Esq., of Cheltenham. The Committee have also the satisfaction to report that, during the last year, Diocesan Societies have been established, in connexion with the Parent Society, in the dioceses of Ripon and Peterborough; and that district associations in aid of its funds have been formed in the counties of Rutland, Berks, Leicester, and Essex, and also one for Windsor and Eton.

To the diocesan societies they have been chiefly indebted for the timely supplies which have, in some degree, replenished their exhausted resources during the last year. They desire, in particular, gratefully to acknowledge the sum of 1,000*l*. which has been sent from that lately formed in the diocese of Ripon.

The Committee cannot doubt but that the Christian liberality which has hitherto supplied them with the means of carrying on the good work in which they are engaged, will not now be withheld from a society which, during twenty-one years of its existence, has expended no less a sum than 262,616*l*., and has thereby promoted the building of 317 new churches or chapels, and the enlargement of, or otherwise extending the accommodation in, 1,289 parish churches or parochial chapels; thus providing 435,382 additional sittings, of which number 318,869 are free and unappropriated.

In conclusion, the Committee entreat the members of the SOCIETY at large to unite with them in renewed thankfulness for the humble offering which they have been enabled year by year to make to the honour of God; and for the blessing which has so long attended their endeavours to encrease the means of pure Christian worship.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE DUE OBSERVANCE OF THE LORD'S-DAY.

THE Eighth Annual General Meeting of this Society was held on Monday, May 6th, in Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Among those present we noticed the Bishop of Chester, the Rev. Chancellor Raikes, Lord Mountsdown, J. Hardy, Esq., M.P., J. Plumptre, Esq., M.P., Mr. Sheriff Wood, Rev. Dr. Short, Rev. J. H. Stewart, and a large number of influential clergymen and laymen.

After prayers, the Bishop of London, having been moved to the chair, said, he thought it unnecessary to state the objects of the Society to the Meeting, as all present were already sufficiently acquainted with them. He had now for several years been deeply convinced that the objects at which it aims are most intimately connected with the well-being of religion in this country, and if so, of course, with the welfare of the country itself. (Hear.) He felt the greater readiness in associating himself with this Society at first, and greater satisfaction now in belonging to it, when he considered how important its operations were in giving increased efficiency to the ministry, in which he had the honour to hold office. With respect to the Sabbath itself, he need hardly point out to the meeting that its due observance was absolutely necessary to the efficiency of a Christian ministry. (Hear.) And although a due respect for this sacred ordinance, and the great privileges connected with it, must ultimately be formed in the minds of the people by the labours of the Christian ministry itself, yet much must be done to bring the people within the sphere or verge of that ministry; they must be persuaded to the duty of sanctifying the Sabbath by instruction, and by friendly counsel and importunity; they must have the self-enjoyment of those privileges which at present they do not enjoy. A nascent desire to profit by God's institution of the Sabbath is first to be awakened in them, and then to have resort to those ordinances, and those labours of ministers, by which that spirit of devotion will be kindled into a flame. (Hear.) There was no use in preparing churches, schools, and Bibles, unless they could induce men to give themselves one day in seven at least to make use of them. (Hear, hear.) If men should not devote that portion of time to attaining the means of grace which God himself had set apart for religious purposes, how could they ever arrive at a high state of Christian perfection? rather, how could they ever be extricated from the low, grovelling state of mind which marked the life and conversation of those who habitually profaned or neglected the Sabbath? (Hear, hear.) The tone of public feeling with respect to the observance of the Lord's-day had been very much changed for the better of late years. True it is that the desecration of that day is carried on to a very great and alarming extent, not only throughout the kingdom, but even in this great metropolis; but even there, if we take into account the facilities afforded for the evil machinations of the agents of works of darkness, the paucity of ministers of religion, the great want of accommodation for public worship, we have some grounds for looking, with feelings of satisfaction and hope, on the state of the public mind, with regard to the Lord's-day. For, although there is much to darken the picture before us, there are some gleams of light which bespeak the dawning of better times. (Hear.) The progress of the Society in the neighbourhood of London was extremely encouraging. Many most respectable tradesmen had formed themselves into Associations for promoting the observance of the Sabbath, and had imposed on themselves obligations which they had strictly observed, and wherever they had been opposed they had called in the aid of the law, and had done so with success; and this opened an important and painful topic. The law, as it now existed, was utterly inefficient as a means of enforcing the due observance of the Sabbath. But let him not be misunderstood when speaking on this point; he spoke of promoting the observance of the Sabbath by the enforcement of the laws against those open and public violations of the Sabbath which prevented its proper observance by others. (Hear.) It was not in the power of human laws to enforce a due observance of the Sabbath, because it could only be duly observed by those to whom it was a delight. (Hear.) It is only the power of the grace of God that can make men honour and delight in the ordinances of the Sabbath. He considered that it was right to prevent ungodly and careless men from pursuing courses which would have the effect of preventing others, who would be careful of the observance of the Sabbath, from being so; not intending to punish, as objects of punitive infliction, those who break the fourth commandment, but to protect those who were desirous for, and had a right to its observance. There was a very great difference between passing a law to make people go to church, and a law to prevent marketing on the Sabbath. Of the one law he should disapprove, for it would be futile to attempt to make men conform to religious services in which they did not feel any interest. But the other law was strictly within the province of municipal regulation, and justly a matter of police, and that was all the Society attempted. (Hear.) It endeavoured to obtain from the legislature an extension of those powers which the magistrates now possess and which have been found inefficient, owing, perhaps, to the change in the value of money, and the state of society, and which ought to be carried out by the legislature of a Christian country. (Hear.) He trusted that there was a prospect of the legislature doing its duty, and listening to the claims of the whole Christian community, by preventing the irreligious from interfering with their rights. (Applause.) The observance of the Sabbath could not produce any evil, while it certainly would produce incalculable benefits to those who now neglected their duty in this respect. Therefore he would say to the Society—Pursue your course discreetly, quietly, and temperately, but firmly. (Applause.) He might congratulate the meeting on the failure of an attempt likely to be made of carrying the desecration of the Sabbath still further. He did congratulate them on the measures taken to stop the proposed national regulation for the transmission of letters on the Sabbath through the Post-office. (Applause.) When the Committee waited upon him upon this subject, he agreed with them that the effect of such a regulation would be to increase the desecration of the Lord's-day, and therefore he readily acceded to the measures they proposed; and he had the satisfaction of heading a deputation to the Government: and although they did not obtain a distinct promise, they heard enough to satisfy them that the measure in question was not likely to be adopted. (Hear.) But he would not like the friends of the Society stop here, and sit down, as if the danger was wholly over; but let them be prepared to guard against that and every other innovation of the Sabbath which would have a downward tendency, and to deteriorate the state of public feeling with regard to this most important Institution. (Applause.) He spoke, of course, under strong feelings on this subject, as a minister of religion; but he hoped the duty of preserving a proper respect and observance of the Sabbath would not be considered the duty of ministers only, but that all who were Christians ought to be concerned in securing that object. It was only within a few years that this duty was talked of as belonging to the clergy only; but in these days of liberality and extension of sentiment, it was but right that this privilege and right—for so it was, as well as a duty,—should be extended to all. Those who opposed the due observance of the Sabbath, from considerations of a political nature, would do well to attend to the opinion of one of the most eminent, as well as most eloquent expounders of the law and constitution of these realms—Judge Blackstone. In order to show that this was a matter which was not to be exclusively referred to the clergy, he would read to the meeting what had fallen from that Judge, and they would perceive that, though a layman, he could feel as strongly on the question as the ministers of religion. Judge Blackstone says,—“Profanation of the Lord’s-day is an offence against God and religion, punished by the municipal law of England. For besides the notorious indecency and scandal of permitting any secular business to be transacted on that day, in a country professing Christianity, and the corruption of morals which usually follows its profanation, the keeping one day in seven holy, as a time of relaxation and refreshment, as well as for public worship, is of admirable service in a state, considered merely as a civil institution. It humanises by the help of conversation and society,”—he means Christian society, and that godly conversation which takes place during the intervals of public worship on the Sabbath between the members of the same Christian family, and Christian friends—“It humanizes by the help of conversation and society, the manners of the lower classes, which would otherwise degenerate into a sordid ferocity and savage selfishness of spirit.” Who can go into those districts where the neglect of the Sabbath is most rife, without seeing this? But this state of things is not to be imputed to them, as originating altogether with them, for they are not furnished with the means of instruction. (Hear.) And let it be remembered that these are the words, not of a clergyman nor a teacher of religion professionally, but of a layman who knew the value of the Sabbath. “It enables the industrious workman to pursue his occupation in the ensuing week with health and cheerfulness. It imprints on the minds of the people that sense of their duty to God, so necessary to make them good citizens, but which yet would be worn out and defaced by an unremitted continuance of labour, without any stated times of recalling them to the worship of their Maker.” (Hear, hear.) This latter assertion was borne out by the evidence taken before the Parliamentary Committee on this question. An eminent physician stated, that the seventh day’s rest was a striking proof that the appointment of that day had emanated from a benevolent Deity, as that seventh day’s rest from toil was absolutely necessary as a cessation of labour; for the constitution of man would be soon worn out, and if he did not thus rest, his labour would be comparatively worthless, and he would go re-embittered and uninvigorated to the toils of the following week. (Hear.) And this was not only true in regard to the poorer classes; all those engaged in laborious occupations, whether of mind or body, could not but feel the force of the remark. He did not wish to speak presumptuously of himself, but he could say, that after labouring in the week, oftentimes almost worn out with anxiety and toil, although, in matters connected with religion, if he did not fail on the seventh day to lay aside all secular pursuits, and to have recourse to that rest and Christian consolation which the Sabbath provided, it would be utterly impossible for him to bear the fatigue which he had to undergo. This was felt by the professional men of the metropolis. He spoke not of the clergy, for they had to labour on that day more than on other days, and this should commend them to the sympathy of lay Christians. A physician used to say whenever a clergyman visited him for advice, “You must have another Sabbath-day in the week; you must have a complete intermission from toil, otherwise you cannot go on.” Professional men had given a striking testimony to this truth, by the readiness and unanimity with which they came forward against the threatened desecration of the Lord’s-day by the transmission of letters on the Lord’s-day. (Hear.) They could have no motive but the honour of God, and a deep reverence for the Sabbatical Institution, and its importance to themselves and their dependents. They could not be driven, even by strong temptations, to give up some portion of that valuable time, or to remit the performance of those duties of which they felt the value, and, therefore, they came forward and protested against the measure, not only as a measure of scandal to a Christian country, but as being an inhuman and cruel one to themselves and to the people at large. (Applause.) Feeling a growing attachment to the Society, and a deep confidence in the propriety and success of its objects, he did not hesitate to give it his warmest support.

After which the Bishop of Chester addressed the Meeting.

The other speakers were J. Hardy, Esq., Rev. Chancellor Raikes, J. P. Plumtre, Esq. M. P., Mr. Sheriff Wood, and Rev. E. Grindrod, Wesleyan Minister.

SPIRITUAL DESTITUTION OF BETHNAL GREEN, LONDON.

THE parish of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, containing a population of more than 70,000 souls, and forming a part of the vast metropolis of England, has been frequently brought under the notice of the public, and considerable efforts have, from time to time, been made to relieve an extent of poverty, destitution, and misery which there exists, and forms a striking contrast with the wealth, magnificence, and luxury of other districts of the metropolis.

At a late period Bethnal Green was a rural district, and contained the country houses of many wealthy merchants. Now, it is inhabited by a large manufacturing population; many of them the descendants of those who, on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, left their country, rather than abjure their Protestant faith; and many, who have been driven from their habitations, by late improvements in London. This growing population has been left without any adequate addition of churches, schools, or clergymen; and the parish has become the resort of persons, who, from abject poverty or vicious habits, desire to live secluded from observation. It is scarcely possible to imagine an equal amount of population, in a Christian country, more destitute of the means of religious and moral instruction; and this too in the immediate vicinity of a city, which has been abundantly supplied with churches by the piety and wisdom of our ancestors; and which owes no inconsiderable part of its wealth to the industry of the artisans and labourers who are congregated in the district of Bethnal Green.

In the year 1828 a church was erected in Bethnal Green, by the Commissioners for Building additional Churches; and the London Episcopal Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews has a chapel in the parish; but still there are only three churches, affording accommodation for scarcely 5,000 persons, and five clergymen, to maintain and diffuse the truths and precepts of our holy religion, as taught by the Church of England; in a population of 70,000 persons, who are wholly unable to provide places of public worship for themselves.

The inhabitants are also nearly destitute of the means of instruction for their children. Some years since, a National School was built for them; and an appeal has lately been made for funds to build another school, in connexion with the new church; but the great mass of these poor children will still be without instruction; although the happy effect produced by the National School, on the habits and character of the population around it, holds out the best encouragement, widely to extend the blessings of a Christian education.

A great effort is now commenced to rescue this parish from its present unhappy state, and to show the effect of an adequate number of churches, schools, and clergymen.

To accomplish this, not fewer than ten additional districts must be formed, and provided with the means of public worship, instruction, and pastoral superintendence. The poverty of the inhabitants renders it essential, that some provision should be made for the support of the clergymen, for whom residences must also be provided; and the total expence of building and endowment cannot be estimated at less than 75,000*l*. It is hoped, that a portion of this sum may be contributed by the Commissioners; and also, from the small amount that remains of the Metropolis Churches’ Fund; and assistance in the building of the schools, will no doubt be obtained from a parliamentary grant, as in a recent case in the neighbourhood; much, however, must remain to be done by individual benevolence. The object which is aimed at is of incalculable importance, not merely to the present, but to future generations; and should it happily be accomplished, and the blessed influence of the Gospel of Jesus Christ made manifest, in a district now in a state of extreme religious destitution; the example will not fail to be followed in other populous parishes, and the best effect will result to the whole metropolis. The strongest encouragement is afforded to undertake this good work, in the happy consequences, which, under God’s blessing, have already resulted from building additional churches in the neighbouring parishes of Stepney and Limehouse, by means of the Metropolis Churches’ Fund; the arrangements for the erection of schools has followed, as a matter of course, that of churches; and a spirit of Christian devotion and charity is awakened in those districts, to an extent which could hardly have been anticipated in so short a period.

Those who are engaged in this good work humbly trust in God for his blessing on their labours; that he will, as in ancient days, open the hearts of those who have the ability, freely to give of their substance, and strengthen the hands of those engaged in a work, tending more than any other to advance his glory, and the temporal and eternal welfare of his creatures.

DR. BRAY’S ASSOCIATES.

THE Associates of the late Rev. Dr. Bray have just published their Report for the year 1838.

They express their continued readiness to attend to such applications for Clerical Libraries, as shall be made to them under the prescribed regulations.

The objects of this Association (founded by Dr. Bray in the beginning of the last century) are the education of Negro children in British America, and the foundation of theological libraries. The libraries are intended for the use of those clergymen who have not access to public libraries, and whose pre-ferment does not enable them to procure such books as they require.

The expenses of this department are chiefly defrayed from the annual contributions of Associates.

Each Associate pays 1*l*. 1*s*. annually, or 21*l*. on his admission.

The Associates keep a depôt of books; and they suggest, in their Report, that any gentlemen who possess duplicates or odd volumes of good theological works, may render essential service by placing them at their disposal.

Communications are addressed to the Secretary, 52, Hatton Garden.

NATIONAL EDUCATION IN THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH.

On Tuesday, May 28, a meeting of the members and friends of the National Society for the purpose of carrying out the system of national education in the principles of the Established Church was held at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's.

The chair was announced to be taken by his Grace the Archbishop of CANTERBURY at two o'clock, but long ere that hour, or indeed one o'clock had arrived, the street was literally crammed with carriages, and crowds of fashionably dressed ladies, of nobility as well as commoners, formed an almost impenetrable phalanx on the footway leading from St. James's-square and St. James's-street. Among the fairer sex, too, were to be seen many of the Right Rev. prelates and numerous members of both branches of the Legislature, supported by others of high consideration in the country. Within a very few minutes of the doors having been opened the large room was filled in every corner, and it was only with the greatest difficulty, and by the use of the most persuasive arguments which could be advanced, that those who attended for the press were enabled to reach the upper part of the room. The same obstruction, of course, presented itself when the Most Rev. Chairman, followed by the other prelates and the members of the Committee, attempted to reach the platform, and it was not until several minutes had elapsed that that end was accomplished.

Around his Grace we observed the Archbishops of York and Armagh; the Bishops of London, Winchester, Bangor, Gloucester and Bristol, Chester, Chichester, Hereford, Lincoln, Llandaff, Norwich, Rochester, Salisbury, St. Asaph, and St. David's; Bishops of Elphin, Nova Scotia, and Vermont, United States; Lord Ashley, M.P.; the Marquis of Cholmondeley, Viscount Stornont, M.P., Sir C. The Archbishop of CANTERBURY having read prayers, said, that as the chairman of that meeting, it was his duty to inform them, that it had taken place in consequence of measures which had been in the course of preparation for more than fifteen months by the National Society, who, having matured and digested their plans, had resolved, at another meeting of the Society which had been held on the 1st instant, that the assembly of the present occasion should be summoned for the purpose of promoting national education in the principles of the Established Church. (Hear, hear.) That object of their meeting, whether they considered it as something affecting the general interest and welfare of the country, or as philosophers regarding the temporal hopes of individuals, they were bound to obey his commands, bringing all men as near as they might to regard his sacred truths, and to walk in the path leading to everlasting salvation. (Hear.) To effect that object at the present moment was viewed by the country as one of paramount importance. As such it had been felt by the country at large, whose integrity of feeling as well as whose duty with respect to the subject, was very great; that it had been regarded as such was manifest by the large assembly which had on the present occasion gathered together. (Hear, hear.) He trusted that the result of that feeling would be the firm establishment and wide spreading of the system of the national education in the principles of the Established Church. (Hear, hear.)

The Earl of CHICHESTER then rose to move the first resolution, which ran in the following words:—"That it is an object of highest national importance to provide, that instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity should form an essential part of every system of education intended for the people at large: and that such instruction should be under the superintendence of the clergy, and in conformity with the doctrines of the Church of this realm, as the recognised teacher of religion." It was a matter of the greatest satisfaction to him to learn, that from the fact of the Committee having selected him to move the resolution, that body did not propose that the subject should be made one of political consideration or discussion. (Hear, hear.) It must be his first duty, as it was the uppermost desire of his heart, to express himself in terms of fitting response to the call which had been made upon them by the Society, and by their most Rev. chairman, to support them in the great cause they had undertaken, of providing a Christian education for the people of the country. (Hear, hear.) It was the duty of every one to exert all his energies in the promotion of a system of Christian education for the benefit of his fellow creatures. The resolution stated that it was an object of the highest consequence that instruction of a Christian character should be given to the people, and that that instruction should be given under the clergy of, and according to the doctrines of the Church of England. If that resolution had stated that no education should be given, unless such as was given under the superintendence of the clergy of that Church, he could not have yielded to it that support which in its present form he was able cordially to do. (Hear, hear.) It was a matter of great policy that the clergy of the Established Church should be looked up to as the most responsible, and therefore as the safest, teachers of religion in their schools. (Hear, hear.) And he was convinced of this, that however strongly he might feel the importance of charging that principle of toleration on those who dissented from their Church—however far he might go in his opinions as to what might be a proper principle of toleration towards those who differed from them in their modes of discipline, yet he was satisfied that if they wished to promote the feeling towards themselves, they must not expect to do so by relaxing in the discipline of their own Church. (Cheers.) It was not by agreeing to a plan by which the ministers of the Established Church would be, as it were, ousted from their position of pastoral superintendents over the education of the youth of their respective parishes that they could ever hope to teach, inculcate, and mature those principles of Christian charity which it ought to be considered as their bounden duty to cherish. (Cheers.) He had always thought that the most perfect way of teaching the poor was where the clergy presided over what he would denominate manageable schools. (Hear, hear.)

The Bishop of LONDON then rose to second the resolution. He had, he said, accepted, without the least hesitation, the duty which had been imposed upon him by the Committee of seconding the resolution which had so ably been proposed by the noble Earl who had just sat down, because he felt the deepest interest in the subject, as the bishop who was presiding over a diocese containing innumerable streets and alleys, all, or very many of which, were, he lamented to say, crowded with thousands of neglected children—children who at the present moment were nearly, if not totally, destitute of means of obtaining religious instruction. (Hear, hear.) The resolution which had been offered to the meeting consisted of two parts—one of which, he conceived, would command the immediate assent of all those who, being themselves Christians, knew the ends and the value of Christianity, and the other would not fail of obtaining the concurrence of the immense majority of those who were then listening to him, and who were persuaded of the opinion that in this country Christianity was taught in the highest purity and with the most efficient instrumentality by the Church of which they were members. (Cheering.) In pleading in support of the great principles embodied in the resolution, he was most desirous to express himself with the utmost, the most perfect candour. He was anxious—the National Society was anxious, to preserve an attitude of defence, rather than to attempt to assume the position of hostility towards others who had expressed opinions and convictions of a somewhat different character. It was, however, well known to be a matter of impossibility to assert truth without being compelled to combat with error, or to rear the fabric of practical religion without at the same time, in effect, tending to the demolition of that fabric which the mistaken zeal of others had attempted to erect. He should be sorry, if in the course of the observations he should feel called to make during his remarks, he should utter a single expression which could excite a feeling of dissatisfaction in any of those who might that day hear him, or in the breasts of those who might not on that occasion be present; who, although sincere Christians, still dissented from certain doctrines of the Established Church. But he must speak the truth. He did not stand there for the purpose of compromising the sacred duties or principles of their holy religion, (cheers,) considering, as he did, that they were indissolubly connected with the most vital interests of the Established Church itself. That instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity ought to form a part of any system of education intended for the people at large, for the whole or any part of that people, was a position which was so nearly self-evident, that he found it a matter of no inconsiderable difficulty to attempt a proof of it without dealing out a series of axioms which to a Christian audience would be superfluous and wearisome. In fact, the very enunciation of the proposition went to involve the proof of it: for unless they were to narrow the meaning of the term "education" within limits which would deprive it of the most important of its functions, they must understand it to imply the complete training of the moral agent to a fitness for the accomplishment of the ends of his being; and then, if it were religion which made known those ends, and the methods by which they were accomplished, and if the Christian religion were true, it followed, that an education which did not comprise instruction in its truths and precepts, was no education at all, but a partial, limited, imperfect, and inadequate training, which left unfinished and undone far more than it attempted to effect. (Loud cheers.) But he need not spend any arguments in opposing those persons who contended that religious instruction ought to form no part of a system of education. (Renewed cheers.) Perhaps there were no such persons except those who were themselves without religion. The parties with whom they had to contend were, in the first place, those who divided their schemes of education into two, one secular and one religious, (hear,) the former being the substance, the latter only the accidence, and who would provide for the people at large one uniform system of secular instruction, leaving them to superadd, if they should chance to desire it, the religious part, or of providing such a religious system, in some cases uniform, as the sands which constituted the surface of a desert were uniform (cheers); in others so contrived to act with a kind of shifting machinery, that although all those who were to be taught could not profit by it at one and the same time, they might all be brought under its operation in turns, and extract from it different kinds of religion, according to the taste of those who directed such operation. Now, the National Society and its advocates held, in opposition to all projects of that description, that for a Christian people there must be one system of education—one and indivisible as to its principles and leading features—one of which instruction in all those branches of knowledge which might fit man for the duties and circumstances of active life might form an important part, but which made the one thing needful—the instruction in the will of God, and in the means of performing it—the training up of an accountable being destined for immortality (cheers) by methods of God's own appointment, to the enjoyment of his rich inheritance. (Loud cheers.) Entirely to separate religious instruction—that is instruction in the Bible as it is understood by the Church (hear)—from instruction in every other branch of knowledge, and to make the latter the main business of education, the subject of common consent, the object of common interest, while the former was thrust into places and corners, and was either taught with a vagueness and generality which destroyed its specific qualities as an instrument of truth and sanctification, or was committed to the casual and desultory inculcation of teachers not concerned with the main process of education at large—what was that, he would ask, but to degrade religion from its just supremacy, to deprive and disparage the pearl of great price, and to accustom those who were the objects of instruction to regard the best instruction of all, that of religion, with indifference and contempt? (Hear, hear.) No; that Society maintained that religion should be interwoven into the whole tissue of education for a Christian man, that it should be the guiding sanctifying principle of the whole, that around which the entire system should turn, each luminary of truth and knowledge revolving in its proper orbit, religion being the centre from which a genial and holy light was diffused through every part. (Loud cheers.) They protested, therefore, against the doctrine and would resist the efforts of those associated friends of education, who argued for the exclusion of religion from the regular cycle of intellectual teaching in the schools intended for that class of persons to whom a knowledge of religion was especially valuable. They protested against the projects of those who declared that to shut out the Bible from what they denominated the secular school, was a sine qua non to a general system of national education. (Loud cheers.) They were satisfied as to the truth of what was asserted by one who was an opponent of that scheme of education, but who at the same time was no friend to the national-schools, "that it was a scheme which 39-40ths of the religious portion of the community would strongly deprecate and resist." He thought, too, he might have added the remaining fortieth. (Cheers and laughter.) But the Society maintained, further, that merely to retain the Bible as a class-book was not enough. If the Bible was to form the subject of instruction as to its form and letter only, and not as to its spirit and doctrine, that would not be what the resolution contemplated—instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity. They all knew what various, and in some instances what opposite views of Scripture truth were taken by different persons, all of whom admitted the paramount authority of the Bible. There must be some one system of doctrine which was the true one, or at least which was the nearest to the truth, and which therefore was most important to be known. If no interpretation at all were put by the teacher upon the words of Scripture (a scarcely possible case), and the children, the uneducated or the half-educated children, were left to frame their own creeds, they would take different and conflicting views of saving truth, or what was more probable, no views at all—no distinct or rational views at least, and they would go forth to encounter the temptations of an evil world, and the arts of wicked men and the sophistry of unbelievers, with crude, undigested, obscure notions of religious truth, and of the real grounds of moral obligation. When they stated it to be an object of importance that instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity should form an essential part of education, they meant the "peculiar truths and characteristic" precepts of Christianity. Christianity itself was an eminently peculiar religion—peculiar in its revelations, in its precepts, in its motives, in its promises, in its hopes. Subtract from it that which was peculiar to itself, the doctrines of man's corruption and sinfulness, of the atonement made by a Divine Saviour, of justification by faith in that Saviour, of sanctification by the Holy Spirit—subtract these and the doctrines of the sacrament of grace, and what was left? Not Christianity—no, not even the religion of a preparatory dispensation, but a mere caput mortuum of Deism, from which, when it had thus passed through the alembic of a generalizing philosophy, they would scarcely be able to extract a few residual grains of cold and spiritless morality, ineffective and useless for the purposes of right conduct and peace of mind in this life, much more of preparation for a better. On the other hand, if this or that doctrine were to be omitted or passed over in the instruction to be given to a particular class of scholars, or if one set of pupils were taught to value one peculiar tenet, and another another, both in the same school, uncertainty and controversy and confusion would necessarily ensue from such a system. If all peculiar doctrines were to be blotted out, the result would be darkness; if this or that were to be omitted, imperfection and dimness would follow. It was only in the perfect combination of all the different rays of heavenly light, beautiful as they were in their several colours, that they felt the brightness and vital warmth of the light of day. Were it possible to separate them by some vast process of refraction for the purpose of accommodating the fanciful preference of various eyes for various colours, or combination of colours, the result would be a mosaical confusion, almost equivalent in its effects to Egyptian darkness. (Cheers.) Assuming, then, for so much they might, he thought, venture to assume, that religious instruction in some shape, and under some regulations, should constitute a part of any system of education intended for the people at large, the Society maintained that it should be instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity, at once full and comprehensive and peculiar, omitting none of the revelations of the Gospel, compromising none of its requirements, diluting none of its motives, weakening none of its sanctions, loosening none of its restraints, depreciating none of its means of grace. (Loud cheering.) But there were those who talked of neutrality in religion. Neutrality in religion! Why, to be neutral in religion was treason against the truth, and treason more than all in a religious teacher. (Hear, hear.) Those who were brought up without a decided attachment to some particular religion would be attached to none. A religion without a creed would not be the religion of the Established Church, nor of any branch of the Church: it would not be the religion of the Church Catholic, nor of the holy Apostles, for even they required of their disciples that they should hold fast a form of sound words. They were bound to give the best instruction the Church could afford. It was a debt they all owed to that Church. When he spoke of it being a debt they owed to the Church, he meant that they should honour the benefits which that Church afforded to all, even to those who did not claim to rank themselves of it. When he spoke of a system of education according to the doctrines and precepts of that Church, he meant such an education as was accompanied with, and grounded on, religion, as being the only plan of education which they, as the ministers of the Established Church, could administer. (Cheers.) They did not assume an empire over those who dissented from the discipline of their Church, neither did they presume to interfere with those persons on the system of education they chose to give their youth. But he contended that the Established Church was the origin of education in the country. For education was not confined within the walls of a school; it was carried on until at length the Church was called on to complete that which the schoolmaster had begun; and if there were not perfect harmony in that, beginning in its secular and religious bearings, the whole temporal benefits would be but little. He contended, then, that the recognised system of education was that which every advocate of the Established Church should support. (Hear.) The Right Rev. Prelate then referred to the large and important body of Christians, the Wesleyan Methodists, who had very lately avowed their sincerity of attachment to the religion they professed, and proceeded to say, that he and his rev. brethren, as clergymen of the Established Church, could only give one kind of education, and they were not effectually to be called on to change in their system for the sole purpose of accommodating themselves to the opinions of others. If the Established Church were to be held and to be estimated as the highest, then its clergy ought to have the management of the education of the poor of the country. (Hear.) He might probably be permitted to quote the opinions which had been expressed many years back by an eminent statesman (then Mr. Brougham), a man of high talent and of considerable weight and of high standing in the country. They were the opinions of a noble and learned individual who had always been foremost in all the schemes which had been proposed for the education of the poor. The speech was delivered in the year 1820, upon the occasion of certain resolutions being agreed to, and a report made by a committee of the House of Commons, which spoke in the strongest terms as to a particular system of general education. The eminent and learned person to whom he had alluded, spoke on the 28th of June, 1820; he could have wished that those sentiments had received utterance on the 28th of May. (Hear.) "No words of his could do justice to the zeal, the honesty, the ability, with which the clergy had lent their assistance towards the attainment of his great object. He requested the House to observe how they had united and knitted the system with the Protestant establishment. He doubtless here would have the Church with him, but he feared that the sectaries would be against him, when he said that the system of public education should be closely connected with the Church of England as established by law. He stated this after the most mature consideration, (hear, hear,) and he was anxious to make the statement, because on a former occasion he did not go quite so far as he now did. He had then abstained from going so far, because he dreaded the opposition of the sectaries—when he came to compare their objection with the inestimable advantages of a system that would secure the services of such a body of men as the established clergy—when he looked to the infinite benefit that would arise from having the constant, the daily superintendence of such a character as a well-educated and pious English Churchman," &c. The speaker had then proceeded—"But there were two other satisfactory reasons which he would state to the House for connecting the system immediately with the Church Establishment. In the first place a religious education was most essential to the welfare of every individual. To the rich it was all but everything; to the poor it might be said, without a figure, to be every thing. It was to them that the Christian religion was especially preached; it was their especial patrimony; and if the Legislature did not secure for them a religious education, they did not, in his opinion, half execute their duty to their fellow-creatures. What would give them the chance that the system of education would be a religious one, was placing it under the control of those who taught the doctrines of the Church. (Cheers.) Another consideration was, that the Church had a direct interest in promoting a religious education. The clergy were the teachers of the poor—not only teachers of religion, but, in the eye of the law they were teachers generally. It is true they could not be compelled to teach, but they did teach as far as their means allowed them. Their labours in the other part of the vineyard were, however, too extensive to admit of their cultivating this portion of it to any considerable degree; therefore it was necessary that they should have assistants to act under them. What, then, could be more natural than that they should have control over those who were selected to assist them? He might almost say, that a clergyman was a clerical schoolmaster, and a schoolmaster was a lay parson. The clergy were the persons whom Providence had appointed to assist in this great work of educating the poor. Should they, then, to overcome the scruples of a few individuals, do away all chance of success, and forego the benefit of this excellent measure by turning their backs on the clergy of England, whom Providence had raised up to give strength and stability to the plan? He would say, No. (The audience repeatedly interrupted the Right Rev. prelate, whilst reading these extracts from the speech of the noble and learned Lord, with loud and hearty demonstrations of applause.) Could there be a stronger argument in favour of the management of the education of the poor being left under the control of the clergy than those which he had just quoted? (Hear, hear.) The Right Rev. prelate then exhorted the meeting to persevere, being satisfied that if the Established Church were faithful to itself, and were to assert its own principles, success must ensue. They should do as did the children of Nehemiah when the city was besieged; they should "pray continually to the Lord their God to set watchmen on the towers, and over their labours, and to call out as if everything dear to them was at a stand, and they would not have reason to regret it. (Cheers.) There were many who held the same religious doctrines in common with themselves, but who dissented with respect to some points of discipline. To those, and indeed to all Christians on the subject of Christian education, he could hold out the hand of affection. (Cheers.) But when the question of education was mooted on a system under which religion was to be separated from the other branch of instruction—that religious instruction was not to form a part of its principles, then the Society said the clergy had a right to educate the poor by God's Bible as they had found it, and if they were not so to act, they would be false to the duty which had been committed to their care. (Loud cheers.)

His Grace the Archbishop then put the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

LORD ABINGER rose, and commenced by observing, that he rose cheerfully and readily to propose the resolution which had been put into his hands, and which with their permission he would read to them. It was as follows:—"That the Incorporated National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the principles of the Established Church, by the formation of numerous schools in immediate connexion with the Church, has rendered eminent service to the cause of Christian education; and that the general principles upon which it was originally founded ought still to be adhered to in every plan for extending more widely the benefits of education, whether by multiplying National-schools, or by enlarging the circle of instruction in those which already exist." After the very able, eloquent, and convincing arguments they had just heard, he felt almost contented with reading the resolution only, but these were times, when every man, whatever might be his station, was called upon to give utterance to his sentiments. (Cheers.) He declared his to be, that man without a religious education was destined to misery and perdition (hear, hear), and as far as his experience had gone, and as far as he had collected from the experience of others, he was induced to believe that an education without religion, instead of being a blessing, was a curse to mankind. (Cheers.) The greatest philosopher of past times (he meant Lord Bacon) had stated that knowledge was power, and he was right. Increase the knowledge of man by cultivating his intellectual faculties, and they made him more powerful; but unless they combined that with moral and religious instruction, they made him powerful only for mischief (cheers), and not for good. If religion were an essential part of education, it must necessarily follow that in every Christian community religion ought to form a part of that education. If they spoke of national education, what was it, he would ask, unless combined with national religion? He had no objection to any man, be his religion what it might, educating his children, whether Methodists or Dissenters, in any manner they thought proper, and without molestation or the least prevention; but when they spoke of a nation administering the means of education upon principles not in unison with the Church of England, then they were called upon to assist in endeavouring to reject any other than that of the combined religion of the country. It appeared to him, therefore, and he took that opportunity of saying it, that a nation which fostered and went out of its way to inculcate knowledge to those who dissented from the established religion, did not wisely expend its means. He (Lord Abinger) did not conceive it to be a necessary part of toleration, that they should expend the public funds for educating the enemies of our Established Church. (Cheers.) Let them use their own means and enjoy them to the fullest extent, but why should they who were aware of its blessings, do their work by educating those who were brought up contrary to the principles of that establishment, and whose only wish was to destroy it? (Cheers.) He therefore must declare his utter hostility at all times to any scheme for national education that did not confine that education, whether administered by public bodies or others, to the principles of the Established Church.

The Bishop of SALISBURY seconded the resolution. He was very unwilling to occupy the time of the meeting with any apologies for filling the situation which he had been called on by others to occupy, and to which he had no natural claims. He could not but feel, that if he had been called upon to take part in the proceedings of the day, it could only be because he was one of those who had but recently been placed in any situation of prominence as connected with that Society, and not as having been engaged perhaps so largely as many others in promoting those measures which had been lately set on foot for the further extension of some new agencies. He, however, deemed it fitting that he should be called upon to declare the old-established principles on which that Society was first founded, and on which it continued to act, which were "to instruct the children of the poor in suitable learning, works of industry, and the principles of the Christian religion according to the Established Church." (Cheers.) The resolution placed in his hands consisted of two parts. The first was a retrospective view of the benefits offered by the National Society, and the important service it had rendered to the system of education; that part of it was so self-evident, however, that it was needless for him to say one word in support of it. That Society since its first establishment had been the means of calling into existence nearly 7,000 schools, in which there were in immediate connexion with itself nearly 600,000 scholars. (Cheers.) And in stating that, he was stating only a small portion of what it was enabled to effect. The results were effected mainly through the agencies which had been put into operation by the Society. It had set a good example, for there was at that moment in existence, founded on the same principle, and carrying into effect with equal efficiency and with the same end, 17,341 schools, giving a religious and Christian education in conformity with the principles of the Established Church to upwards of 1,000,000 children of our poorer brethren. (Cheers.) In stating that, he assuredly did enough to establish the former point. The second point was, that the general principles on which it was originally founded ought still to be adhered to. But after the eloquent address made by the Right Rev. prelate, that portion of it also would almost appear self-evident as the former one. The National Society was as free and as ready as any other Society to adopt all or any improved methods of education, from whatsoever quarter they emanated; to extend its sphere of Christian instruction; to diffuse a larger sphere of secular knowledge in those places where it was considered expedient so to do, and to make the education of children in large towns more comprehensive than they were enabled to do in our rural villages, by still maintaining those principles on which it was founded. (Cheers.) It was, he conceived, in order to enable those principles to be more efficiently carried out, that some new effort had been made during the past year—that they had been made not only to extend the instruction which they wished to give to the children committed to their charge, but to give them a better quality, and what they needed above all things, better and more efficient teachers, by whom that education might be communicated, and accordingly the attention of the Society had been for years past directed to the establishment throughout the country—but first of all, if possible, in the metropolis—of training-schools in which masters might be brought up to be competent to instruct the children of the poor (cheers), and in attempting that work he did not conceive that there was anything more than a development of that principle which was embodied in the original constitution of the Society; but it had never yet been able to carry it into effect so efficiently as they could desire, and therefore in forming throughout the country the training schools and local Boards, they were not deviating from the great principles of this Society; but on the contrary they were now, as a means of advancing its interests, endeavouring to establish them throughout the land. The local Boards were not to be governed by the members of them only, but they were to be bound also by the decision of other local Boards, and placed in close connexion, and to act under a regular system of subordination to the Committee of the Society itself, and it was merely the extension of that agency which would enable the Society to be what it was always contemplated to be under the providence of God—a national system of instruction comprehending in its sphere the whole of the children in our Church. (Loud cheers.) After the statements addressed to the Meeting it would be unnecessary for him to say that they were not met there for any temporary and still less for any political purposes, but solely for the accomplishment of a great Christian work, in which it was their pleasure and duty to be engaged. (Loud cheers.) Their object in convening the Meeting was merely to recommend to them and the nation at large a system of education which he (the Bishop of Salisbury) believed conscientiously deserved the support of all, and to call on the faithful members of the Church to unite their energies in order to give to her children an education co-extensive with herself. Having these objects in view, he most cordially seconded the Resolution.

The Rev. Dr. Hook, Vicar of Leeds, rose to propose the next Resolution. Although the friends of scriptural education had at the present time some cause for anxiety, yet they had also much cause for congratulation (hear, hear). A short time ago, when the question was first started, whether it was the duty of Government to provide an education for the people, a popular education, it was asserted that the education to be given to the people must be a secular education, but the voice, deep, loud, and clear, blessed be God, declared that the people of England would not accept of a national education unless based on religion (cheers), and happily they now sometimes heard those who were the quondam friends of that system say, "Yes, education must be based on religion." But then came another question, "What is the religion on which you intend to base education?" and again that voice had been heard loud and deep, declaring that the people of England meant by religion that which had for its rule of faith the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible. (Loud cheers.) There, again, was cause for congratulation, for in every proposed measure for general education, they found it admitted that the Bible must be introduced into our schools. Was it merely to congratulate them that he mentioned these circumstances? No. He mentioned them to show that the progress of the public mind on that subject had been carefully and gradually enlightened. Might they not, then, without impertinence implore their rulers not to precipitate measures until some other principles were canvassed, and petition for delay? Delay was necessary. Two great principles had been established. First, that education ought to have been given. Secondly, that it ought to be based on the revealed word of God—the Bible. Now, the most important question to be decided after mature deliberation was as to the principle on which those who instructed the children should interpret the Scriptures; they all knew the Devil himself could quote Scripture for his own purposes, and that the words of the Scriptures might be so interpreted as to convey that interpretation to the mind which, when not truly interpreted, they most unequivocally and strongly condemned. If they wished to understand the Scriptures properly, besides having recourse to humble prayer, they must compare spiritual things with spiritual things (hear, hear), and interpret each text according to the knowledge of faith, and in order to supply them with the means of interpreting rightly, our creeds had been formed. There were, however, some questions left open on which divines differed: thus some were called Lutherans, because they adopted his mode of interpreting the Scriptures; some were called Calvinists, because they adopted the Calvinistic interpretation of the Scriptures; some were called Arminians for the same cause; and some were called Romanists because they adopted the Trent rule of interpretation. Their (the Meeting's) book of interpretation was the Book of Common Prayer—the whole book, with her Articles, her Liturgy, &c. In many of their large towns there were many persons who were mere Deists. Well, then, if the principle he before alluded to were to meet the religious views of those persons, it must be a religion without revelation. They had, however, no cause to fear; if they only did their duty, Omnipotence would be on their side; and "if God be for us, who can be against us?" Such a Meeting as that proclaimed to the people that it was their intention to supply them with the best possible system of education, and best adapted to their state of society. If they were but well supported by the nobility and gentry—if the clergy, from the bishop to the deacon, would act with unanimity as well as zeal (loud cheers)—if the learned among them would direct their attention to this important subject, and compare their theories with the conclusion arrived at by a different process, and arrived at by practical men, they would then be able to form and act on such an educational code that they might defy all the Governments in the world and every Legislature in the land. (Loud and continued cheering.) He defied them to deprive them of their rights, for it was one of the rights of conscience to obey our Saviour and our God, to educate the people of this country in his religion and according to the principles of his Church. After alluding to the want of scriptural education among the middle classes, and referring also generally to the establishment of local Boards as being well suited to advance the interests of the Society, the Rev. Gentleman concluded by calling on them to behave as became them as soldiers of our Lord Jesus Christ: let them do valiantly in the cause of the great Captain of our salvation—let them raise the Bible of Christ when the abomination of the desolation in secular education was raised against them (cheers)—let them go forth with the sword of the Spirit—let them call their people to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty, and depend on it that in the strength of the Lord they would be conquering and as conquerors.

Lord BARRINGTON seconded the Resolution. Having other public duties to attend to in another place, he would not trespass on their time, but would only express his most cordial concurrence in the Resolution, and in the objects of the Society generally.

Dr. CHANDLER, Dean of Chichester, then rose to propose the next Resolution, "That in order to supply one of the principal defects which at present limit the operations of the National Society, and retard the improvement of education throughout the country, efforts should be made to raise the qualifications of those persons who are employed as teachers in our parochial and National Schools; and that the Resolution adopted by the National Society in August last, to establish a Training Institution for the education of young persons intended for that office, is calculated to promote the attainment of this object." He alluded to the great want of properly qualified teachers in the schools, the necessity of taking proper measures to supply that want, and after concurring in the observations generally of preceding speakers, concluded by moving the above Resolution.

Mr. R. BETHELL seconded the Resolution. As a layman he was anxious to impress on the Meeting and the country at large, that it was their bounden duty to aid and assist, and invigorate the exertions of the clergy of that Church to which they belonged. After the very long attention they had given to the many able and eloquent speeches which must have impressed that subject on their minds, he would abstain from making any further remarks, and would content himself by seconding the Resolution.

Dr. BATHER, Archdeacon of Shropshire, rose to propose the last Resolution, as follows:—"That in order to furnish the National Society with the means of establishing a Training Institution, and generally extending and improving the education of the poor, immediate exertion be made to increase its resources, and that a Committee of Inquiry and Correspondence, with power to add to their number, be requested to act as a Committee for the purpose of soliciting and collecting subscriptions." The Archdeacon described in a very interesting manner, the advantages which as a country clergyman he had derived from the National Society. In bearing his testimony to the general good conduct of the children educated in the National Schools he said, that although the children that he had to educate could not wrangle with the wranglers of the present day, yet they had the better part of wisdom, and could depart from the presence of foolish men when they perceived not in them the words of wisdom. (Loud cheers.)

Sir T. ACLAND, Bart., in an exceedingly eloquent and eulogistic speech, seconded the Resolution, and impressed on them the necessity of strengthening not only their numbers but their subscriptions also, as it was found from the Report that large funds were required for making the schools (as contemplated by the Committee) for the better education of the middle or commercial class of the community.

The Earl of WINCHILSEA then rose to propose a vote of thanks to the Right Rev. Prelate in the chair. He assured them he could not, without great violence to his own feelings, have refused to move the Resolution which he had the honour to move. By the sincere esteem which he felt for the Noble individual whose name he would mention (the Right Rev. the Archbishop of Canterbury) that task was rendered doubly pleasing. The Noble Earl congratulated them on so large and respectable a Meeting, and professed his earnest desire to co-operate with the Meeting at large in the spirit and objects of the Society. If they were even left to their own resources, he would not despond, because he (Lord Winchilsea) did firmly believe that the Legislature of this country would give them that support which they were entitled to expect, and that those who were attached to our truly Apostolical Church would amply supply the means for carrying out the objects of that Society.

Mr. BARON ALDERSON, in seconding the Resolution, expressed his most cordial adherence to all the principles of the Meeting, and stated as his opinion that that was no system of education which was not based on the truths and precepts of the Established Church, and in the language of the old poet, he would conclude:—

"Lucetere, multa prouet integrum
"Cum laude victorem, geretque
"Prælia conjugibus loquenda."

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY returned thanks for the compliment which had been paid him, and expressed the gratification he had experienced at the exertions which had been used in support of the objects the Society had in view.

The Meeting then separated.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY, JUNE 3.

ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN IRELAND.

LORD WHARNCLIFFE begged to draw the attention of their lordships to a matter of considerable importance respecting Ireland. He had seen in one of the morning newspapers a requisition, quoted from a paper called the Dublin Freeman's Journal, advocating Ministerial politics in relation to that country, for a meeting to be held in the county of Mayo, to address Her Majesty on Her Majesty's decision respecting her household and the restoration of the present Government to power. This requisition was signed in an extraordinary way—a way that he would venture to say would not have been adopted but for some interference on the part of the Government. The first name to the requisition was that of the Lord-Lieutenant of the county, the Marquis of Sligo, to which there could be no objection. The next was that of John, Archbishop of Tuam. Their lordships knew that legally there was no Archbishop of Tuam now in existence, that see being now a bishopric. The third name was that of Thomas Tuam, the prelate who had lately been appointed to the bishopric. Here, therefore, they had a person claiming to be the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Tuam, designating himself as such in a public document, and immediately afterwards came the signature of the Protestant Bishop of Tuam. He must say this was a gross assumption on the part of the person styling himself Roman Catholic Archbishop. This was putting himself above the Protestant Bishop; and he must say, on the other hand, that it appeared most extraordinary that the Protestant Bishop should consent to follow a person who had shown such bitter hostility against the Protestant faith and establishment. (Hear, hear.) The conduct of the person calling himself Archbishop of Tuam was entirely contrary to the Emancipation Act; and if they were not prepared to submit to the entire domination of the Roman Catholic priesthood, he thought some notice should be taken of it. The noble lord here read that clause of the act which prohibits the assumption by any Roman Catholic Priest of the title of archbishop, bishop, dean, or other dignity of the Protestant Church, under a penalty of 100*l*. He put it to the Government whether they would allow the Roman Catholic archbishops and bishops of Ireland to assume in this manner those titles from which they were excluded by law, for he could scarcely think that it would have been done in this instance without the countenance of Government.

Viscount MELBOURNE said, that the circumstance to which the noble lord had alluded was a matter for the Lord-Lieutenant and Government of Ireland to take into consideration. But he could not help thinking that, with respect to the signature of the Bishop of Tuam, if the bishop approved of the requisition he had signed, it would not have been a wise thing in him to have withheld his name on the ground of punctilio, because the other individual had assumed an erroneous title.

Lord WHARNCLIFFE had no doubt that the conduct of the person calling himself archbishop was illegal, and as a matter of good feeling and good taste thought it very objectionable. It showed exceedingly bad feeling.

Viscount MELBOURNE did not think any bad feeling was shown by the circumstance. It rather showed good feeling.

The Earl of WICKLOW must express his total dissent from what the noble viscount had said on this subject. It was well known how the Government of Ireland was dictated to, and if Government in this country did not exercise a proper control over it, the administration of Irish affairs could not be conducted in a manner consistent with the constitution. He wished to let it be known that the new bishop of the diocese was the son of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, just appointed to his situation by the noble viscount opposite. No greater insult and degradation could be offered to the Irish episcopacy than had been cast upon it by this individual.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15.

Lord SANDON presented a petition from two parishes in Lichfield, praying for the extension of the Church of England, another to the same effect from the clergy and others in Lichfield, and another from the clergy of Toxteth-park, near Liverpool, also to the same purpose.

Mr. PAKINGTON presented a petition from Worcester against any system of education not founded on the principles of the established Church; and petitions from Yorkshire and Worcestershire, in favour of Church extension in Canada.

Mr. JERVIS presented a petition praying for the extension of the means of religious instruction in the colonies.

Sir G. SINCLAIR presented petitions from Dumbartonshire and Perthshire in favour of Church extension in Scotland.

Lord ASHLEY presented petitions from the dean and chapter of Canterbury, and the dean and chapter of York, praying for the extension of the Church in Canada.

Mr. LOCKHART presented five petitions from Lanarkshire and Dumbartonshire, praying for additional endowments to the Church of Scotland.

Sir G. CLERK presented a petition from Argyleshire, praying for the extension of the Scottish Church, and the establishment of additional schools in the Highlands.

TUESDAY, MAY 28.

STROOD (KENT) CHURCH BILL.

Sir E. KNATCHBULL moved the second reading of this bill.

Mr. BERNAL objected to the bill. It was introduced for the ostensible purpose of curing a technical informality in an act passed many years ago, for the purpose of raising a sum of 7,000*l*. for the repairs of the Church, and other purposes therein mentioned; but, instead of confining itself to that, clauses were introduced for raising additional sums, and also a clause excluding Dissenters from the trusteeship of the Church funds. The rate-payers and the amount of their assessments against the bill, were as six to one to those in support of it. Under these circumstances, he should move that the bill should be read a second time that day six months.

Sir E. KNATCHBULL, in defence of the bill, said he was willing to confine it to the correction of the technical informality, so that the payment of the annuitants who had lent their money, and the repairs of the Church might be secured, by the collection of the rates, in which there was some difficulty on account of the informality in the present act. All he required was, that the bill should be allowed to go to a committee, where its merits could be examined.

Mr. HOBHOUSE objected to the bill in toto.

Mr. HODGES said, that his name, as well as that of his hon. colleague, had been put on the back of the bill without their authority, and that he was strongly opposed to the measure itself.

Mr. HAYTER supported the bill, and said that he thought it was founded, not merely on the principles of justice, but of common honesty.

Sir E. KNATCHBULL said, that a communication had been made to the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Hodges) as to his name being put upon the bill, and it was then understood that he would not object to it. With respect to the name of the other hon. member for Kent being used, as that hon. gentleman had introduced the bill, it was thought a sufficient sanction for such a proceeding.

Sir E. FILMER was of opinion that this bill ought not to go before a committee.

The House then divided, and the numbers were—

GOVERNMENT PLAN OF NATIONAL EDUCATION.

A vast number of petitions were presented from all parts of the kingdom, and by members at both sides of the house, praying that the House might not sanction the Ministerial plan of national education, and some praying that no general plan of education might be sanctioned but in connexion with the Established Church. From the fact that many of these were presented simultaneously and in several instances laid on the table in parcels, it was often impossible to catch either the names of the hon. members presenting them, or the parties from whom they emanated.

The following list contains the names of only a portion of the members presenting such petitions, and of as many of the places as under the circumstance stated could be collected. Petitions against the plan were presented by Mr. Hodges from Gravesend; by Lord Stanley (several petitions), from Bury and other places in the county of Lancaster; by an hon. member from places in Cumberland; from Leicester; by Mr. W. B. Baring, from the inhabitants of Caverswall, Tutbury, Milwich, and Biddulph; and from the Wesleyan congregations of Leek and Longnor, in the county of Stafford; by Mr. Hogg, from Beverley; by Mr. H. Broadwood, from Bridgewater; by Mr. Colquhoun, from Glasgow and other places, including one signed by 500 Sunday-school teachers; by Mr. Baines, from several places in the West Riding of York, and from places in the county of Devon. Some of these were from Wesleyan Methodist congregations; as were a considerable number of the petitions presented by other hon. members; by Mr. Edwards, from Llanidloes, in Montgomeryshire; by Mr. Turner, from Truro; by Sir G. Strickland, from different places, and from Wesleyan Methodist congregations, in Yorkshire; by Sir C. Burrell, from places in Sussex; by Sir T. D. Acland, from Southmolton and other places in the county of Devon; by Lord A. Lennox, from Chichester, including a petition signed by nearly all the male members of a Dissenting congregation in that city; by Mr. Planta, from Hastings; by Mr. Heathcote, from Rutland; by Sir F. Trench, from Scarborough; by Sir R. H. Inglis (many petitions), from Huddersfield, Bradford (Wilts), and from places in Dorset, Hants, Essex, Gloucester, Salisbury, Chester, Salop, Devon, and Hertford, and likewise a petition against any system of general education not connected with the Church of England; by Sir E. Wilmot, from places in Warwickshire; by Sir R. Peel, from Tamworth and other places; by Sir C. Knightley (21 petitions) from several places in Northamptonshire; by Mr. Buck, from several places in the county of Devon; by Mr. Gladstone, from Newark; by the Earl of Darlington, from places in Shropshire; by Lord G. Somerset, from Monmouth and Chepstow; by Mr. Pakington, from Droitwich; by Mr. Gore (jun.), from Carnarvon; by Lord F. Paget, from Beaumaris; by Mr. Serjeant Jackson, from (we understood) Wesleyan Methodist congregations in Cork; by General Lygon, from places in Worcester; by an hon. member, from Penzance and other places in Cornwall; by Colonel Sibthorp, from Lincoln; by Mr. Pease (three petitions) from places in Durham and in the county of Stafford.

FRIDAY, MAY 31.

PRISONS BILL.

On the motion of Lord J. RUSSELL, and after a short discussion, the House went into committee on the reserved clause (the 14th) of the Prisons Bill.

The Chairman read the clause, which was as follows:—

"And be it enacted, that in any prison in which the average number of prisoners professing any one and the same religion differing from that of the established Church, confined at any one time during the three preceding years, shall not have been less than 50, it shall be lawful for the justices or other persons having the appointment of the chaplain of such prison, if they shall see fit, to appoint and remove at pleasure a teacher or clergyman, acting as such at the time of such appointment in some chapel duly registered as a place of religious worship, of the religion of such prisoners, for the instruction and spiritual assistance of such prisoners solely, and for the persons having the control of the funds applicable to the expenses of such prison, to fix the salary to be paid to such teacher or clergyman, and to make order for the payment thereof out of the funds applicable to those expenses."

The House having divided, there appeared—

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHANCELLORS, &c.

Mr. O'CONNELL gave notice, that on Tuesday next (as we understood) he would move for leave to bring in a bill to enable Roman Catholics to hold certain offices in the ecclesiastical courts in Ireland, and also to hold the office of Lord Chancellor.

ABANDONMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT PLAN OF EDUCATION.

Lord J. RUSSELL, said, he would avail himself of this opportunity of stating why the House should not be led away by statements contained in petitions presented to it—statements no doubt honestly intended, but which were wholly at variance with the plan laid down in the report of the Committee of the Privy Council. One very material, but most obvious, error on this subject, was—that the plan proposed by the Privy Council was to be uniform in all the parishes in England and Wales. This was not correct. The plan was, that a school should be established, not one to which day-scholars should come, but one in which the scholars should reside in the house, for the purpose of being instructed as teachers in other schools. This was a different principle from that established in the National School Society, and was also different in some material points from the plan of the British and Foreign School Society. If the Government adopted the plan of the National School Society, it must follow that all the children in the schools must belong to the Established Church, that it would be an exclusive system, and that all teachers who might be selected to teach the children of Dissenting parents would be deprived of any benefit which might be intended by the Government grant. If, on the other hand, the Government adopted the plan of the British and Foreign School Society, it was obvious that the children could not be reared up in the doctrines of the Church of England or in those of Dissent. He was a member of the British and Foreign School Society, and he fully agreed in its principles. According to those the Scriptures were taught in the schools during the week days, but on Sundays the parents might take their children to those places of worship which were in accordance with their own religious tenets. Now, the plan of the Privy Council differed from both of these. As the scholars were to reside in the house, they could not be all sent on the Sundays to their own particular places of worship; it was therefore proposed that there should be a chaplain of the Established Church presiding over the school, and that Dissenting clergymen should give religious instruction to those who belonged to their particular worship. The great mistake, he repeated, was that this plan was intended to apply to all parts of the country, which it was clear could not be the case. That the principle of the National Society was a good one he fully admitted, but then it was intended to apply exclusively to the children belonging to the Established Church, who were taken to church on Sundays by their teachers; but that plan could not be adopted in schools in which the pupils resided in the house, and where they were of different religious creeds. Another mistaken view of the Government plan was, that Catholics were to be allowed their own versions of the Scriptures, and it was contended that children using different versions would occasion much confusion. He did not think that this objection was entitled to the weight which some persons attached to it; but as the plan was, that the scholars belonging to the Church of England were to receive their religious instruction in one part of the school, and the Catholics in another, where they did not come in contact, he did not think it was open to the objection made to it; and it was the less so, as the principle had been already recognised by the Legislature in the Poor Law Amendment Act, in which it was admitted that paupers resident in the workhouses should have religious instruction according to their own particular creeds. If the children of Roman Catholics were in the workhouses, Catholic teachers would be allowed access to them, and if they came it was natural to expect that they would bring Roman Catholic books and versions of the Scriptures, and not Protestant. He did think, therefore, that the outcry raised against the Government plan had been most mistaken in this respect. When he said this, let him add, that there were other points on which the views of the Committee of the Privy Council had been greatly misunderstood. He would not say the misrepresentations, but certainly the misunderstandings, which had so extensively prevailed on this subject, had created extensive obstacles to the carrying out of the proposed measure, and therefore rendered it unadvisable for the Government to go on with it.—(Cheers from the Opposition side.)—He did hope that while this plan, which had been so much misunderstood, and which had unjustly brought so much obloquy on the Government, was withdrawn, the principle of instruction which it involved would not be allowed to sleep. He hoped that the zeal for religious instruction would continue, and that all those who stood in need of it might derive the benefit of education, whatever might be their religious creed. For his own part he would be quite willing to bear all the obloquy of the proposed measure, if he could think, as he did, that ignorance would thereby be diminished, and that that large portion of our fellow-men, who were brought under the operation of the criminal laws, would not be exposed to that risk by being left in utter ignorance of their duties to God and to man. Under the circumstances he had stated he would say, that it was not the intention of the Government at present to establish any normal school on the plan proposed in the report of the Committee of the Privy Council. He would tomorrow lay on the table of the House some further documents connected with this subject, and would not propose any further grant than that the sums given to the National School Society, and the British and Foreign School Society, should be as before. At the same time, he must say that, in his opinion, this was not all which was required from the state. Much more ought to be done in so important a matter, and to which so much of public attention had of late been given. He hoped that, whatever the House might do with this subject, the opinion of the majority would be, and which he believed it was—1st, that we ought to promote education on the principles of Christianity—(hear, hear)—and, 2nd, in doing that, not to exclude from it persons dissenting from the Established Church.—(Hear, hear.)

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

The Lord Chancellor in moving the committal of this bill explained its provisions at considerable length.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY spoke in favour of the bill.

The Bishop of EXETER addressed the House at great length against the measure.

The Bishop of LONDON replied to the observations of the Bishop of Exeter, and concluded by saying that though the bill was not free from objections, it might receive some modifications in committee, and he was disposed to adopt it in its present stage.

Lord WYNFORD could not concur in the motion.

The Bishop of GLOUCESTER and BRISTOL expressed his apprehensions with regard to the measure.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY having entered into explanations, their lordships afterwards went into committee upon the bill.

LAW.

QUEEN'S BENCH, APRIL 29.

THE QUEEN v. THE JUSTICES OF CHICHESTER.

This was a rule calling upon the defendants to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding them to issue a warrant to levy the sum of 6*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, which it was alleged was due for a rate under the Church Building Act. It appeared that 400*l.* had been borrowed under a local act for building a church at Chichester, and a rate had been made. An inhabitant had refused to pay. Application was then made to the magistrates to issue a warrant, but as the affidavits on one side stated that they had refused to grant it or to hear any arguments in support of the application, on the other side the affidavits stated that they had heard the arguments and were ready to deliver their judgment.

The Attorney-General and Mr. Peacock showed cause, and Sir J. Pollock supported the rule.

The Court said, if the rule was made absolute, it must be on condition of the defendant's giving an indemnity, for if they wished to contest the rate it must not be at the expense of other persons.

Rule discharged unless indemnity given.

THE QUEEN v. THE CHURCHWARDENS OF NEW WINDSOR.

The Attorney-General and Mr. Wightman showed cause against a rule calling upon the defendants to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not be directed to them, commanding them to levy a rate for the payment of a sum of money to Elizabeth Jenks, widow, being a sum which she had advanced for the purpose of building a church in the borough of New Windsor. The learned counsel urged that the churchwardens had done all in their power to collect the rate.

Mr. Edwards supported the rule, and contended that by the 59th of George III. the churchwardens had the power of distraining for the rate, and that they were bound to do so.

Rule absolute.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8.

THE QUEEN v. THE CHURCHWARDENS OF LAMBETH.

The Attorney-General moved for a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, directed to the churchwardens, overseers, and collectors of the poor-rate of the parish of Lambeth, commanding them to attend and produce the poor-rate books, and the books containing the collection of the poor-rates, before the scrutiny that is now going on in that parish. Last Easter Tuesday there was the annual election of churchwardens and other officers in the parish: the Rev. Dr. Doyly, the rector, presided; a poll was demanded, which continued three days, and Sturges Bourne's Act was acted upon, whereby a person must be rated, and must have paid his rates, in order to be entitled to vote; the churchwardens would not allow the production of the rate-books, and therefore it was impossible to know whether they had a right to vote, or whether they had a right to give the number of votes they claimed to give. Dr. Doyly had instituted a scrutiny, and the churchwardens refused to produce their books, and, therefore, it could not proceed.

Rule granted, the Court adding, that undoubtedly the information ought be given.

BAIL COURT.

THE QUEEN v. JONES.

Mr. Chilton moved in this case, which was an application on behalf of Mr. Jones, who was imprisoned some time past by a process from the Ecclesiastical Court of the diocese of St. David's, for having refused in his character of churchwarden to supply the necessary materials for celebrating Divine service in the church of Llanellan, of which the Rev. Ebenezer Morris was rector, for a rule to show cause why the writ de contumace capiendo, on which he was committed, and all the subsequent proceedings, should not be set aside, and the Rev. E. Morris compelled to pay all the costs. The writ had been issued upon a significavit made by the clerk, surrogate, and representative of the vicar-general, and official of the Bishop of St. David's. Among the objections to the proceedings under the writ, the principal were, that the significavit did not set forth distinctly enough the ground of committal, and that though the vicar-general might make it, yet he should do it in the name of the bishop, and that the surrogate of the vicar-general had no authority whatever to execute such a document.

Rule granted.

MAY 7.

THE QUEEN v. DAVID JONES.

The defendant in this case is one of the churchwardens of Llanelly, who has been imprisoned by an order of the Ecclesiastical Court at Carmarthen, for a refusal to supply the sacramental elements. A rule to show cause why he should not be discharged out of custody had been obtained upon a former day, and Mr. Chilton appeared now to support the rule, and Mr. R. V. Williams to oppose it. Upon the case being mentioned, however,

Mr. Justice Coleridge expressed it to be his opinion that it was one of too much importance to be decided by a single judge, and his lordship, therefore, referred the parties to the full Court.

In the course of the day, a discussion arose as to whether the rule ought not to be enlarged, and it was finally agreed that cause should be shown upon an early day at chambers.

Examiners
Humanioribus.

On Tuesday, May 14, the new statute, Tit. iv., constituting a Praelectorship in Logic was submitted to Convocation, and carried by a majority of 27 to 18. The Praelector (who must be a Master of Arts, or a Bachelor in Civil Law or Medicine, at the least) is to be elected by convocation, and to hold his office for ten years, at the expiration of which period, however, he is eligible for re-election. The salary of the Praelector to arise from a small terminal payment made by all (Servitors excepted) under the degree of M.A. The Vice-Chancellor has fixed Wednesday, June the 5th, at two o'clock, for the election of the first Praelector.

Mr. Robert Wheeler Ush, Post-master of Merton coll., elected a Scholar of Worcester coll., on the foundation of Dr. Clarke.

Richard Cowley Powles, Commoner of Exeter coll., elected a Scholar of that society.

Mr. Thomas Shadforth, B.A., Scholar of University coll., elected Fellow of that society on the foundation of King Henry IV. At the examination in Easter Term, 1838, Mr. Shadforth was placed in the first class in Disciplinis Mathematicis et Physicis, and in the second class in Literis Humanioribus.

In a Convocation holden on Thursday, May 23, the following petition was agreed to, and received the University seal:—

"To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled:
"The humble Petition of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford,

"Sheweth,

"That your Petitioners have seen the 'Papers on Education,' presented to Parliament by Her Majesty's command, and ordered by your Honourable House to be printed on the 12th of Feb. 1839, and also the 'Extract,' printed by order of your Hon. House, April 17, 1839, 'from the Minutes of the Committee of Council appointed to superintend the application of any sums voted by Parliament for the purpose of promoting Public Education.'

"That your Petitioners, far from being opposed to the benevolent object contemplated in these papers, 'the extension of the blessings of sound and religious education,' are heartily desirous that every member of the community may share in those blessings; but they believe, and they express their belief with unfeigned regret, that this great cause will be hindered rather than promoted by the methods proposed in the documents to which they have referred.

"They do not, indeed, conceal from themselves the difficulties, opposed by existing religious differences, to the extension of public education; and, deeply as they lament that any of their fellow-subjects should dissent from the doctrine and discipline of the National Church, they cordially subscribe to the wish expressed by Her Most Gracious Majesty, both 'that the youth of this kingdom should be religiously brought up, and that the rights of conscience should be respected.'

"Your Petitioners, nevertheless, cannot forget that the Established Church is the only institution known to the laws of this country as the authorized channel of public religious instruction in England and Wales. They have, therefore, seen, with equal surprise and concern, that in the formation of a Committee for the especial purpose of extending, within this portion of the empire, the blessings of sound and religious education, not only are laymen exclusively entrusted with such important duties, but no provision is made that the Committee shall hereafter consist of members of the Church of England. They observe, also, the total absence of any similar provision in the appointment of the Rector of large Normal and Model Schools, although religious education, general and special, is the declared and principal object of these establishments; and, further, they find it expressly provided, that licensed ministers of other religious persuasions shall, under certain circumstances, be authorized by the State to take part with ministers of the Established Church in the religious instruction of children, brought up in every variety of religious opinion, and yet assembled for the purpose of public education in the same school.

"That your Petitioners, entertaining other serious objections to the proposed scheme, forbear to enter into further details, or to dwell upon the dangerous consequences which, they apprehend, would necessarily flow from the extension of a similar system throughout the kingdom. They have only adverted to a few particulars, which they believe to be at open variance with the very principle of an establishment; incompatible with any system of religious education properly so called; and directly calculated to promote and to perpetuate the most alarming and even opposite evils,— indifference to religion instead of love of truth, and never-ending discord instead of unity and peace.

"Your Petitioners, therefore, most humbly, but earnestly, implore your Honourable House to withhold your sanction from the scheme of Public Education described in the above-mentioned Minutes of the Committee of Council; and not to countenance any project for National Education embodying principles inconsistent alike with the maintenance of the Established Church, and with the preservation of religious peace and Christian truth.

"And your Petitioners will ever pray," &c.

A. D. 1839.

At a congregation on Tuesday, May 28th, the following petition, against the government plan of education, was agreed to, the numbers being as follow:—White Hood House, Placet 37, Non-Placet 9, majority 28; Black Hood House, Placet 22, Non-Placet 8, majority 14.

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge,

Sheweth,
That your petitioners contemplate, with unfeigned concern and alarm, the scheme of National Education which has been framed by a Committee of her Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, and recently submitted to your honourable House, with the view of obtaining from the Legislature the means of carrying it into practical operation:

That your petitioners most earnestly desire, that the real and substantial benefits of education should be extended to every class of the community; and in proportion to their zeal for the furtherance of this momentous object, is their anxiety that the measures to be adopted for this end should, under Providence, be the most proper and salutary:

That, as members of the Catholic Church of Christ, your petitioners entertain the deliberate conviction, that of any system of sound religious instruction, the distinctive and saving doctrines of the Gospel must constitute both the foundation and the all-pervading principle,—as Protestants, they cherish the highest respect and reverence for the labours of those pious and learned men to whom the world is indebted for the authorized English version of the Holy Scriptures,—as warmly attached sons of the Church of England they deprecate any attempt to withdraw, even partially, the spiritual training of her youth, particularly the children of the poor, from the guardianship and superintendence of those to whom these duties especially belong—namely, the Parochial Clergy:

That, in the details of the plan of National Education, for which the approbation of your Honourable House is sought, your petitioners have looked in vain for a clear recognition of any one of the important principles which have now been stated:

That it is proposed therein to refer the ordering of the whole matter of instruction to individuals, for the tenor and correctness of whose religious feelings and opinions no security is required—no stipulation made.

That, by the provisions of this plan, the Roman Catholic version of the Scriptures is placed upon a footing of perfect equality with that translation of Holy Writ, which not only the members of the Established Church, but very many of other denominations of Christians, regard with especial veneration, as a version of undoubted authority, and as the great bulwark of the Protestant faith:

That this scheme—avoiding studiously, as it would appear, the very name of Christianity—presents Religion under a form so undefined, and, by its division of religious instruction into "general" and "special," seeks to establish distinctions so arbitrary and unwarranted, that, far from affording any solid ground of satisfaction, it fills the pious and reflecting mind with uneasiness and distrust:

That, under a deep sense of the evils to be apprehended from this measure, if carried into effect,—evils which, in the judgment of your petitioners, will affect most injuriously the best interests of the present and all succeeding generations; and impressed with the awful responsibility which attaches to a Christian state in a matter so directly concerning the glory of God and the welfare of His people, your petitioners earnestly implore your Honourable House to withdraw its sanction from the scheme of National Education which has been recommended by the Committee of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

At the same congregation the following degrees were conferred:—
Bachelor in Divinity.—Rev. George Atkinson, St. Peter's coll.

Master of Arts.—The Rev. Stephen Allen, Trinity coll. On Wednesday last, Messrs. Power, Powell, and Venables, were elected Foundation scholars of Pembroke coll.

At the same time Messrs. Tagg, Goode, Shortland, and Irwin, were appointed to scholarships on Dr. Watts's foundation.

On Saturday last, the Person prize was adjudged to Edward Meredith Cope, of Trinity coll., in this university.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METROPOLIS.

Sons of the Clergy.—On the 2nd of May the annual sermon on behalf of the funds of the sons of the clergy was preached before the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, &c., at St. Paul's Cathedral, by Lord J. Thynne, prebendary of Westminster. The sacred edifice was crowded, and the rev. gentleman made a most eloquent and forcible appeal on behalf of the charity, and at the conclusion of the service a liberal contribution was raised. The anniversary dinner afterwards took place at the Merchant Tailors' Hall, when nearly 300 persons of the first respectability sat down to dinner.

The Lord Mayor presided, and was supported by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge on the right, and his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury on the left. Amongst the company were, the Archbishop of Armagh, the Bishops of London, Llandaff, Chichester, Ripon, and Norwich; the Rev. Lord John Thynne, and the Archdeacon of London. Nearly the whole of the London clergy were present in their robes; as were also the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, Justices Alderson and Patteson, several members of both houses of parliament, and many of the first merchants and bankers of the city. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of Armagh, Sir N. Tindal, the Bishop of Chichester, the Bishop of Llandaff, Lord John Thynne, and Sir C. S. Hunter, spoke in favour of the objects of this institution.—The collection exceeded 900*l.*—Times.

On Whit-Monday the Bishop of London consecrated the large cemetery at Highgate belonging to the London Cemetery Company. His lordship was received by the Rev. Dr. Russell, the chairman of the company, and the directors.

The Annual Meeting of the subscribers and friends of the Metropolis Churches' Fund will be held at the house of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, 67, Lincoln's Inn Fields, on Wednesday the 19th inst.

National Education.—A meeting, which was very numerously attended, was held on Monday, June 3, at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, for the purpose of agreeing to a petition to be presented to the House of Commons against the proposed grant of 30,000*l.* for a scheme of national education, Capt. R. Alsager, M.P., in the chair. The hon. and gallant chairman was supported by Archdeacon Hoare, the Rev. Mr. Marsden, the Rev. M. Herbert, the Rev. G. D'Oyly, the Rev. E. Prodders, the Rev. T. Page, the Rev. — Broadley, Mr. J. Cumming, Mr. Alderman Brown, Dr. Kenny, the Rev. C. Lane, the Rev. R. Eden, the Rev. C. Peat, Mr. H. Ewbank, Mr. J. G. Meymott, Mr. W. Thurregood, Mr. J. Thomas, Mr. T. Jones, Mr. J. Ruffey, Mr. Goldie, Mr. Frederick Goode, the Rev. J. J. Russell, B.A., the Rev. J. Barker, and Mr. W. Rogers. The meeting, towards the conclusion of its proceedings, was interrupted by a body of persons, several of whom are well known as having taken a leading part in the proceedings of the Chartists on the Surrey side of the water. The meeting was addressed by the hon. and gallant chairman, Dr. D'Oyly, Mr. Cummins, and Alderman Brown, whose speeches the crowded state of our columns compels us to postpone the insertion of. The following resolutions were passed:—"That the diffusion of sound religious knowledge is to be cordially deemed as enjoined by the divine command, and eminently beneficial to the common weal, and this meeting views with deep regret an increasing disposition on the part of the legislature of these kingdoms to grant public money in disseminating Popish and Socinian error, especially in the education of the lower classes of this country. That a petition, embodying the foregoing resolution, be presented by Captain Alsager to the House of Commons."

The Bishop of London has laid on the table of the House of Lords the following clause, which he will propose in Committee on the Church Discipline Bill:—"And be it enacted, that when it shall come to the knowledge or belief of any bishop, by any information or other means on which he can satisfactorily rely, that any such spiritual person resident or holding any preferment within his diocese, shall have committed any offence or offences, which, if established in due course of law, would subject such spiritual person to ecclesiastical censures, and no prosecution shall have been commenced against him, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall see fit, to cause a written statement of the imputed offence or offences, to be delivered to such spiritual person, and if such spiritual person shall freely and voluntarily, and by writing under his hand, acknowledge that he has been guilty of such offence or offences, or any of them, and undertake to abide by such sentence as the said bishop may impose, it shall be lawful for the said bishop, without public proceedings, by a sentence, under his hand and seal, to prohibit such spiritual person from residing on or officiating within any preferment which he may hold within the diocese; and the said bishop shall thereupon sequester any such preferment in the same manner and for the same purposes as the same might have been sequestered after suspension by any definitive sentence or decree of the judge of the Court of Arches; and all such sentences shall be good and effectual in law, as if pronounced by the said judge after a hearing according to the provisions of this Act, and may be enforced by the like means, and shall be final and conclusive, and there shall be no appeal therefrom. Provided always, that the said bishop may, if he shall see need, in and by such sentence, assign to such spiritual person, out of the profits of such preferment, any annual sum not exceeding one-half of the net annual value of such preferment; provided also, that after a sentence so pronounced, it shall not be competent to commence any prosecution under this Act, against such spiritual person on account of the offence or offences for which the said sentence purports to have been pronounced, and such offence or offences, and the consent and undertaking aforesaid, shall be stated in the said sentence, which shall remain on record in the registry of the said bishop."

PROVINCIAL.

Cheshire.—On the 16th of May, the foundation-stone of a new church in the rural district of Sutton, near Macclesfield, was laid by the Rev. F. S. Newbold, D.D.; after which the Rev. J. Burnet, incumbent of St. George's, offered up a dedicatory prayer. The audience then joined in singing the doxology. The site of land for the church and burial-ground has been munificently presented to the committee by the late Mrs. Newbold, of Foden Bank, in conjunction with her son, the Rev. Dr. Newbold, and the Right Hon. Lord Bingham.

Durham.—At a meeting of the committee and friends to the Durham Diocesan School Society, held in Bishop Cosin's Library, in this city, on the 26th of April, the Ven. Archdeacon Thorp in the Chair, a committee was appointed to consider the best means of establishing and conducting a training school in Durham, for the instruction of masters according to the principles of the Church of England and Ireland.—Durham Advertiser.

IRELAND.

Church Education Society.—It is with peculiar pleasure we observe that the members of the Established Church in Ireland, lay as well as clerical, are becoming more sensible of the necessity of providing a suitable education for the youth of their own communion. A society was formed for this purpose in the diocese of Raphoe, of which the Marquis of Abercorn has consented to become the president, and we have no doubt that it will speedily attain a very high degree of efficiency.—Derry Sentinel.

FOREIGN.

A correspondent at Rome writes on the 27th ult. as follows:—"A grand ceremony, the canonization of several new saints, took place yesterday (Trinity Sunday) in St. Peter's. Great preparations had long been previously made. The marble ornaments of the church were covered with splendid hangings of red and white silk, with golden ornaments and fringes, interspersed with crowns and garlands of red and white roses, arranged with the utmost taste; the effect being heightened by innumerable girandoles attached to the columns and suspended from the roof. Inscriptions in Latin, recording the chief miracles performed by those who were the objects of the ceremony, were placed at intervals. A gorgeous throne was erected for the Pope behind the high altar, where his Holiness was seated, surrounded by all the cardinals, and upwards of 200 bishops and archbishops, a great many generals of monastic orders, and deputations from the most distant Roman Catholic churches. The ceremonial commenced at an early hour with the procession of the Host, conducted with all the pomp observed on the festival of the Corpus Dei; and in the evening the dome of St. Peter's was illuminated as at Easter and on St. Peter's day. The King of Naples, who arrived incog., the King of Bavaria, Don Miguel, the Queen-Dowager of Sardinia, the Duchess de Berri, Prince Joseph de Lignori, Prince of Pallica, and other relatives of St. Alphonse de Lignori (one of the new saints) were present. The Queen-Dowager of Sardinia intimated to the Pope, on this occasion, her intention of retiring to a convent."—Galignani's Messenger.

AWFULLY SUDDEN DEATH.—As the Rev. Rice Rees, Professor of Welsh in St. David's College, Lampeter, was returning from Cascomb, Radnorshire, where he had been on a visit for a few days, to his respected uncle, the Rev. W. J. Rees, he called at Newbridge, about six miles from Builth, to bait his horse, and complained of illness, but left apparently strong and hearty; he had, however, scarcely crossed the bridge into Brecknockshire, when he fell dead in the road from his horse's back! The Rev. gentleman was an accomplished scholar, a most amiable, worthy man, and an ornament and honour to the Church of England: by his numerous relatives and friends, including the members and pupils of his College, his sudden death will long be severely felt and deeply lamented, and by all who knew him his many amiable qualities will long be held in affectionate remembrance.

After the fatal battle of Worcester, it was to the honour and faith of the gallant brothers of Boscobel that the monarch owed his life: and though a reward of one thousand pounds was offered for the discovery and apprehension of Charles Stuart, the fidelity of these honourable men remained firm and unshaken.

This Association has a Capital exceeding £100,000, invested in Government securities, which is increasing from £13,000 to £14,000 per annum. It is founded on the principle of Friendly Societies, and in conformity with their Act of Parliament, whereby it obtains the highest rate of interest on its investments, and other important advantages appertaining thereto. It also secures a larger return to its annuitants than any other mode of life insurance.

It is worthy of remark that the present annuitants exceed £20 each, the estimated value of which may be taken at £400; but if a person, aged say 29, insures his life for that sum, the annual payment will be about £10, whereas for one of these annuitants it is only £2.

This Society, therefore, is admirably adapted to those persons whose income will cease, or be diminished on death, as by a trifling yearly sacrifice they may thus provide for their widows, children, or other relatives, to the extent of six annuities.

Prospectuses and every information may be had on application at the Office as above, where the annual reports may also be inspected.

SPIRITUAL DESTITUTION OF THE PARISH OF BETHNAL-GREEN, LONDON.

THE Parish of Bethnal-Green, containing a population of 70,000 souls, with accommodation in the Churches for scarcely 5,000 persons, and without a sufficient number of Clergymen for Pastoral Superintendence, or of Schools for the instruction of the Children, is in a state of spiritual destitution, which should excite the Christian sympathy of all those who take an interest in the present welfare and the eternal happiness of their fellow-creatures.

An earnest appeal is now made to the Public, with the approval of the Bishop of the Diocese, for the purpose of dividing the Parish into TEN additional Districts, and providing each with a Church, a Resident Minister, and Schools.

Communications may be addressed to the Hon. Secretaries—the Rev. Bryan King, 3, Bethnal-green; or the Rev. Henry Mackenzie, Bancroft's Hospital, Mile-end road, or 3, Crosby-square, Bishopsgate-street.

TO THE CHRISTIAN PUBLIC.

AT the last Audit of the PRAYER BOOK and HOMILY SOCIETY'S Accounts, it was found that, in addition to a balance of 591. 19s. 11d. due to the Treasurer, its engagements to various Tradesmen amounted to 2,212. And, at the Annual General Meeting, the first resolution unanimously adopted was, "That the Report just read be printed under the direction of the Committee; and that while this Meeting hears with pleasure of the increase in the funds, it deeply laments the want of a much larger Annual Income, not only to meet the present liabilities, which have arisen from its active operations, but to allow of a yet further extension of the Society's labours. It, therefore, affectionately urges on the consideration of its friends the necessity of greater exertion than heretofore for relieving it from its difficulties."

Contributions, which are earnestly solicited, will be thankfully received at the Society's Office, No. 1, Exeter Hall, Strand. At the following Bankers: Messrs. Hoares, Fleet-street; Williams, Deacon, and Co., Birchin-lane; Drummonds, Charing Cross; and Hammersley and Co.'s, Pall Mall. Also, at Messrs. Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly; Messrs. Nisbet and Co.'s, Berners-street; Messrs. Seeley's, 169, Fleet-street; and at the Office of the Record, Red Lion Court, Fleet-street.

NATIONAL SOCIETY for PROMOTING the EDUCATION of the POOR in the Principles of the Established Church throughout England and Wales, founded 1811; incorporated by Royal Charter 1817.

President, The Archbishop of CANTERBURY.

At a Public Meeting of the friends of National Education in the principles of the Established Church, holden at Willis's Rooms, on Tuesday, the 28th ult.

His Grace the Archbishop of CANTERBURY in the Chair.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—
Proposed by the Earl of CHICHESTER, seconded by the Bishop of LONDON,

1. "That it is an object of the highest national importance to provide, that instruction in the truths and precepts of Christianity should form an essential part of every system of education intended for the people at large; and that such instruction should be under the superintendence of the clergy, and in conformity with the doctrines of the Church of this realm, as the recognised teacher of religion."

Proposed by Lord ASHBORNE, seconded by the Bishop of SALISBURY.

2. "That the Incorporated 'National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church,' by the formation of numerous schools in immediate connexion with the Church, has rendered eminent service to the cause of Christian education; and that the general principles upon which it was originally founded ought still to be adhered to in every plan for extending more widely the benefits of education, whether by multiplying national schools, or by enlarging the circle of instruction in those which already exist."

Proposed by the Rev. W. F. HOOK, D.D., seconded by Viscount BARRINGTON, M.P.

3. "That this Meeting contemplates with satisfaction the establishment of diocesan and local boards of education in connexion with the National Society, having for their object the extension of the benefits of education, contemplated in the foregoing resolution, as well as the establishment and encouragement of schools for the education of the middle classes, upon principles conformable to those which are embodied in the Society's Charter."

Proposed by the Dean of CHICHESTER, seconded by R. BETHELL, Esq., M.P.

4. "That, in order to supply one of the principal defects which at present limit the operations of the National Society, and retard the improvement of education throughout the country, efforts should be made to raise the qualifications of those persons who are employed as teachers in our parochial and national schools; and that the resolution adopted by the National Society in August last, to establish a training institution for the education of young persons intended for that office, is calculated to promote the attainment of this object."

Proposed by Archdeacon BATHURST, seconded by Sir T. D. ACLAND, Bart., M.P.

5. "That, in order to furnish the National Society with the means of establishing a training institution and generally extending and improving the education of the poor, an immediate exertion be made to increase its resources, and that a Committee be immediately formed for the purpose of soliciting and collecting subscriptions."

Proposed by the Earl of WINCHILSEA, seconded by Mr. BARON ALDERSON.

6. "That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Archbishop of Canterbury."

The original outlay requisite for setting on foot the Central Training Institution referred to in the fourth of the above resolutions, on an adequate scale, is estimated at not less than 30,000l.; and the annual expenditure consequent upon this undertaking alone, not to speak of the increased expenses which will be entailed upon the Society generally, at not less than 3,000l. Hitherto its resources have been very limited, the annual subscriptions of last year amounting to no more than 1,212l.; and all the money collected under the Royal letters, together with a large portion of the donations, benefactions, and legacies, has been scrupulously applied to the building of new schools, so that all that has been thus obtained has been returned back to the country with interest.

The number of schools in union with the Society, either directly, or through district societies, is 6,778, and the number of children under education in such schools, is 597,911.

Subscriptions and donations are received on account of Joshua Watson, Esq., the Treasurer of the National Society, at Messrs. Drummonds', Charing Cross; Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co.'s, St. James's-street; Messrs. Hoares, Fleet-street; Messrs. Twining's, Strand; Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., Birchin-lane; Messrs. Hankey's, Fenchurch-street. Also by Mr. Stretton, Collector, 67, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

An address, setting forth the extended designs of the National Society, and its increased claims upon the public support, has already appeared, and may be had on application at the Central School, Sanctuary, Westminster.

J. C. WIGRAM, M.A., Secretary.

The Bishops, and Seven Laymen.

General Committee.

The Episcopal Clergy of Scotland, Members of Diocesan Committees, and Twenty Laymen in Edinburgh.

THE objects of this Society are—1. To provide a fund for aged or infirm Clergymen, salaries for their Assistants, and general aid for Congregations struggling with pecuniary difficulties. 2. To assist candidates for the Ministry in completing their theological studies. 3. To provide Episcopal Schoolmasters, Books, and Tracts, for the Poor. 4. To assist in the formation or enlargement of Diocesan Libraries. And by Rule IX. it is provided:—"That no application for aid shall be entertained by the General Committee unless recommended by the Diocesan Committee, and sanctioned by the Bishop of the Diocese from whence it comes."

Those who judge of Episcopacy in Scotland from what they observe in the large towns, will form a most incorrect estimate of its condition in some of the country districts. The Scottish Episcopal Church has, in different parts, been long suffering under the pressure of extreme poverty. In many instances the salary of the Clergyman does not exceed £20; in one instance, it is £10; in another, £6; in another, £2; in another, nothing to be depended on. Surely such a state of things should not be suffered to exist. When, from sickness or old age, the Incumbent requires an Assistant, some more permanent and efficient funds are especially needful. In the Northern Counties, where Episcopians are numerous, the people are extremely poor, and have lately experienced such difficulties in procuring the necessities of life, that they have not had much to spare for Ecclesiastical purposes. This is the more to be deplored, as many excellent young men have been studying for the Ministry, and give promise of a rising generation of useful, intelligent, and devoted Clergymen. Their means for education, for procuring books, and for subsisting, before being placed in charges, are sadly limited, and their ultimate prospects sufficiently discouraging. In many parts the poor Episcopalian families have little means of educating their children according to the principles of their own Church; and hence the difficulty of providing Schoolmasters, of furnishing Bibles, Prayer-Books (Gaelic and English), books for Education, Tracts, &c., has been severely felt by the Clergy of these districts. From these and other similar considerations, the friends of the Church have frequently turned their attention to supplying some remedy. The "Scottish Episcopal Fund" was raised, in 1806, for the benefit of the Church; but it is to be remembered that this Fund is, by its constitution, as well as means, precluded from giving aid in such cases as retired Clergymen, Students, Repairs of Chapels, Schools, Books, &c.

In 1832, the "GAELIC EPISCOPAL SOCIETY" was instituted for supplying some of these necessities. A Committee was formed in London, which received the support of the Bishops of London, Winchester, Chester, Oxford, Lincoln, Nova Scotia, Calcutta, and of the late Bishops of Durham, Ely, and of Lichfield and Coventry, and Quebec, and of other distinguished Members of the Church. Its operation, however, was too limited, and it has now merged into "THE SCOTTISH EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOCIETY."

Subscriptions and Donations will be thankfully received in England, by Messrs. Currie and Co., Bankers, Cornhill; H. Cantley, Esq., 10, St. Helen's Place, Bishopsgate-street; Mr. H. Stretton, 67, Lincoln's Inn Fields; Rev. H. Mackenzie, Bancroft's Hospital; Rev. G. R. Gleig, Chelsea Hospital; Mr. Burns, 17, Portman-street, Portman-square; Rev. John Sandford, Vicarage, Dunchurch; Sir Joseph Lock and Co., Oxford; and by the Rev. Thomas Bialand, Hartley Maudyett Rectory, near Alton, Hants, Secretary for England, who will receive and answer all communications regarding the Society.

It is particularly requested that Communications for the Secretaries may be addressed to the care of Mr. Burns, 17, Portman-street.

THE

CHURCH MAGAZINE,

Under the Direction of Clergymen of the Church of England.

The July Number will contain a highly-finished Portrait of the Rev. H. M'NEILE, of Liverpool.

The chief object of this Magazine is to bring before the minds of the great body of the English people, in plain language, and in a Christian spirit, facts and arguments in defence of those Scriptural and Catholic principles by which the United Church of England and Ireland is distinguished from all sorts of Dissenters, whether Romish or Protestant.

The unexampled success which THE CHURCH MAGAZINE has already received, and which has given it, in point of circulation, the lead of all the Monthly Magazines connected with the Church, encourages the hope that it will meet with general support, and prove highly advantageous to the ancient Church of our country, in a time of great persecution and danger. The style, language, and price are equally adapted for the mass of the people; and the Clergy and other Churchmen will render essential service to the glorious cause they love, by recommending it to all within the range of their influence.

Each Number will contain a finely executed Portrait of some distinguished Clergyman, worth double the price of the Magazine.

Portraits of the Bishop of London, the Rev. Dr. Hook, the Archbishop of York, the Rev. E. Bickersteth, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Rev. G. Townsend, have already appeared.

Besides various Original Articles, Letters, &c., THE CHURCH MAGAZINE contains a complete register of the Ecclesiastical Transactions of the Month.

THE PRINCIPLES of MODERN DISSENTANT EVANGELISM DISCLOSED, and the CHURCH of ENGLAND proved to be the only CONSERVATIVE of the NATIONAL FAITH; the only safe Instructrix of the Poor; and indestructible but by her own hands. Being a series of letters (originally published in the "Times," and just concluded) to Dr. Pye Smith, on "Geology and Revelation," and on Dissentient "Popular Education," with a summary refutation of Dr. Wardlaw's late lectures on Church Establishments. By the Rev. HENRY COLE, late of Clare Hall, Cambridge.

James Nisbet and Co., 21, Berners-street; L. and G. Seeley, Fleet-street; and Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly.

A SERIES of QUESTIONS on the CHURCH CATECHISM (with the Answers separate). By the Rev. S. S. MEGGISON, Vicar of Bolam, Northumberland. Newcastle, Currie and Bowman; London, L. and G. Seeley, Fleet-street.

NEW GENERAL BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, projected and partly arranged by the late Rev. HUGH JAMES ROSE, B.D., Principal of King's College, London.

Edited by the Rev. HENRY J. ROSE, B.D., Late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

THE want of a Biographical Dictionary, at once comprehensive in its range of names, and moderate in extent, has long been felt and acknowledged. The two works which appear the most nearly to meet the wishes of the public in this respect are the "Biographie Universelle," and the "General Biographical Dictionary of Chalmers." While the merit and value of each of these works is duly recognised, it will at once be acknowledged that they labour under inherent disadvantages, which preclude them from general acceptance, as a means of supplying this long-felt want. The extent of the "Biographie Universelle" banishes it almost entirely from the shelves of private libraries, even of a superior order. But this is not all: the preponderance given to French lives, the inaccuracy of some of its articles, and the disproportionate space occupied by unimportant lives, deprive its pages of much of their usefulness to the general reader. On the other hand, the work of Chalmers, although highly meritorious in some departments, is so deficient in the number of names which it embraces, that it is wholly inadequate to satisfy the readers of the present day. Thus the extent of one of these works, and the deficiencies of the other, alike cripple their general utility, and create an imperative demand for a new work, which shall steer a middle course between the two. It is to meet this demand that the "NEW DICTIONARY of GENERAL BIOGRAPHY" has been projected. The object of those by whom it has been brought forward is, to produce a work superior to any thing which at present exists within the same limits, and to present to the public a mass of information which cannot be found in any other work, however extensive. The services of many able Contributors have already been engaged, and as the work has been for a long time in preparation, the Editor feels justified in promising the appearance of a Part every month, until the whole is concluded. It is impossible, in a general Prospectus, to give a detail of the plan adopted in every particular. Suffice it to state, that the Editor feels himself responsible for the ability of the Contributors in whose hands any portion of the work is placed, and for the general tone of sentiment pervading its pages. It will also be his constant endeavour to preserve the relation between the extent of the articles and the importance of the subject, to such a degree that the work may constitute one harmonious whole. The Dictionary will be founded on the existing collections of Biography, as far, and so far only, as they may be safely consulted. The matter thus collected will be augmented and corrected from such sources as the reading of individual Contributors (among whom will be found many distinguished names) may supply; and a vast fund of original information, and many hundred names not to be found elsewhere, will be added to the existing stock of knowledge on biographical subjects. The lives, also, of eminent men will generally be written by Contributors who have made the respective paths of eminence, pursued by those individuals, their peculiar study. Having made these general statements, the Editor feels that it is better to trust to performance than promises, and will leave the work, on its appearance, to speak for itself.

It is a duty to all persons concerned in this work to state, that it was originally projected by the late Principal of King's College, London,—the Rev. Hugh James Rose; and a considerable portion of it was executed under arrangements made by him, although no part of it was subjected to his revision. In consequence of his deeply-lamented decease, the work was placed in the hands of the present Editor, whose earnest endeavour it will be to follow out the plan originally devised, with such modifications as circumstances, and the advantage of the work itself, may seem to demand.

The "NEW GENERAL BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY" will be published in Monthly Parts, and, when completed, will most probably not exceed twelve closely printed volumes octavo. The First Part will appear in June.

London: printing for B. Fellowes; J. G. and F. Rivington; Duncan and Malcolm; E. Hodgson; G. Lawford; J. M. Richardson; J. Bohn; J. Bain; R. Hodgson; J. Dowling; G. and A. Greenland; F. C. Westley; J. Fraser; L. A. Lewis; James Bohn; and for J. and J. Deighton, Cambridge; and J. H. Parker, Oxford.

* This remark extends not merely to individual names, but to whole classes of articles, e.g. the Spanish and Portuguese lives. This circumstance has induced the Editor of the present work to place all these articles in the hands of a gentleman who for many years has cultivated Spanish literature with the most distinguished success.

This work is now completed, containing one hundred Engravings on Steel, and upwards of two hundred on Wood.
"We have, placed at the head of this article, one of the most beautiful and interesting illustrations which has yet been published of the external appearance of the University of Oxford. It contains some valuable historical sketches by the President of Trinity College, and will supply a very useful and pleasing introduction to that more serious consideration which in the present state of the country that University well deserves." Quarterly Review, Jan. 1838.

"Most persons who fall in with this work would but consider it as a collection of beautiful prints in illustration of one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. In consequence they will be disposed to place it on their drawing-room table; a position which seems to confirm the impression which the first view of it creates. And it really is a most interesting publication, considered merely as a work of art; but those who have been led to cast their eyes over the letter-press, will find a kind of matter there of a very different complexion from the running accompaniment, in large type and small sense, which in such publications is commonly used to swell the volume without hurting its character. Dr. Ingram, however, the learned writer of the letter-press, is evidently not a man to figure as a mere chivalrous aux d'armes, or to serve as an elegant appendage to the fashion of the hour. Judging by the work before us, we should say he was as little like a writer in an annual or album as any author we ever read. He is apparently one of the race of men, now almost extinct, who used to live all their days both in and for the University."—British Critic, July, 1838.

SCRIPTURAL BREVIAIRES, or SHORT COMPENDIUMS of FAITH and PRACTICE for the SICK; consisting of Exhortations, Passages of Scripture, and Prayers, applicable to the several circumstances of their Visitation.

The object of the Breviaries, of which the above is a portion, to assist the Parochial Clergy in the Pastoral care, by providing suitable religious instruction for their Parishioners, of every age and condition. The whole form a series systematically arranged for the instruction both of children and adults in the principles of the Christian Religion, and the duties of their respective callings, in conformity to the rule of faith, doctrine, and discipline of the United Church of England and Ireland.

It is intended that the number of the Breviaries should be increased as the opportunity may offer, should they prove to be acceptable to the Parochial Clergy and to the Public generally.

The Scriptural Breviaries are published at the rate of 2s. per 100 copies. As it is very desirable that they should circulate through the medium of the Booksellers in Town and Country, the Breviaries cannot be sold in smaller quantities than 50 copies; but the 50 may be either a perfect set, as of Class K., or consist wholly of any one Breviary in the Class.

The set of Breviaries for the Visitation of the Sick, Nos. 1 to 50, (preceded by The Order for the Visitation of the Sick, The Ministration of Private Baptism of Children in Houses, and The Communion of the Sick,) may be had bound in a volume, price 2s. In orders for this volume it should be called "Scriptural Breviaries, Vol. K."

A Case for the Pocket, to hold a set of loose copies of the Breviaries, has also been prepared. The price of the Case without the Breviaries is 1s. It should be ordered as "The Case for the Scriptural Breviaries, Class K."

The Order for the Visitation of the Sick; Private Baptism; and Communion of the Sick; may be had separately, price 2d.

"The author not inaptly designates this 'a novel in rhyme,' and it has merits in both respects. As a tale it has much to rouse attention; it is cast in a superior mould, and the characters and incidents are naturally and skilfully evolved. The language throughout is remarkably easy and graceful; and there are passages which, for poetic sense and genuine feeling, would do credit to some of our best poets."—Liverpool Courier.

SERMONS (thirty-three) on our BLESSED LORD'S CHARACTER and PRETENSIONS, and on some of the Leading Doctrines of His Religion. By the Rev. GEO. WRAY, M.A., late Lecturer of Leeds. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"It is with regret that we are compelled to pass by many of these valuable sermons—sermons which the critic and the simple inquirer after truth may read with equal advantage—sermons which, more especially in these times, are fitted to become models of those which should proceed from the pulpit. Piety without affectation, orthodoxy without taint, and learning without pedantry, everywhere characterizes them."—Church of England Quarterly Review, No. 8.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, 1838, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841.

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 13.—VOL. II.

LONDON, TUESDAY, JULY 9, 1839.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the SECOND TUESDAY IN EVERY MONTH, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom.

It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

IN another part of this Number we have given an Index to the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE for the first year, together with a title page for the first volume. On the back of the title page will be found a short account of the progress of the work during the year, to which we beg to call the attention of our readers.

We have the pleasure to state, in addition to those particulars respecting the extent of our circulation, that the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel have ordered that a copy of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE shall be sent regularly to each of their missionaries in whatever part of the world they may be engaged. And we venture to hope that their example may not be lost upon other Societies.

We also call attention to the Report of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society. We are glad to observe that during the year in which that Society has made our pages the medium of its advertisements, the members of it have largely increased in number, and that the amount assured upon life exceeds the aggregate amount assured in three preceding years.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

JULY, 1839.

THE DEAN OF CHICHESTER in the Chair.

AT the General Meeting of the SOCIETY held on Tuesday, the 2d of July, 1839, the recommendation made by the Standing Committee to the Board at the last Meeting was read; namely, that the sum of Five Thousand Pounds should be placed at the disposal of the National Society, in furtherance of the objects set forth in the Resolutions which were adopted at a public Meeting of the friends of National Education in the principles of the Church on the 28th of May, 1839.

The Rev. William Dodsworth moved, as an amendment, "that the sum of Ten Thousand Pounds, instead of Five Thousand Pounds, should be granted for this purpose."

This was seconded by the Rev. T. H. Elwyn, and negatived.

The recommendation of the Standing Committee was then put from the Chair, and adopted.

Mr. Dodsworth then gave the following notice of motion:—

"That at the November Meeting an additional sum of Five Thousand Pounds be granted by the Board in furtherance of the objects of the National Society, as set forth in the Resolutions contained in the Monthly Report of this SOCIETY for June, 1839."

The following Report from the Standing Committee was read to the Board, to be taken into consideration at the Meeting to be held on the 1st of October next.

"The Standing Committee beg to report to the Board, that having taken into consideration the prices at which books are at present supplied to District Committees, and having also referred the subject to the consideration of the Sub-Committee for Finance, they are of opinion that it is expedient to relinquish the claim of the SOCIETY upon the District Committees, for the differences between cost price and Members' price upon all books sold by them to non-members, or for the payment of 10 per cent, which has been paid by many of those Committees in lieu of those differences; and that in future District Committees should be supplied with the books at Members' prices.

"They therefore beg to recommend, that certain of the Rules for District Committees should be altered in the following manner; namely,

"That in the 8th Rule, the words, 'Provided they account to the Parent SOCIETY for the difference between the Members' price and the cost price of the books so disposed of, be omitted.

"That the 11th Rule stand thus: 'That Parochial Clergymen, making pecuniary collections for the use of their respective parishes, may obtain books at Members' prices, to the whole amount of such collection, either from the Parent SOCIETY, or from the District Committees.'

"That in the 3rd and 4th Rules for Foreign District Committees, the words 'Members' prices' be substituted for 'cost prices.'

"The Standing Committee beg at the same time to recommend, that the 9th Rule for District Committees be strictly enforced, so as to prevent them, as far as possible, from falling into arrears with the SOCIETY.

"With reference to the alteration of the 23rd Rule of the SOCIETY, which was referred to their consideration at the General Meeting in March, the Standing Committee recommend that it stand as follows:—

"That Members be at liberty to apply for books at non-members' price for any purpose; but that no Member be at liberty to apply for books on the terms of the SOCIETY, except for his own use and distribution, or for sale to the poor, or for the use of charitable institutions with which he is locally or parochially connected: and that a copy of this Rule be annexed to the printed form of application for books."

The following Report of the Foreign Translation Committee, for the year 1839, was read to the Meeting:—

"The Foreign Translation Committee, in presenting their Annual Report, have the pleasure of laying before the Board a copy of the new translation of the Liturgy into Modern Greek, which has been completed at Athens, under the superintendence of the Rev. H. D. Leves, and printed in London, at the expense of the SOCIETY, under the care of a Clergyman of the Church of England, who from his intimate acquaintance with the language, was considered to be fully qualified for the task. The Committee hope that this new version of the Liturgy will be found not unworthy of the SOCIETY, either in point of correctness and elegance of style, or in the appearance of the work.

"With reference to this translation of the Liturgy, the Committee think it due to the Board to state, that as some apprehensions have been expressed by Members of the SOCIETY, lest this measure should be considered as an interference on their part with the affairs of the Greek Church, they have taken care to insert at the beginning of the work a notice to the following effect; that the translation has been made, 'not with the intention of introducing the use of our own Liturgy into any Foreign Church (ἐκκλησίαν), but solely for the purpose of making known to all, what are the rites and ceremonies and doctrines of the Church of England.'

"The Committee trust that this notice will be sufficient to obviate any misapprehension of their intentions, and to explain the purposes of the SOCIETY with regard to those Foreign Churches among whom this translation may be circulated.

"The printing of the new Arabic version of the Liturgy is in progress at Malta, under the care of the Rev. C. F. Schlienz. In the mean time, copies of the former translation (Pococke's), as completed and printed at Bishop's College, Calcutta, at the expense of the SOCIETY, have been circulated in Syria and Egypt, by the Rev. Dr. Mill, on his way homeward from India.

"In those countries they were very well received by the clergy of the Oriental Churches generally; and it is hoped that they have contributed to promote a good understanding with them. Copies of this work are now in the hands of the SOCIETY, and may be had for circulation by the Members.

"The Committee have the pleasure to annex to this Report, an account of the proceedings of the Rev. C. F. Schlienz in Egypt, with reference to a new translation of the Bible into Arabic*; and they are happy to state, that this important work has actually been commenced, and has been in progress since the beginning of the present year. The commencement has been made with the Old Testament, that portion of the Bible being in the worst condition in the existing translations. The different portions of the translation will be sent to England as they are finished, in order that they may be submitted to competent persons for examination before they are printed. The Committee are daily expecting to receive the first portion of the Pentateuch, inasmuch as they were informed by Mr. Schlienz, in his last communication, that the Book of Genesis was completed, and was only waiting for transcription, that a fair copy might be sent to the SOCIETY. As the Report of Mr. Schlienz enters so fully into the subject, and shows the importance of the undertaking in so strong a point of view, the Committee think it unnecessary to enter into the details.

"The new French version of the Holy Scriptures has been carried on with as much activity as the Committee reasonably could expect under the peculiar circumstances of the case. The whole of the New Testament is now in type, having undergone the revision of the Paris Committee, and also of this Committee, with the exception of some of the later Epistles. Of the Old Testament, the Pentateuch has been revised; an entire new version of the Psalms has been made; and some parts of the Prophetic Books have been revised. The quarto edition of the Bible, with the marginal references adapted to the French, is also in progress, and will be ready about the same time as the smaller edition.

"The Committee regret to state, that the District Committees of Guernsey and Jersey, to whom they had looked for co-operation throughout, have found this to be a work requiring so much time and labour, that they have felt themselves compelled, as Committees, to give up their share in the revision. The Committee, however, have some reason to hope that they shall be able, to a great extent, to supply this loss by the kind and valuable assistance afforded to them by individual clergymen in the islands.

"The Committee have also undertaken a revised edition of the Liturgy in French. This is already in a forward state—the revision of the daily services, the occasional prayers, the collects, epistles, and gospels, being almost complete. It is expected, also, that the Psalms and the other Scripture portions will be ready, by the time when they will be required in their places in the work. The Committee have therefore great hopes that they shall be able to publish the New Testament and the Liturgy before the end of the present year.

"It may be necessary to state, that this new edition of the Liturgy is not intended for the use of the islands of Guernsey and Jersey, which have each of them a distinct edition of their own, but for the circulation of the SOCIETY in France and in the British Colonies.

"The revision of the Old Testament in Spanish has been continued; and the Pentateuch and some other portions are in type.

"The Committee are happy to state, that a satisfactory way has been opened to them for promoting the circulation of the New Testament, and also of the Liturgy, in the interior of Spain. They have already availed themselves of the opportunity thus afforded, by ordering a thousand copies of each to be sent to that country. And as it is not to be expected, in the present state of Spain, that any great amount can be received in return, they have thought it right to send them upon such terms as will enable the parties to circulate them at little more than a nominal price. The Liturgy of the Church of England seems to be peculiarly acceptable to those Spaniards, who have been enabled to shake off from their own minds the superstitions which at present darken the Church of their country, without throwing aside (as unhappily is too often the case) their attachment to the true Catholic Church, or the belief of Christianity itself. The Committee, therefore, look with increased satisfaction to this part of their operations; and though a beginning only has been made, they cannot but hope that this attempt to promote Christian Knowledge in its purest form in Spain will continue to prosper in the hands of the SOCIETY.

"The Committee have had propositions submitted to them with regard to other versions, both of the Holy Scriptures and of the Liturgy, but they are not at present in a condition to make a report to the Board respecting them.

"The Committee beg to state to the Board, that in consequence of having lost some of their original members by death and resignation, they think it desirable that an addition should be made to their present number. They therefore venture to recommend that an application should be made by the Board to his Grace the President, as in the first instance, that he would be pleased to nominate a few additional Members of the SOCIETY to be appointed members of this Committee."

On its being proposed that the above Report be adopted, including the recommendation contained in the concluding paragraph; Mr. Rochfort Clarke moved, by way of amendment, with reference to this recommendation,

"That it be referred to the Standing Committee, to consider the mode in which vacancies in the Foreign Translation Committee should be filled up."

Mr. G. J. P. Smith seconded this.

The amendment was negatived.

The Report, with the recommendation, was then adopted.

Mr. Hull gave the following notice for the General Meeting in November next, to be renewed in October,

"That his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury be requested to appoint responsible editors to prepare Commentaries on the Old Testament, the Epistles, and the Revelation, in order to complete the SOCIETY's new edition of the Bible, so that the whole Bible may be ready for publication at the same time at which Mr. Lonsdale and Mr. Hale may publish their Commentary on the Four Gospels and the Acts."

A Memorial was laid before the Meeting, signed by the Rev. Hastings Robinson, D.D., the Rev. Henry Budd, the Rev. Guy Bryan, the Rev. C. J. Yorke, and the Rev. H. B. Harris, in which they quote passages from two of the Tracts on the SOCIETY's Catalogue (No. 146 and No. 147), and state their objections to them.

It was agreed, on the motion of the Rev. J. Endell Tyler, seconded by the Rev. Dr. Short, that this communication do lie on the table.

It having appeared by a minute of the Board, dated June 7, 1836, that on the occasion of a grant of One Thousand Pounds having been then made to the Lord Bishop of Australia, towards the promotion of religious instruction in New South Wales, a hope was held out of a further grant of Five Hundred Pounds for each of the two succeeding years; and that no sum beyond the original grant had yet been paid; it was agreed,

That the Treasurer of the SOCIETY be empowered to accept his Lordship's bill for Five Hundred Pounds.

The following letter was read from the Rev. Thomas Dale to the Secretary, with reference to a grant of 20l. made by the SOCIETY on the 5th of April, 1836, towards the erection of a Church and Parsonage at Augusta, Swan River, Western Australia. The letter contained a cheque for 230l. 11s. 9d.

"I have the pleasure to inclose you a draft for 230l. 11s. 9d., being the sum collected towards the erection of a Church and Parsonage at Augusta, Swan River, Western Australia. The particulars are detailed in the accompanying proposals, and it will doubtless be within your recollections, that the sum of 20l. was contributed towards the object by the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE. The family, however, whose benefit was more immediately contemplated, having left the place, and the settlement itself not having prospered according to the expectation of the projectors, I am deputed, in the name of the trustees, to place the amount of the collection, through the medium of the venerable SOCIETY, at the disposal of the Lord Bishop of Australia, for the purpose of erecting a Church. The trustees, reposing implicit confidence in his Lordship's judgment, do not stipulate for any specific appropriation as to the locality of the Church to be built; but should the claims of different places be, in the Bishop's view, equal or nearly equal, they would feel personally obliged if his Lordship would give the preference to that which shall be nearest to Augusta. Augusta is in the county of Sussex, lat. 34° 20' south; long. 115° 8' east."

* This has been printed in the Report for March last.

It was agreed, on the motion of the Rev. J. Endell Tyler, seconded by the Dean of Hereford, that this sum be placed at the disposal of the Lord Bishop of Australia accordingly, and that Mr. Dale's communication be acknowledged with the thanks of the Meeting.

A letter was read from Lieut.-Col. Gawler, Governor of South Australia; the SOCIETY, in July, 1838, having placed at his disposal the sum of 250*l.* towards procuring additional Church accommodation and other religious advantages in that colony.

"I beg you to return to the Committee of the SOCIETY for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE my best thanks for the obliging manner in which they replied to my application for assistance towards the building of Churches in South Australia. A letter from Mr. Howard, which I enclose, will explain the state of the Church here, and show that the liberal donation of the SOCIETY was most acceptable and well-timed. Under all the circumstances, I thought it right to apply the whole of the 250*l.* to the completion of the enlargement of Trinity Church.

"The present building will hold about 300 persons; in the morning it is crowded to overflowing. The enlargement will, when finished, and it is rapidly going on, double the accommodation. Even then it will not be large enough for the demands of the present population; and when I mention to you that settlers are flowing in at the average fully of 500 a month, I need scarcely add, that before this letter reaches England, there will in all probability be in this city a number of persons disposed to attend the services of the Church of England sufficient to form a large congregation, but without the accommodation of a place of worship, or the advantage of a clergyman.

"The colonists are well inclined to contribute to funds for the erection of Churches; but on such new ground their means are small, and the demands upon them for outlays of various kinds very great. I would therefore entreat your Committee to bear South Australia in their remembrance for any assistance that they may think it wise to afford.

"The population of Adelaide is estimated to be at this time between 4000 and 5000."

The following is a portion of the Rev. C. B. Howard's letter to the Governor:—

"Having been given to understand that a sum of money has been placed by the SOCIETY for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE at your Excellency's disposal, for the erection of Churches in this province, I take the liberty of laying before your Excellency a statement of what appears to me the most urgent case requiring aid from such a fund. That the present Church in Adelaide is totally inadequate to the wants of the population, although in the erection of it the trustees have incurred a debt of 550*l.* is evident. We have consequently taken measures for its enlargement, and the work is proceeding rapidly. The probable expense of this enlargement will be somewhere about 800*l.*, towards which upwards of 400*l.* have been raised by voluntary contributions.

"Your Excellency will perceive from the above statement, that upwards of 900*l.* are still required to accomplish the object we have in view, and pay off the debt we have already contracted; and you will, I trust, devote to the furtherance of that object, if not the whole, at all events, a considerable portion of the funds at your disposal."

Colonel Gawler mentions in another letter, that the Colony will probably contain 10,000 Europeans (British and German) before this year shall be concluded. It was therefore agreed that Colonel Gawler be thanked for his communication, and informed that, in the event of his succeeding in the erection of another Church, a grant will be made by the Board towards the cost.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Montreal, dated Boston, U. S., 25th May, 1839. The following are extracts:—

"I now inclose the Report of a Sub-Committee appointed at Quebec to devise the best practicable arrangement for settling the pecuniary affairs of the Diocesan Committee. This Report was approved by the Diocesan Committee, and will, I hope, receive the same approbation from the SOCIETY at home. It will be perceived that there remains a considerable demand against me, for which, and for further supplies, particularly of Bibles and Common Prayer-books, which are urgently needed in many destitute settlements, I earnestly hope that the SOCIETY will provide, by a renewed grant for Lower Canada. The Diocesan Committee gave a sort of pledge to the Bible Society at Montreal, that they would endeavour to supply the destitute Church of England population throughout the province; but this, or anything approaching to this, it will be impossible to effect without a liberal grant from the SOCIETY at home.

"The advantages are incalculable which, under the Divine blessing, might flow from an effectual and extensive distribution, in the Settlements, of the Word of God, under the auspices of the SOCIETY, accompanied by the Liturgy and many of the publications upon the SOCIETY's list. And if a grant could be made to Lower Canada for more general purposes, corresponding to that which was allotted to the Upper Province, the fruits which might be anticipated would leave no cause to the SOCIETY to repent of the liberality which they should have exercised."

It was agreed, that the sum of Five Hundred Pounds be placed at the disposal of the Bishop of Montreal towards promoting the SOCIETY's designs in Lower Canada.

The following letter was read from the Rev. Alex. Irwin, Secretary to the Irish Association for Discouraging Vice, and promoting the Knowledge and Practice of the Christian Religion:—

"Trusting that the SOCIETY for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE is not yet weary of extending aid to this country, the Association for Discouraging Vice has directed me again respectfully to apply for a grant of Prayer-books for gratuitous distribution and for sale at reduced prices. The books last granted were as follows:—Common Prayer-books, 2700; New Testaments, 100; Bibles, 225. Of these, there remain undistributed, Bibles, 36; New Testaments, 67.

"All the Prayer-books are gone; and applications are constantly made to the Association for grants, with which it is unable to comply. The sum of money received for the books which have been sold at very reduced prices, was appropriated to the purchase of premium books, which were distributed among the children who attend the Catechetical examinations held every year by the Association. The number of children examined by the Association, (in the year ending March 31, 1839,) in the Church Catechism and the Holy Scriptures, was 10,943: the number of premiums distributed was 2086. No one, without having been present at these examinations, can have an adequate conception of the impetus given thereby to religious instruction throughout the country. In Dublin, the Association has for many years adopted the plan of rewarding the master and mistress of the school which has sent in the greatest number of successful candidates to these annual examinations; this has proved a great stimulus to the teachers: the competition amongst them, as to which of them shall send in the greatest number of well-prepared children, has led them to take extraordinary pains in teaching their pupils, and the answering of some of them would do credit to a class of divinity students."

The Board agreed to grant Books to the amount of two hundred and fifty pounds for the purposes of the Association.

A letter was read from the F. Sandoz, Esq., requesting a grant of Bibles, New Testaments, Common Prayer-books, and Tracts, for the use of labourers in a district of eleven miles on the London and Brighton railway line; there being about 2000 men employed in that extent of the line.

The Board agreed to grant books amounting to twenty pounds.

A letter was read from the Rev. R. Kempthorne, of St. Helena, stating his wish to build another school in that island, should sufficient means be provided for that purpose. He says, that the lower orders are in a very demoralized state, and requiring more instruction than the funds for religious objects are enabled to supply.

Under these circumstances Mr. Kempthorne requested aid towards the erection of a school; books for the use of the school; and Bibles, and Common Prayer Books for the performance of divine service.

The Board agreed to grant a supply of books to the amount of ten pounds for the school; the sum of twenty-five pounds towards the erection of a school house, and two quarto Bibles and two quarto Common Prayer Books for the use of Churches on the island.

A letter was read from J. Cassels, Esq., Lisbon, requesting a grant of books for Church of England schools; and for a library in that city. The Board agreed to grant the books specified in this application.

A large Bible and Common Prayer Books for the desks, and Books for the Communion table, were granted for each of the following new Churches:—

New North Road, Hoxton; Bunhill Row, St. Luke's; Curtain Road, Shoreditch;—Metropolitan Churches. St. Michael, Blackburn; Rawmarsh, Yorkshire; Walsley, Bolton-le-moors; Wirksworth, Derbyshire; St. Mary, Leamington; St. Thomas, Preston; Emmanuel, Bolton; Charlton near Shaftesbury. A quarto Bible and two Common Prayer Books were granted for the use of a licensed School-room in Highbury Vale, Islington. A similar grant for a licensed School-room at Farnworth near Warrington. A quarto Bible and Common Prayer Book for the use of the Marine Society's ship. And several other grants of Books were made.

A letter was read from the Right Hon. Henry Goulburn, stating his readiness to present to the House of Commons the SOCIETY's petition in behalf of the Church in the Colonies, and expressing his regret that the rules of the house would prevent his enlarging on the important topics to which the petition refers.

The Secretaries took the opportunity of reporting that this petition had been very numerously signed by Members of the SOCIETY, and that the signatures of twenty Members of the Episcopal bench, including the Archbishops of Canterbury, York, and Armagh, were appended to it, besides the names of several lay noblemen.

Sixty-six new Members were admitted.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

HOME REPORT.

MEETINGS in various parts of England have been held during the past month in behalf of this ancient Church Society. We may specify Oxford, Northampton, Oakham, Walton, Swaffham, and Durham. From arrangements now making, we expect to report a much longer list in the next Gazette. Something, too, has been done in the neighbourhood of London. Hitherto, the populous places in the suburbs have been somewhat backward and scanty in their support of the Society; but we are happy to report that a very numerous and respectable meeting was held at Tottenham, on the 17th of June, at which the Rev. Thomas Newcome, the Vicar, presided, and the Bishop of Nova Scotia, Mr. Archdeacon Robinson, late of Madras, and Mr. Campbell, attended on the part of the Parent Society. At this meeting, a Parochial Association was formed; and in order to unite all classes in the great cause of propagating the Gospel, a resolution was passed, "that all persons subscribing one penny a month or one shilling a year be members of the Association."

After the business of the evening was over a great number of persons came forward to enrol their names as subscribers; and it was gratifying to see among them a large proportion of servants and others of the humbler classes offering their shillings and half-crowns. The result has been an addition of more than 100*l.* to the funds of the Society, of which about 70*l.* will be contributed annually. The secretary, in communicating the success of their exertions, says, "I sincerely hope other parishes may be stimulated to bestir themselves; we are now about to leave a short circular embodying our resolutions at every house, great and small, in the parish, and then our collector is to go round."

In London, the Association formed in the parish of St. Giles has been soon followed by another in that of St. Clement Danes'. On Thursday, July 4, some of the principal inhabitants assembled in the vestry-room, when resolutions constituting a Parochial Association in aid of the Society was formed. Annual Subscriptions to the amount of 25*l.* were announced by the Treasurer, R. Twining, Jun., Esq. The Bishop of London was requested to accept the office of patron; the Rector of the parish, that of president. Mr. Baron Gurney, Sir F. Ommanney, G. Twining, Esq., W. P. Scott, Esq., and other principal inhabitants, that of vice-presidents. The Rev. Mr. Chere, and several laymen, kindly offered to take districts, and solicit the attention and support of the parish to the claims of the Society.

SMALL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The secretary of the Association recently formed through his exertions at Saffron Walden has acted upon the plan recommended by the Society of enrolling as members subscribers of even the smallest amount; and he says, "in confirmation of the expediency of such a resolution, I am happy to call your attention to the annual sum of 2*l.* 5*s.* collected in a parish whose population is about 340, entirely agricultural, in subscriptions of one penny a month. On the third Tuesday in the month, I have a little meeting in the school-room, at which I inform the subscribers of what is going on, and afterwards collect their pence. They show considerable interest in the proceedings of the Society."

The Society has just issued a Quarterly Paper containing an interesting account of Bishop's College, Calcutta, with extracts from its correspondence, showing the present state of the Church in our North American provinces.

Of Bishop's College, the Report gives the following statement as to its results:—

"Under all the disadvantages which the frequent vacancies of the See have occasioned, and the weakening of its operations, at times, by the illness and consequent retirement of some of its Professors, the College has well answered hitherto, under the divine blessing, the purposes for which it was erected. Within five years (the shortest possible period) from its first opening, the College was able to furnish to missionary labourers in the North and South of India, that most desirable and otherwise unattainable assistance, the aid of well-instructed and able Catechists, born and bred in the country. Of these, after some years of probationary employment in that subordinate calling, the greater part became candidates for orders, since the arrival of Bishop Wilson in India, in 1832; and several, after due probation and ordination as deacons and priests, are now actively engaged as missionaries in the Society's and other stations, in various parts of India; having catechists from the College similarly placed under them. Some of these missionaries, who owe all to the instruction they received to the College, have under their care large and continually increasing congregations of Bengali converts, composed chiefly of agriculturists and fishermen, in tracts where but twelve years ago, no native Christian was to be found: in these tracts (which are in the near vicinity of the College, southward from Calcutta towards the sea) the catechists are, during the vacations, often visited by their late fellow-students, and both they and the missionaries are frequent visitors at the College, for counsel and aid in points of their missionary duty, as well as for the material assistance of revised translations. Of the importance of this system for keeping alive a missionary spirit, in conjunction with that respect for order and unity with which it should ever be accompanied, no friend of the catholic principles of our Church need be reminded; while the great advantages of this method of co-operation and perpetual supply, above the disjointed efforts, in which all depends on individual energy, and where the fruits of a laborious life are most frequently dispersed and lost, must be obvious to all. Nor is the difference unmarked by the intelligent heathen. Order and unity, as it has been remarked by Bishop Middleton, form the strength, the only strength, of false religions: the apparent want of them, in the eyes of the heathens, is the capital weakness of the true. But this great scandal of our present Christ-ianity is in a great measure removed, when they are able to contrast with the separated communions in which the convert, rejected by one, may be taken up by another, a widely-extended and compact system, in which every licensed act of one part is recognised of course in every other,—the common centre of all being the Bishop, without whose sanction no adult baptism can be performed, and who, either by personal or indirect inspection, superintends and directs all.

"Such is the apostolical method of diffusing Christianity in India, of which Bishop's College is the most important instrument. We need only remark, in addition, that though the class from which the first students were taken, and which still forms the majority of its members, was that of the fixed inhabitants of European, or of Anglo-Indian descent,—the progress has been steady towards the obtaining and securing aboriginal students. In its earlier years, it numbered among its members an able native youth from Ceylon, now among the Singalese chaplains of that island; and the very first of the educated Hindus of Calcutta who embraced Christianity, Mohesh Chunder Ghose, was in that same year (1832) admitted as a student. This excellent youth has been removed by the inscrutable providence of God, when his opening labours as a catechist among his countrymen gave the best promise of usefulness. But others remain (one of whom a converted Brahman, is now an ordained preacher of the Gospel), and are still pursuing their studies in the College, upon a fund which the present Bishop of Calcutta has expressly set apart for that purpose.

"An address to the late Principal, Dr. Mill, on his return to England, from those who had completed their course in College under his charge from 1824 to 1837, includes the names of six missionaries of the Bengal presidencies, four of that of Madras, two chaplains of Bengal and Ceylon respectively, together with seven catechists of both the northern and southern presidencies, and two school-masters. This is independent of the Brahman missionary before mentioned, whose name is at the head of a similar address from the native students."

Extract from a Letter of the Bishop of Calcutta, dated Nov. 30, 1838.

"The moment is now a critical one, I really think, for the full prosperity of the College. You have been most successful in your choice of Mr. Malan. He is a delightful person, more than answering our warmest expectations, so far as we can at present judge; quick, energetic, a genius for acquiring Oriental languages, sound minded, pious, of a sweet open temper, enthusiastic in love to India and the College. The applications from various parts of India concur with the reputation of Professor Malan, to render it probable that the College may now take a new spring, and rise to its proper influence and efficiency.

"The loss of Dr. Mill is, indeed, in many respects irreparable. But this was not unexpected, and we must endeavour to train up our new Professors to emulate his high attainments. Nothing shall be wanting on my part, as I need not assure the venerable Society my heart is in the College. With God is all ultimate success, but it never was in the way to so much permanent good (take the whole state of the College into consideration), as since the arrival of Professor Malan.

"Then the three Bishops are now, for the first time (November) in their dioceses.

"I am in great hopes that all the missions will begin to pour in their students into the College."

In a subsequent letter, dated January 4, 1839, the Bishop says,

"A new era commences from Dr. Mill's retirement, and Professor Malan's succession as Oriental Professor. India was never so likely to be prolific of students as now, when steam-boats are uniting it with the western world, and filling it with European colonists."

The Rev. Alfred Wallis Street, B.A., of Pembroke College, and Craven Scholar in the University of Oxford, has just been appointed a Professor at Bishop's College, and is now preparing for his voyage out.

STATE OF THE CHURCH IN CANADA.

Extracts of a Report from the Bishop of Montreal to Lord Durham.

"Marchmont, near Quebec, 20th Nov. 1838.

"The number of persons professing adherence to the Church of England in the province of Upper Canada is roughly stated at 150,000. I believe it is by no means accurately known, but measures are understood to be in contemplation for ascertaining it. The number of Clergy in the exercise of their ministry, including some whom I ordained during my visitation, is seventy-three. The number of churches built, or in progress towards their completion, is about ninety.

"These data, however, would give a very imperfect idea of the condition and the wants of the population, as it respects the means of spiritual instruction; or, to speak more properly, could furnish no ground whatever of forming a correct estimate upon the subject. The prodigious extent of country, the widely-scattered location of the inhabitants, and the state of the roads in the settlements of more recent formation, must, as will readily appear to the judgment of your Excellency, be all taken into the account; and it will be found, in point of fact, that a lamentable proportion of the Church of England population are destitute of any provision for their religious wants; another large proportion very insufficiently provided; and almost all the remainder served by a Clergy who can only meet the demands made upon them by strained efforts, which prejudice their usefulness in other points.

"In travelling from the town of London to Goderich, I passed through a tract of country sixty miles in length, in which there is not one Clergyman, or minister of any denomination. I believe I am safe in saying, that the great majority of inhabitants, among whom are comprehended the Land Company's settlers, are of the Church of England; and the services of some of our Missionaries, who have partially visited this tract of country, have been thankfully received by those who pass under other names. Between Wodehouse upon Lake Erie, and St. Thomas, a distance of upwards of fifty miles, which may be travelled by two different roads, there is not one Clergyman upon either. From the reports made to me by one of our travelling Missionaries, and by a solitary Catechist, stationed at Port Burwell, I know that there is a great body of Church people scattered through this part of the country. In the whole of the newly-erected district of Wellington, which is everywhere scattered over with a Church population, there is only one Clergyman of the Church. In the district of Newcastle there are six. I have good reason to know, that if ten more could be immediately added, there would be full employment for them, with regular congregations. In one or two of the districts there is a Missionary engaged in labours exclusively of an itinerant character; but how sparingly the word and ordinances of God are supplied, even to those among the unprovided settlements which are thus far favoured, your Excellency will have no difficulty in conceiving. The Clergy, however, except in a few comparatively large towns, are almost all more or less itinerants. I take one example, almost at hazard, from the returns officially made to me, to which I could produce many parallel instances; it is that of a Clergyman in the Bathurst district, a place noted at certain seasons for the excessive badness of the roads, who performs three full services every Sunday, distributing his labours in such a way in four different places, that once a fortnight he travels twenty-eight, and once a fortnight sixteen miles: besides which, he has in the winter months four week-day appointments for divine service. Most of the Clergy have what they call out-stations, which they serve in this manner on week-days, to supply settlements which would otherwise be wholly destitute; and many of them make occasional visits during the year to places still more remote. These objects they do not accomplish without many sacrifices, and much severe exertion; but the reward which they seek is not in the praise of men, and it is the value rather than the merit of their services to which I desire to solicit the attention of your Excellency.

I do not speak here of those higher effects which constitute the ground and ultimate object of their ministry; but in proportion as means are taken for the extension of their influence, in such proportion, my Lord, I have no hesitation in saying—for the effect is everywhere sufficiently marked—that the loyalty, the good order, the steady habits, the peaceable and industrious deportment of the population will be promoted, and the ties strengthened which bind the Colony to the Parent State. Apart, also, from any consideration of preserving the supremacy of Britain over the Canadas, there is a sacred duty to be performed in laying such a foundation for the moral and religious character of the inhabitants in time to come, as will best ensure their happiness and welfare; and it is not for me to point out to your Excellency that it is now that this foundation must be laid. In the young settlements now struggling into existence, or beginning to develop the signs of prosperous improvement, we see the germ of a great and important future, which must be vitally affected by the mould given to the population in this early stage of its formation. Millions who are yet unborn will have cause to bless or to reproach the present Government of Britain, for the measures taken to provide for them those advantages, and to transmit to them those habits, principles, and attachments, which form the only sure basis of national happiness.

“Up to this period, although not a few people have been lost to the Church from the want of her ministrations, and a far more extensive defection must inevitably follow, if things are left much longer upon their present footing; yet, very generally, the privations which have been experienced in this respect have served to teach our congregations the full value of those privileges which are enjoyed at home. The importunate solicitations which I constantly receive from different quarters of the province for the supply of clerical services; the overflowing warmth of feeling with which the Travelling Missionaries of the Church are greeted in their visits to the destitute settlements; the marks of affection and respect towards my own office which I experienced throughout the province; the exertions made by the people, in a great number of instances, to erect churches even without any definite prospect of a minister, and the examples in which this has been done by individuals at their own private expense; the rapidly increasing circulation of the religious newspaper, which is called ‘The Church;’ these are altogether unequivocal and striking evidences of the attachment to Church principles which pervades a great body of the population.

“I cannot forbear, my Lord, from introducing some mention in this report of the labours of our Clergy among the native Indians. There are two Clergymen stationed among the Six Nations on the Grand River; one at the Mohawk village, and the other at Tuscarora. A Missionary has been sent to the Manitoulin Islands, and another to the Sault St. Marie, at the upper extremity of Lake Huron. These four are engaged exclusively in the charge of Indians. There are two other Clergymen, who combine this charge with that of congregations of Whites; one in the Bay of Quinté, where a branch of the Mohawk tribe is established, and one who resides in Caradoc, and devotes part of his time to the Mounsees and Bear Creek Chippawas in his neighbourhood. I have never seen more orderly, and, to all appearance, devout worshippers than among some of these Indian congregations which I visited; and I have the fullest reason to believe that the ministry of the Clergy among them has been attended with very happy effects. His Excellency Sir George Arthur is much interested in their welfare; and whatever the Government can do for their religious improvement, their temporal comfort, or the education of their children, will, I am persuaded, be well and wisely expended. A great and promising field is here open to Christian philanthropy. A long debt is due to the Indians from the inhabitants of European descent; and it is by means such as those which I have just stated, that the reparation must be made. They have been uniformly loyal. The Mohawks preserve to this day, with much veneration, a set of communion plate and other appendages of divine worship, which were given them by Queen Anne, when they were seated in the colonies which now form part of the United States of America. I shall be happy to think that your Excellency will not forget the claims of these poor people, in what you are engaged in doing for Canada at home.”

“The commands laid upon me by your Excellency having immediately had reference to the visitation of Upper Canada, upon which I was setting out at the time, I have forbore from troubling you with any details respecting the Lower Province. The observations, however, which I have submitted are, in great part, of common application to both provinces; and although there is a far smaller number of Protestants in Lower Canada, the Protestant portion of the inhabitants is constantly gaining upon the older French population, and must be expected to receive progressively increasing accessions from the British Isles, chiefly of Protestants; while the original settlers of the colony experience no augmentation of their numbers from any extraneous source.

“There has been no census of the population of this province since the year 1831. At that time, the Church of England population was estimated at 34,620 souls; the Church of Scotland population at 15,069; and the aggregate of all the non-episcopal Protestant denominations, including the Church of Scotland, at 37,937. The Clergy of the Church of England are 44 in number, with 52 or 53 churches and chapels built or in progress. From 15 to 20 additional Clergymen would, I think, provide for the present wants of this portion of the diocese. In Upper Canada, I believe that employment would be found for 100 beyond the existing establishment.”

The following memorial (which is only one among many), addressed to the Bishop of Montreal, may serve to give some idea of the great spiritual destitution in Upper Canada:—

“May it please your Lordship,—We, the undersigned inhabitants of the townships of Murray and Sidney, and residing near Frankford, beg leave to inform your Lordship that the village of Frankford is situated on the river Trent, eight miles from its mouth, in the township of Sidney, Midland District;—that it is in the midst of a well-settled country, many of whose inhabitants, as well natives as emigrants from Great Britain, are members of the Church of England;—that there is no place of worship where the service of the Church of England is performed nearer to us than fourteen or sixteen miles; and we are therefore debarred from attending at public worship, to the form and spirit of which we are not only attached by duty, but by inclination and love. We regret the want of religious instruction and consolation, that the permanent residence of an authorized Clergyman among us would secure to us, on our own account, but more particularly on account of our children, who, not being trained in the paths of true religion by a spiritual guide, may, we fear, at some future time, be easily led into the ways of error and infidelity; a fate deeply to be deplored, and, if possible, averted, from any community calling itself Christian.

“We had hoped, from the liberal provision made by his late most Gracious Majesty, George the Third, for the diffusion of sound religion among us, that ample means for the erection of Churches, and the maintenance of a well-instructed and loyal Clergy, would have been supplied for the spiritual wants, as they were created, of this rapidly and thickly settled country; but we regret that such means are not afforded as those wants arise. The general inability of settlers in this from the old country, to erect and endow Churches, cannot be unknown to your Lordship; indeed, we had never thought to be called on for any such purposes, as the impression is generally gone abroad, that the Royal endowment above alluded to, not only exempts all land in this province from tithes, but by a liberal provision in it, means are provided for the erection of places of public worship, and an especial provision made for resident spiritual instructors. Your Memorialists, with others in their neighbourhood, regret their inability to erect a suitable place of public worship of their own means.

“We therefore humbly pray that your Lordship will, by a representation to the proper authorities, procure a sum of money, or that you will, of any funds at your disposal, grant a sum for the erection of a Church, and the appropriation of a burial-ground attached to it, at this village, for the purpose of Divine Service according to the Church of England,—and that your Lordship will be pleased to direct the appointment of a resident Clergyman, by whose assistance and guidance we may obtain that spiritual instruction and consolation which are to be prized above all earthly considerations.

“With the sincerest veneration for your Lordship’s public, and esteem for your private character, your Memorialists beg leave, with the greatest respect, to subscribe themselves as

“Your Lordship’s most obedient,

“Frankford, humble Servants.”

MISSIONARY SENT OUT.

The Rev. Robert Allwood, B.A., late Curate of Clifton, sailed on the 1st of July upon Plymouth, for Sydney, having been appointed, on the Society’s recommendation, to an Australian chaplaincy.

The Society sends regularly every month a copy of the Ecclesiastical Gazette to each of its missionaries.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

THE following important communication has been made to the SOCIETY by the Lord Bishop of Calcutta. It is dated Feb. 27, 1839, and addressed to the Earl of Chichester.

“I have this morning promised the gentlemen of the Church Missionary Calcutta Committee, that I would represent to your lordship the urgent need of additional European missionaries in the station of Kishnagur, which has been created by the extraordinary promises of success which the goodness and grace of God have been lately opening to the pious subscribers of the great SOCIETY over which your lordship presides, in that particular field of missionary exertion. I fulfil my promise at the instant; lest the pressure of incessant duties, which, wave after wave, roll over me, should defeat my purpose.

“It was just before Christmas last, that the Rev. W. J. Deerr, hearing that I had returned from the first division of my second visitation, sent down a catechist to entreat me to come up to Kishnagur, and advise him how he might best proceed with the large and increasing numbers of candidates for baptism who had applied to him from all the villages around. He described himself as quite overwhelmed. I wrote to him a few lines instantly, to ‘comfort him concerning his faith;’ and promised him to visit his station the moment I could get away from Calcutta. I begged him to answer me, in the mean time, eight or ten questions also, that I might judge the better of the blessed appearances which he spoke of. On the receipt of his reply I was struck with amazement and admiration of the grace of God; I could scarcely believe the accounts for joy. There seemed to be hundreds being 'born at once.' Finding that I was unable, however, to leave home from an unexpected crowd of duties, I begged of the archdeacon to go down without delay, and bring up a full statement of the position of things, that I might submit it to the Church Missionary Corresponding Committee, and advise with them how to meet the rising demand for help. The archdeacon is just returned; and the meeting of the Committee took place, as I have intimated, this morning; and I am now redeeming the pledge which I made of communicating with your SOCIETY, through its honoured president, without an instant's pause.

"It appears that between fifty-five and sixty villages are thirsting for the waters of life, in a greater or less degree; they stretch to the north and north-east of Kishnagpur on the Jellingha, to the distance of forty or fifty miles, and to the south-west fifteen or twenty. The numbers described as prepared for holy baptism—in various measures, of course—are between 3,000 and 3,500. The archdeacon assisted himself at the reception of about 600 souls, including women and children, into the Christian church; and there seems the fairest prospect, if we can but enter at the wide and effectual door in time, that not only these 3,000 or 4,000, but the whole population of the fifty or sixty villages may receive the Christian faith, and resemble our Christian villages in the times of our Anglo-Saxon forefathers in the 6th and 7th centuries. Such a glorious scene has never yet been presented to our longing eyes in Bengal. And, after making all deductions for over-statements, sanguine hopes, the existence of secular motives, and the instability of large numbers; nay, after allowing for the influence of the temporal relief which was exhibited to the sufferers, Christian and Heathen, by one of those inundations to which the sandy banks of the Jellingha are peculiarly liable, and which occurred during the progress of this religious awakening, and which excited a natural admiration, as it ought to do, in the neighbourhood, and contributed to augment the number of our inquirers; admitting all this, and as much more as the most timid observer can require, it still appears that a mighty work of divine grace is begun,—a work wide and permanent, as we trust,—a work marking the finger of God,—a work which will demand, and warrant, and repay, all our pastoral care, anxiety, and labour,—a work for which our fathers in India—Brown, Buchanan, Martyn, Thomason, and Bpa. Corrie, Middleton, and Heber—would have blessed and praised God in the loudest strains of gratitude and joy.

"I am the more struck with this great event, because somewhat similar ones, though on a far smaller scale, have been taking place in the missions of the Incorporated Society for Propagating the Gospel around Janjera and Barrypore. I suppose, like hopeful appearances more than once blessed the labours of Swartz. The early tidings from Tinnevely were not very different, also, as I imagine. We have reason, therefore, to be doubly grateful for every recurrence of these harbingers of the day; and, at the same time, to be doubly watchful in guarding and training these tender plants, lest they should be nipped by Satan's temptations, or pine away for want of moisture. The fearful relapses of native converts and whole flocks, when destitute of adequate instructors, in all parts of India, and after the lapse of a very few years, is a sufficient indication to us of that wonderful connexion in the system of means, which we all acknowledge in theory, but which is no where so prominent as in our labours in a heathen and Mahomedan land. Every thing depends, under God, upon incessant culture, and culture by European missionaries; at least in the actual state of things around us in this heathen and prostrate country.

"But this leads me to present to the SOCIETY a sketch of some of the facts which have occurred, and which will enable them to judge for themselves of the accuracy of my own impressions. Possibly I have felt and spoken too strongly.

"About four years since, the Rev. W. J. Deerr, missionary at Kishanagore or Kishnagpur ('the town of Krishna' no longer, I trust; but rather Anunda Bas, 'the village of joy,' according to the name of the first spot where the blessed baptisms took place), having heard that there was a body of persons, partly of Hindoo and partly of Mussulman origin, who professed to worship the one true God, and who were exposed to persecution on that account, went to their principal village and spoke to them of the Gospel, but apparently with little impression. He left copies, however, of the New Testament behind as silent missionaries, and promised to see them again.

"In 1836 he was more cordially listened to; he had repeated interviews; they consented to unite in prayer to Jesus Christ; they begged for Christian instructors.

"Five heads of families were baptized by Mr. Deerr at his visit the following winter, 1837. A fierce persecution had broken out: their wives and children were forcibly torn from them, and only restored by the interference of the magistrate. From this date, however, numbers began to flock around the new Christians; the tidings spread; the young converts became each of them missionaries; one told his brother, another his mother and sister, like the primitive disciples. 'We have found the Saviour.' Thus the information reached to the extremities of the connexion; for the whole body or sect are connected by intermarriages.

"In 1838, the leading men in ten villages, including with their families probably 400 or 500 souls, embraced openly the doctrine of Christ; and, after some months' further instruction, were baptized: these began from that time to celebrate Christian worship among themselves, and keep holy the Lord's day. A keener curiosity was thus excited among the connected family or tribe, and more rigid persecution followed. But the flame was so far from being extinguished, that it burned only the brighter, and spread with more rapidity: whole neighbourhoods came over to the Christian fold, and prayed for instruction in the new religion. Mr. Deerr did what he could, but said little to any one.

"In the present winter, 1839, a devastating inundation plunged the whole agricultural population in a moment into the most profound distress. Christianity, feeble as it was, produced its immediate fruit. Help was afforded. Mr. Deerr stripped himself even of the little fund indispensable for his own necessities and those of his own children, to administer to the sufferers. The Christian villagers went about in boats over the deluged fields to see how their brethren did. The neighbours said, 'There, see how these Christians love one another! For us, poor fellows, no one cares. Of a truth, there is the true religion among these people.' Your lordship will here again recognise the scenes of primitive Christianity.

"This was the occasion of Mr. Deerr sending down the catechist to me at Christmas. The distress was so great he was unable to relieve it; and the number of inquirers after Christianity, and of candidates for baptism, was still more overwhelming and exciting.

"The archdeacon Dealtry cheerfully went and supplied my lack of service. He took with him the Rev. Krishna Mohana Banerjee, whom I ordained in June, 1837; and he found there the Rev. J. J. Weitbrecht, and the Rev. T. Sandys, of Burdwan and Mirzapore, who had been attracted by the tidings, and came, without concert, to give what aid they could to such a work, at such a moment.

"The archdeacon informed himself, before he proceeded to the villages, of the origin and history of the sect from which the chief body of inquirers and Christians sprung. It appears that they have been about sixty years settled on the banks of the Jellingha. They called themselves 'Kurta Bhoja,' 'Worshippers of the Creator.' They had some connexion with the sect of the Durbeshas, or Dervishes, supposed to abound in Persia. They had a firm notion of one Supreme Being; they rejected, with abhorrence, all idolatry; they held very slightly, if at all, by caste; they considered the test of proselytism, not eating, but uniting in prayer to the one true God. They thought, also, that the Deity was to appear, or had appeared, in human form. The persecution which they endured seemed to argue the importance which they attached to their creed, and their sincerity in following it. Mr. Deerr thinks it will be found that some early Christian missionary had visited them, the tradition of whose instructions had come down to the present generation. More light will be cast on their history, doubtless, by further inquiry. To the grace of God only must we ascribe the faith which receives Christianity aright, as is evident from the bitterness of Islamism, with all its fine theory of the unity of the Divine Being.

"On reaching the first field of labour, the archdeacon, assisted by his brethren, proceeded to examine the candidates for baptism—about 160 were placed in rows—at the village of Anunda Bas. Their replies were most affecting. They evidently showed an acquaintance generally with the lost estate and sinful nature of man, with the incarnation and holy life of our Lord Jesus Christ, with His atonement, with the doctrine of justification and sanctification in their substantial import, and with the necessity and duty of following His example. Jesus Christ was the beginning and end of their religion. Prayer to Him was the test of discipleship. The moment any one fell down and called on the name of the Lord Jesus (the SOCIETY will recognise again the Apostolic faith) he was gathered into their number. They appeared, in short, so far as could be judged, under the influence of the grace of God. They had learned the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, and the Creed, together with Dr. Watts's first catechism. They knew that the Son of God appeared in human form, and died to save them; that there is salvation in Him, and in no other; that to believe in Him is the way to obtain this salvation; that nothing can be done without the Holy Spirit's influence; that there will be a resurrection of the dead, a final judgment day, a reward for the righteous, and punishments for the wicked. It appeared further, so far as could be ascertained, that they were willing to forsake all for Christ, and endure whatever persecutions might come upon them; nor could the archdeacon and our friends discover that they were influenced by temporal motives, except so far as godliness, having the promise of this life, inseparably brings them with it. The inundation may have given an impulse to some; and time will show further to what extent this has gone; but the greater part had professed to be inquirers after Christianity, and numbers of them had been baptized in 1837 and 1838, a year or two before the inundation occurred.

"The result was, that the archdeacon said to the rev. missionaries, Can any forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost, in His sanctifying influences, as well as we? And, upon their unanimous opinion, holy baptism was administered according to the forms of our Church; first to the 160 then assembled, and then, at three other villages, after like examinations, to about 380 or 400 more. These, together with the little companies which had been received into the Church in 1837 and 1838 may amount, including children, to nearly 1,000. About 1,500 or 2,000 more lay so far distant, that it was impossible to visit them at that time. Messrs. Sandys, Weitbrecht, and Mohana Banerjee, however, went to several villages, and found the same eagerness for instruction, but far less attainments in Christian knowledge: they were inquirers only. Those baptized were catechumens—most of them for more than a year—under the instructions of Mr. Deerr and his native catechists and assistants. The rest are in earlier stages.

"But enough, my Lord, of these details, into which many errors may have crept. You shall have more accurate particulars, as soon as we can ascertain them. I am sure, however, that you will partake of the joy and gratitude to Almighty God, which filled every heart at the Corresponding Committee Meeting at Calcutta, as the narrative was given, partly from Mr. Deerr's letter to myself, and partly from the notes made on the spot by the Venerable Archdeacon. Solemn acts of praise were devoutly offered up; and it was determined to strain every nerve to meet the Divine goodness, and to cultivate the opening fields of usefulness. Mr. Alexander, a catechist at Kishna, had already been removed to Kishnagpur. Mr. Weitbrecht had promised two catechists; Mr. Sandys two others. I proffered the first-fruits of my Begum Sumroo's Fund at Bishop's College—a very pious native, Brijnauth Ghose. There were already one schoolmaster, two catechists, and five incipient catechists, with Mr. Deerr. The whole instant body of teachers would thus be (1) one Missionary, Mr. Deerr; (2) one English catechist—whom the Committee solicited me to admit as a Candidate for Holy Orders—Mr. Alexander; (3) and eleven or twelve native catechists: but what are these among so many!—fifty-five or sixty villages—3,000 inquiring souls—a population all around pressing to hear the Word of God—flocks, upwards of 1,000 already baptized—distances of fifty or sixty miles on the East, thirty-six on the North, and eighteen on the West of Kishnaghur to be traversed! Such circumstances demand at least three European Missionary clergymen, three schoolmasters, and thirty catechists; and these are little enough for the effective work before them.

“But before I venture to suggest any particular measures with reference to these urgent demands, your Lordship will rejoice to hear a few particulars concerning the general state of your missions, and Corresponding Committee, in my division of your evangelical labours in India—the diocese of Calcutta.

“I have now been acquainted intimately with all your missions, and most of your Missionaries—I believe I may say nearly all—for between six and seven years; nor can I conceive of any clergy more admirably adapted, as a body, for their sacred work than they are. With a difference of talent and cast of mind, I know of no difference in point of simplicity, of piety, zeal, love for souls, disinterestedness, diligent labour, affection for each other, attachment to the natives, prudence, fortitude and resignation, under a thousand privations. They are, indeed, men of God.

“In addition to this substratum of good in your missionaries, the first rough preparation work is now, after twenty years, a good deal got through—the buildings, compounds, institutions, schools, chapels, are erected—the impression on the vast native population around, as at Burdwan and Benares, is beginning to be acknowledged—the European gentry’s ignorance or prejudices are subdued—the Magistrate’s friendly, but righteous aid, is experienced—the translation and circulation of the Scriptures, with the munificent aid of the British and Foreign Bible Society, is advanced—the communication of the Christian doctrine, by the means of their children at our schools, to their parents, and also by the conferences held in the bazaars, as well as by the direct preaching of the Gospel, is in full train—some, yea, many souls, I may say, have been added to the Lord, also, of such as shall be saved.

“Another important feature is, the Orphan Asylums, in which the most remarkable success of Mrs. Wilson has led the way, and which have been nourished by the necessities created in the famine-stricken provinces: these are preparing a body of intelligent native Christians for the next age; are furnishing a specimen of the native female, when trained and educated in the Christian faith; and are breaking down the barriers of caste, with a mighty but imperceptible inroad.

“Thus, all is waiting for similar visitations of mercy with that which has led me to the present letter. That very curiosity, that very spirit of inquiry, that very feeling of interest in the subject of Christianity, which is now awakened at Kishnaghur, is what our brethren are praying and longing for, with eager and unceasing anxiety; and this may serve to show us the immense importance of this spirit of inquiry, and also the humble thanksgivings we owe to God, for the distinguished mercy.

“Nor is there any thing to prevent similar outbursts, at any given moment, and at any place. Benares, with her 500,000 Brahminical devotees, may desert the point of the Trident of Shiva, for the Divine Redeemer and His Cross. The city of the Imperial Akhbar (Agra) may quit its gorgeous Tāj for the Christian Mission Chapel; and the commencement of grace, begun under the honoured and beloved Bishop Corrie, and apparent in Abdool Messeeh and his flocks for a season, may revive, after so long a decline, under your present Missionaries.

“The importance, therefore, of the events at Kishnaghur, vast as it is in itself—for the value of a single soul who can estimate!—is elevated much higher by the relative position of your other missions, and the hopes which they serve to enkindle of the further effusions of the Blessed Spirit.”

The Bishop, while remarking on the insufficiency of native help, when unsupported by European Missionaries, proceeds to observe:—

“But your Lordship will remind me, that I promised to offer such suggestions as occurred to me, for the supply of the immediate demand of help at Kishnaghur. Three European Missionaries, I apprehend, are indispensable. They would soon acquire enough of the language to be of essential benefit. And even their going round frequently to each village, and aiding the native catechists, and addressing the flocks for the first twelvemonth, through an interpreter, would be of incalculable moment. India hangs upon European intellect, firmness, and matured piety, under God, for every thing spiritual, abiding, holy, influential.

“From the number of your own noble youth in England, your Lordship and the Society must look to supply this mighty occasion, which the providence of God has vouchsafed to a thousand, yea, ten thousand prayers, poured out during the nearly forty years of your labours as a Missionary body.

“The thirty or forty catechists who will still be wanted, God will raise up by degrees. Extinguish all unbelieving fears. His arm is not shortened, that it cannot save, nor His ear heavy, that it cannot hear. The Apostle intimates, that Titus would find, in every one of the hundred cities of Crete, men fit to be ordained by him to the Priesthood, or body of Presbyters or elders. And if so, then we may hope that, now, initiatory teachers and catechists, to resound the name of Jesus in catechetical response, may gradually be found. Novices, ‘Neophytes,’ they must at first be; and therefore not to be thought of as candidates for Holy Orders, lest, being lifted up with pride, they fall into the condemnation of the devil. In the mean time, the three European schoolmasters to whom I adverted, if you can be happy enough to meet with suitable persons, will be precious as the gold of Ophir, and catechists and schoolmasters may hereafter purchase to themselves higher degrees in the Church.”

His Lordship then earnestly appeals to the Universities of our land, in the hope that “they will confer no longer with flesh and blood”—“and that England will not desert the conjuncture of grace, now that it seems to have arisen.” His Lordship proceeds:—

“Surely the love of Christ, the zeal of the Gospel, the glory of the Cross, the patience of the Kingdom of God, the self-denial of the Spirit, the right estimate of Eternity, the bright dawn of prophetic bliss, the full accomplishment of the purposes of Grace, are not all obscured in England, the glory of the Western world, and the brightest of our Protestant Churches! Surely the case only needs to be fairly stated, and our petty selfishnesses and excuses to be dismissed, to ensure the voluntary offer of an adequate array of Missionary—not martyrs, but—labourers!

“Your Lordship will forgive my warmth. I stand, as it were, the advocate of 3,000 inquirers before your table, who cannot plead for themselves. I represent before you the teeming population around these inquirers and catechumens, who are waiting, as it were, for the Kingdom of God. Opportunity is the golden spot of time. I may to-morrow be myself silent in the grave. The Society may wait in vain the recurrence of such a glorious opening as this, if the present moment be allowed to slip by.—Thirty years back, we had not Delhi: we have now the Indus, and the Punjab, stretching itself in our view. A century since we were unknown in Hindoostan: we are now its masters. To hope to occupy this vast territory is fruitless, unless as we enter vigorously, and joyfully, and with gratitude to God, the particular doors of entrance, as they unfold their golden hinges before us.”

His Lordship adds, in a postscript—

“Since writing the above, a letter is come in from Mr. Alexander, whom I mentioned as recommended to me by the Committee—and most joyfully shall I act on the recommendation—as a Candidate for Deacon’s Orders: it is dated Ranabauda, near Kishnaghur, Feb. 28th. He informs us, that a great change of character is perceptible in the converts, in their desire for instruction, their constant attendance on such means of grace as they possess, and in the love they bear to each other. Females, who a short time since would not have quitted their own private apartments, now bring out the rice and vegetables for the brethren passing by, and overtaken by the night. Travellers, fatigued with a day’s journey, will sit down and sing hymn after hymn, which they have committed to memory. ‘It is delightful,’ says Mr. Alexander, ‘to hear the whole company join in; and this in a place where ignorance, idolatry, darkness, selfishness, and the destructive precepts of the false prophet had reigned triumphant. I do trust,’ he continues, ‘that a glorious work of grace has been begun: but the almost entire want of teachers is most distressing. The people have no one to instruct them; and numbers of enemies are stalking about to and fro, accusing the Christians of having left light for darkness. The fields are white for the harvest, but labourers there are none scarcely.’

“It is my intention, if Providence should permit, to go up to Kishnaghur, and hold a confirmation for such of the newly baptized as may be of age, and prepared: this will be towards the end of October, on my way to Burdwan, Gorruckpore, Hazeerabagh, Allahabad, Meerut, the Hills of Mussourie and Simla, Leodrana, Kurnaul, Delhi, Agra, Bareilly, Cawnpore, Ghazepore, Dinapore, &c., a circuit of more than 3,000 miles, which will occupy me from October, 1839, to March, 1841; and which I visited four years since. I need not say, I entreat your prayers for me.”

To these deeply affecting communications we only add, that it is the earnest desire of the Committee to meet the wants of the Corresponding Committee in Calcutta to the utmost of their power. They are truly rejoiced to be able to state, that one Missionary, the Rev. C. H. Blumhardt, formerly of Abyssinia, is on his way to Calcutta; and that three others, destined for the North-India Mission—one of them being appointed to the head seminary in Calcutta—have sailed during this month. Thus there will be, in a short time, three Missionaries disposable for the station of Kishnaghur. Our readers will join in the prayer, that the Lord was graciously bless their labours, and enable them to collect, and to build up, a people to the glory of His great Name in the midst of the Heathen.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

THE tenth annual Meeting of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society, was held at the Queen Anne’s Bounty Office, on Tuesday, 25th June, when the Lord Bishop of London (in the absence of the Archbishop of Canterbury; who was prevented from attending in consequence of a domestic affliction) took the chair. The following report was read:—

The tenth year from the establishment of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society being now concluded, and the annual accounts made up to the 31st May, the Directors are gratified in being able to communicate to the early promoters of the Institution, and the Members of the Society, assembled at the General Annual Meeting, a satisfactory Report of their proceedings in every branch; and in doing this, the Directors consider it to be a point well worthy of observation, that from the first they have acted upon the principle of developing the designs of the Society unobtrusively, and leaving them to be adopted by the Clergy according to their deliberately formed opinion of their merits. Thus they have purposely abstained hitherto from using any means to press the Society prematurely into notice.

It is under these circumstances that the Directors can now state not only that the Society has met with success, but that such success is founded securely upon the approbation and full confidence of the Clergy.

The number of the members of the Society has largely increased since the last annual meeting, and the amount assured upon life during the last year exceeds the aggregate amount assured in the three preceding years. In every part of England and Wales, and amongst all orders of the Clergy, members of the Society are now to be found.

As a wide and free communication of matters interesting to the Clergy can now be carried on by the general circulation of the Ecclesiastical Gazette, and as the advantages of this Society are now practically felt by many of the earlier Assurers, there is every reason to expect an immediate and considerable extension of its business. Moreover, those who are members of the Society will, no doubt, through attachment to it as an instrument of much professional usefulness, as well as from a sense of their own individual interests, be found zealous in recommending their relations as well as their personal friends amongst the Clergy, to make Assurances in it.

The Bonus, amounting to a return of one-fourth part or thereabouts of the total amount paid up to the 31st May, 1836, as the Premiums upon Life Assurances, and which was assigned during the last year in a proportionate reduction of such premiums, has given great encouragement to the Directors, and satisfaction to the Members, and at present there is every reason to expect, as there has been only one claim made upon the Life Assurance Fund during the last two years, that an equal amount at least may be assigned to Assurers in the year 1841, and so on periodically at the end of every fifth year, when, according to the rules of the Society, the total amount of profits realized is to be divided amongst Assurers.

The greatest possible advantage has arisen from the full and faithful information which the Directors, in carrying on the affairs of the Society, have uniformly received from Clergymen upon reference being made to them.

The Sickness branch of Assurance attracted from the first peculiar attention. Many eminent personages amongst the Laity, as well as the Clergy, take a deep interest in the success of a measure, whereby a Clergyman is enabled, at a very small annual cost, to provide himself with a legal claim to an annuity, payable during the time of sickness, to replace the stipend which, when sick, he must otherwise lose if a Curate, or, if an Incumbent, pay to a Clergyman officiating in his stead.

The Directors are particularly happy in stating that the fund formed by the joint premiums annually paid by Assurers for an Annuity during sickness has been highly beneficial to several Assurers who have suffered under the visitation of long and severe sickness; and they may declare it to be their opinion, that in more than one case the Sickness Fund has been the means of enabling Clergymen to desist from the laborious duties of their profession in the early stage of illness, and thus tended, where delay might otherwise have aggravated the symptoms, to their speedy restoration to health.

Temporary Annuities, payable during the years of education, and for which annual premiums have been subscribed during the earliest infancy of children, are now becoming due, and a large sum has already been paid to parents who had the prudence to prepare, by an early sacrifice of a small portion of their incomes, for the outfit of their children upon their entering into the public business of life.

These are the leading points which the Directors are desirous of pressing upon the attention of the Meeting, and they feel a conviction that the facts thus communicated will afford to the Prelates, Clergy, and many distinguished friends of the Church amongst the Laity, a gratification, which will be received by them as the most satisfactory recompense for the services rendered to the Society in their valuable patronage and aid.

The following resolutions were then passed unanimously:—

1. It was moved by the Right Honourable GEORGE BYNO, M.P.—

"That this Meeting receive the Report now read to them with the greatest satisfaction, and view, in the gradual extension of the business and usefulness of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society, a happy realization of those expectations which were confidently entertained at its formation in the year 1829."

2. Moved by the Lord Bishop of BANGOR,—

"That the experience of the last ten years justifies this Meeting in declaring that the designs and objects of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society are admirably calculated for the promotion of the interests of the Clergy of all ranks, and that great advantages will not fail to accrue to those who make assurances in it."

3. Moved by the Rev. J. G. WARD,—

"That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the time is come when the utmost publicity should be given concerning the nature and character of the Society, and that Members should be requested to make known its beneficial objects and intents amongst Clergymen and relatives of Clergymen."

4. Moved by the Rev. JOHN LETTS,—

"That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Directors and other officers of the Society for the important services gratuitously rendered to it, and especially for their close attention to its interests during a year of unexampled increase of business."

5. Moved by C. F. J. LORD, Esq.—

"That the following be the officers of the Society for the year ensuing:—"

(Here follows a list of officers.)

6. Moved by the Archdeacon LYALL,—

"That this Meeting, impressed with a deep sense of the advantages which have accrued to the Society from the continued attention and devotion of the Rev. John Hodgson to its affairs, request him again to accept their best thanks, and also their congratulations on the present prosperous condition of the Society, in the establishment of which he took so prominent a part."

7. Moved by the Archdeacon HALE,—

"That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Lord Bishop of London for the encouragement and assistance which he afforded in the formation of the Society, for the personal interest which he has continued to manifest in its concerns, and for his kindness in taking the Chair upon the present occasion."

DOCUMENTS.—METROPOLIS CHURCHES FUND.

THIRD REPORT, 1839.

THREE years have now elapsed since the formation of this fund, during which the Committee entrusted with its management have been employed in appropriating its resources to the great object contemplated in its institution. They have now to report that the whole of the sum placed at their disposal, even after the instalments payable in the fourth year shall have been received, is either expended or pledged; and they feel convinced that when the friends and subscribers to the fund are acquainted with the method in which it has been applied, and the great good which, under God's blessing, it will assuredly effect, they will find both a cause of gratitude for the past, and a stimulus to increased exertion for the future.

When the Bishop of London put forth his proposals in April, 1836, he contemplated the erection of at least fifty new churches; and for the accomplishment of this purpose it was estimated, on the very lowest calculation, that a sum of not less than 300,000*l.* must have been raised. The Committee regret to observe, that the sum hitherto placed at their disposal falls considerably below one-half of this amount; and yet, by God's blessing on their efforts, they are enabled to hold out the prospect of forty-one new churches being built, either wholly or in part, from this fund. These facts may furnish matter both of regret and of hopefulness. When the magnitude of the object before us is considered, involving as it does the present and everlasting well-being of hundreds of thousands of our fellow-Christians; and when, in connexion with this, we think of the enormous wealth of the metropolis, its comforts, and its luxuries, it is a very humiliating result, that a subscription having for its end the accomplishment of so great a good, the remedying of such a palpable and acknowledged evil, should have not much exceeded 130,000*l.*; the payment of this sum, too, be it remembered, extending over four years. The Committee will not conceal that they regard this as a disappointing result; on the other hand, they cannot but hope that when it is seen how much has been accomplished, by what to so many must have been at so small a sacrifice, it will serve as an encouragement to those who possess the power to contribute liberally to this sacred cause. The principle of Christian charity would seem to demand that our exertions should be in proportion to the greatness of the evil which we attempt to remedy. But practically it is often found otherwise; and many, it is believed, are, however mistakenly, deterred from doing anything by the very hopelessness of doing all that is required. This feeling, the Committee have reason to think, operated on the minds of many when the fund was established. The undertaking seemed so vast, so impossible to be accomplished to its full extent, that some seemed to find a reason or an excuse for withholding their support on that account. Sufficient proof, however, has now been afforded, that, great as the undertaking confessedly is, of supplying the metropolis with an adequate number of churches, even this might be accomplished, if Christian charity were half as extensive as Christian profession. The Committee cannot depart from the opinion expressed in their first report, that "the house which is dedicated to the honour of God ought to excel all other buildings in the beauty of its architecture." Appreciating, however, the supreme importance of providing in the first place for the actual administration of the ordinances of religion, where the spiritual destitution is so great, they have rigidly abstained from any expenditure beyond what has been deemed essential to give the churches an ecclesiastical character. And it is only by having strictly adhered to this rule that they have been able to accomplish so much with the small means placed at their disposal.

In the above-mentioned number of forty-one churches are included ten which it is proposed to build in the parish of Bethnal Green. This undertaking was set on foot by a very active member of the committee, to whom it appeared that this most destitute parish offered a favourable opportunity of proving the good effect which may be produced by providing an adequate supply of churches, schools, and resident clergymen; and so thoroughly carrying out, in practicable districts, the system of the Church. As this plan contemplates the erection of schools, as well as of churches, it does not altogether fall within the objects for which the Metropolis Churches Fund was raised. Besides which, if out of a fund raised for the general benefit of the metropolis, so large a portion as the whole cost of ten churches had been appropriated to one parish, it might justly have subjected the proceedings of the Committee to the charge of partiality. For these and other obvious reasons, it has been thought advisable to raise a separate and special fund for Bethnal Green; and on the case being laid before the Committee, they did not hesitate at once to vote 1,000*l.* to each of the new churches to be built in that parish, 10,000*l.* in all; regretting that the exhausted state of their treasury did not allow them to offer more; the sum appropriated to each church being less, by one half, than has been awarded to churches in other parishes, where neither temporal poverty nor the spiritual destitution is so great. The sum already subscribed specially for the parish of Bethnal Green, including the grant from this fund, amounts to 22,991*l.* 1*s.*

During the past year the Committee have been compelled to direct their attention to the subject of endowment. One of the rules agreed to at the formation of the fund is, "that increased accommodation of the poorer classes be regarded as a primary object." Hence it was also necessary to include the endowment as well as the erection of churches in the main object of the fund. But while the rules by which the Committee were to be guided were drawn up with this in view, the hope was indulged, that when a church had been built in the poorer neighbourhoods, some endowment would be offered by parties locally or otherwise interested. This hope, with very small exceptions, has been disappointed, the whole sum towards endowments amounting to no more than 736*l.* Under these circumstances, the Committee were compelled to consider of the application of some part of the fund to this object, being assured that the subscribers in general will feel with them, that the benefit contemplated by this great charity will be very imperfectly attained, unless along with the erection of the new churches the residence of their several clergymen be also secured. After mature consideration, therefore, the Committee came to the following resolution:—

"That the building committee be empowered to endow, or to assist in endowing, churches in poor districts, to such an amount, not exceeding in any case 1,500*l.*, as may qualify them to receive augmentations from Queen Anne's bounty, subject to confirmation by the general Committee." It is intended in all cases to apply a part of this endowment in building or purchasing suitable parsonage houses, a measure which the situation of the churches in some instances renders absolutely necessary, and which, in all instances, will contribute to the comfort and respectability of the clergyman, as well as to the efficiency of his ministry.

In reference to the actual progress of the works under the direction of the Committee, they have to report that, of churches built exclusively from this fund, four have been completed and consecrated:—One in Globe-lane, one at Ratcliffe Cross, one in Arbour-square, Stepney; one in the Tenter Ground, Whitechapel.

Three are just completed, and ready for consecration:—One in Bunhill Row, St. Luke's; one in New North Road, Hoxton, one in Curtain Road, St. Leonard's, Shoreditch.

One more will be ready for consecration within this year:—One in Mile End New Town, Spital-fields. Total, eight built or in progress; the whole cost of which is defrayed from this fund.

Of churches aided by the fund, five have been completed and consecrated:—One in St. Pancras, three in Islington, one in St. Bride's, Fleet-street.

Two are nearly ready for consecration:—One in Lambeth, one in Tredegar-square, Stepney.

Five are now in progress:—One in Upper Chelsea, two in Rotherhithe, one in Peckham, one in Lambeth. Total, twelve; making twenty churches either completed, or in progress.

The following churches, which were mentioned in the Second Report, have not yet been commenced:—One in St. Margaret's, Westminster, one in Lambeth, one in Camberwell, one in Paddington, one in East Smithfield, one in Shepherd's Walk, St. Leonard's, Shoreditch.

The Committee have been compelled to abandon the hope of erecting a church in the South-western district of St. Pancras, no site having been procured by the parties who obtained the promise of aid from this fund, on that condition.

In addition to the above, the Committee have, during the last year, pledged the fund to the cost of building, wholly or in part, fifteen churches in the following parishes:—One on the site near the Charter House, one in St. Pancras (Lord Southampton's site), one in St. George's, Southwark, two in Hackney, ten in Bethnal Green.

The whole account of churches, therefore, will stand thus:—

Churches completed or in progress	20
Churches to which the fund was before pledged	6
Churches to which the fund has been pledged during the past year	15
Total	41

The amount of subscriptions up to the 1st June instant is, 132,728*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, showing an increase during the last year of 5,604*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.*

The Committee conclude their Report by again expressing their earnest hope that the friends of the Church will supply the means of carrying on this great work. The resources of the fund are now exhausted, the money is all spent or pledged, so that, until fresh supplies are furnished, the Committee cannot undertake to build a single additional church, nor will they be able even to occupy a site which is still at their disposal. These considerations, they trust, will amply justify their appeal to all whom God has blessed with temporal prosperity, to render back unto Him of that which is his own. In inviting their fellow Christians to aid in this work, they cannot appeal to any but the highest motives, convinced that this is pre-eminently the cause of Him whose mission emphatically was "to seek and to save that which was lost." It is scarcely needful to remind Christians at what sacrifice—"Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor; that ye through his poverty might be rich."

LONDON DIOCESAN BOARD OF EDUCATION.

A MEETING of the Clergy of the Diocese of London, was held on Thursday, June 27th, at the house of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge.

The large room belonging to the Society was very much crowded. Among those present were the Bishop of London, Earl of Cadogan, Lord Radstock, the Rev. Lord J. Thynne, Major Wood, M.P., Mr. Byng, M.P., Mr. Gladstone, M.P., Mr. Acland, M.P., Mr. Pownall, the Dean of Carlisle, the Dean of Chichester, Archdeacon Lyall, the Rev. Sir H. Dukenfield, Rev. Dr. Short, Rev. Dr. Williamson, Head Master of Westminster School; Rev. H. Kynaston, Head Master of St. Paul's School; Rev. — Repton, Prebendary of Westminster; Rev. — Taylor, Rev. W. Wood, Rev. R. Burgess, Rev. R. Barker, Rev. W. Parker, Rev. G. Tomlinson, Rev. T. Dale, Rev. J. Bean, Rev. J. S. Boone, &c.

The Bishop of LONDON having opened the business of the day with a prayer, said he did not intend, at that moment, to enter at large into the subject of education in general, inasmuch as he had lately had occasion to do so, and to express, both to the clergy and to the public, his opinions of, as well as the principles on which a national system of education ought to be based. He should therefore merely confine himself to a statement of the reasons which had induced him after much deliberation and consideration, and after, too, much consultation with other members of the Church, to take upon himself the task of making the experiment of forming a Board of Education for the diocese of London. The object he had in view by the formation of this Board was, to constitute a Board which should embrace the whole question and form of education, as affecting all classes of the people, from the highest to the lowest—(hear, hear)—as far as they might be able to accomplish such an object; to be in communication and be made conversant with all systems of education, as applicable and as applied to instruction in the various schools within the metropolis, as far as the several promoters of such systems would permit: at the same time not with the view of interfering with those systems, but with the ultimate view of promoting a principle, and a system of unity and uniformity of instruction and operation among all those who were friendly to the principle of education in the metropolis, and to open a constant and a regular course of communication between every member of the clergy of the diocese of London. —(Hear, hear.)—It could not have escaped the notice of the clergy of that diocese, that at present there was in London very little of uniformity, or of unity in respect to the course of action and system of education; and he was not as yet prepared to say how far such a Board or Society as that which he proposed to form might have the effect of reducing the various practices at present in existence into that condition of unity and uniformity. But all he could advance on that particular point was, that that was the end he hoped to effect.—(Hear, hear.)—At present each clergyman performed his duty in his own parish or district in the way he considered best, and in the principles of the Established Church; but, although the intention and ultimate end and object of each had been the same, still they adopted a variety of modes of carrying them into effect.—(Hear, hear.)—Now if, instead of this system, the whole body of clergy within the diocese under the superintendence of the Bishop, assisted by the laity, were to act on one and precisely the same general method—modified in a degree, of course, where it was necessary, to suit the peculiarity of a particular locality, and to give it effect in certain local situations—it could not but be productive of the most beneficial results. (Hear, hear.) The people would derive the advantage, and the Church would receive additional support. (Hear.) It was in consequence of the conviction that so desirable an end might be attained, that he had ventured to propose the plan of the formation of a General Board of Education for the diocese of London. (Hear.) The subject of education was at all times of the highest importance, but at the present moment, from peculiar circumstances, it had become more than ever important. (Hear, hear.) Indeed, it might fairly be called all-important (hear, hear); because there was, no doubt, involved in that question, at that particular moment, the interests and safety of the holy religion of the country. There could be no doubt that the interests of the Established Church were deeply concerned therein. (Loud cries of Hear, hear.) There was, in fact, no doubt but it was a question in which it depended on the friends of the established religion and of the Church, as to whether education should, for the time to come, be a blessing or a curse to the country in which they lived. (Hear.) He was not in the habit of making use of strong expressions, or of strong words, but the circumstances of the case, the peculiar position in which the Church was at that moment placed as connected with religious education, might, he hoped, plead as his excuse; and, therefore, he again said—indeed, he could not help saying—that the system of education as had been proposed by some parties on a recent occasion, if carried out to the extent which they had contemplated, must and would be a curse to man. To sharpen the wit of man, to strengthen his reasoning powers, to instil into him habits of investigation, so as to lead him to a right and beneficial application of those powers, to teach him to subdue and overcome his passions, to teach him the success with which an investigation of the truths of religion might be attended,—such a training as this it was, that he submitted was eminently calculated to determine and rightly direct the conduct of a man as a moral agent. (Hear.) It was important, not only that education should be afforded to all, but that that education should be a religious education; and it was not necessary for him to tell those who were present, that when he spoke of education, of religious education, he meant a religious education in the principles of the Established Church. (Hear, hear.) But what he wished to impress on those whom he was addressing was, that it was the duty of the Established Church to take care that the education which they afforded was in strict and close conformity with the rules and the principles of that Church. (Hear.) If it was not an education founded on those principles which they believed to be the truth, they were devoid as much of candour and sincerity as they were of truth itself. (Hear.) A religious instruction which was not a special religious instruction did not deserve the name of a religious instruction, inasmuch as it was not in any way calculated to command that effect which it was the object of a religious education to bring forth. (Hear.) He could not but feel that some apology was due from him for the leading part he had taken in the matter, but in carrying out his ideas he had consulted many friends and many high individuals in his diocese, all of whom had been of opinion that it was better, looking at the vital importance of the subject, and more satisfactory, that the Bishop of the diocese should be instrumental in laying the foundation of the proposed Board. (Hear, hear.) Under such circumstances it was, that he had come forward for the purpose of submitting a plan for the general acceptance of his brethren. He sincerely trusted that when his brethren heard what the nature of the propositions was, as drawn up by the provisional Committee, they would be inclined to adopt those propositions as the foundation of the regulations for the New Board of Education. (Hear, hear.) He confidently anticipated that in due time the object they had in view would be fairly and properly appreciated. If that were the case, and they were supported in their exertions, they might defy the open assaults and the secret stratagems of their enemies, who were seeking to undermine the Established Church through the medium of their schools. (Hear, hear.) He had to offer his thanks for the numerous attendance of the clergy of his diocese, and at the same time to intimate how great was the gratification he had derived from that manifestation of their inclination to assist him in the great work in contemplation. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion he would call upon the Rev. J. S. Boone to read the proceedings of a provisional Meeting, through which those present would be enabled to gather the outline of the proposed plan of action.

The Rev. J. S. Boone then read the following paper:—

"LONDON DIOCESAN BOARD OF EDUCATION."

"At a Provisional Meeting, convened by the Bishop of London, his Lordship being in the chair, the following Resolutions were proposed and carried:—

"I. That it is expedient to form a Board of Education for the diocese of London, under the presidency of the Bishop.

"II. That the Board consist of the President, and a certain number of Vice-presidents, and other members, to be named by the President.

"III. That the following clergymen and laymen, having signified their consent to the President, be members of the Board. (Here follow a long list of names of persons of much influence and standing in the country.)

"IV. That the Board direct its attention to the following objects:—

"1. To form a medium of communication and mutual suggestions between the clergy and other persons of the diocese interested in the cause of religious and general education, in accordance with the doctrines and discipline of the Church of England.

"2. To collect and circulate information as to the state of education in the diocese, and the obstacles which impede its progress or efficiency.

"3. To take measures for the extension and improvement of education in connection with the Church of England throughout the diocese.

"4. To bring into union with itself as many as possible of the schools existing in the diocese, on the terms adopted by the National Society.

"5. To establish an effectual system of inspection and periodical examination of the schools in union with the Board, with the concurrence of the managers of such schools, and under the sanction of the Bishop.

"N. B. With regard to the objects of the Board, a peculiarity is to be observed, which distinguishes the diocese of London from the other dioceses of the kingdom. Two among the principal objects of the other diocesan Boards, are:—1st. To institute schools for the training of masters; 2d. To establish, or take into union, middle or commercial schools. But, in London, the former of these objects is about to be accomplished by the immediate establishment of a training Institution under the superintendence of the National Society; and the latter has been already in some measure accomplished by the Metropolitan Commercial Institution, which has a central school in Rose-street, Soho, and local schools in union. It is probable, however, that one or both of these objects will hereafter be brought under the attention of the Diocesan Board, which will put itself in immediate communication with the Committee of the Metropolitan Commercial Institution.

"V. That, in furtherance of its designs, it is desirable for the Board—1. To promote the formation of local or district Boards in different parts of the diocese, which shall be in connexion and communication with the General Diocesan Board. 2. To enter into union with the National Society, and transmit a periodical Report of the inquiries and transactions of the Board so far as relates to the education of the poor; as also to invite the co-operation of other Societies or Institutions for education, established in the diocese on the principles of the Church of England."

The Rev. Dr. SHORT rose to move the first Resolution, which was to the effect, "That this Report be adopted, and that a Board of Education for the Diocese of London be now formed in accordance with its recommendations." He considered that the establishment of the proposed Board would tend to the diffusion of a universal benefit.

Lord RADSTOCK seconded the Resolution, which, having been put from the Chair, was unanimously carried.

Mr. POWNALL then came forward to move a Resolution to the effect, "That subscriptions be entered into to meet the expenses necessary to the carrying out the several propositions set forth in the Report." On the part of the laymen, he was prepared to say, that that body would be ready to respond to the call of the clergy for support. (Hear, hear.)

The Resolution having been briefly seconded, was agreed to.

The Rev. J. LONSDALE moved, "That Sir W. Farquhar be appointed Treasurer, and that the Rev. J. S. Boone be appointed Secretary to the Board."

Mr. J. H. MARKLAND seconded the Resolution, which was carried.

Major WOOD then, in an eulogistic speech, moved, "That the cordial thanks of the Meeting be given to the Right Rev. Prelate in the Chair, for this fresh instance of the unwearied interest he entertained, and the exertions he had made for the welfare of his diocese, and the cause of religious education." (Hear.)

Mr. ACKLAND seconded the proposition.

The Resolution was carried amid loud cries of "Hear, hear."

The CHAIRMAN returned thanks.

A subscription was then commenced, and the Meeting separated.

THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE, OR SEMINARY, AT CHICHESTER.

AN important step has lately been taken to provide a course of Theological instruction for candidates for holy orders, in the diocese of Chichester, which is not yet sufficiently known. It has been established under the direction of the Bishop, but is generally understood to owe its existence principally to the suggestions and exertions of the Dean of Chichester. It is attached to the Cathedral, and is established in one of the Residential Houses. It is intended chiefly for candidates belonging to that diocese, but others will also be received. The expenses will be very moderate. It is placed under the superintendence of the Rev. Charles Marriott, M.A., of Oriel College, Oxford.

The following account of this institution is extracted from a charge lately delivered to the clergy of his peculiar jurisdiction, by the Dean of Chichester:—

"Neither, perhaps, shall I find a more convenient opportunity than the present for adverting to a point which it would be unpardonable to pass by in silence on the present occasion, as being one in which this diocese as yet stands single. In the course of education for one, and that the most important of all professions, the sacred ministry, it has long been a matter of observation and regret that, when our universities have done all that they profess, or, indeed, are able to do, by laying deep and strong the foundations of general instruction, and by imparting a certain amount of knowledge in theology, there still was wanting a course of more directly professional instruction for the future ministers of the Church, and that the interval of time between their taking their degree and receiving holy orders, while it afforded a season peculiarly fitted for studies, and for exercises exclusively theological, was seldom spent in a manner the most advantageous or the most appropriate. It is to supply some remedy for this deficiency that we have recently opened an institution, where young men, under these circumstances, may find, at an easy rate of expense, a quiet asylum and an able instructor, for the prosecution of their theological studies, with the advantage of episcopal superintendence, and further aided by such means and appliances as a cathedral, with its library, with its daily services, and, more than all, with its elevating and sanctifying associations, can hardly fail to afford to the student in divinity. The present attempt can be considered only as an experiment made in a small way, and in a temper of modesty and diffidence. I trust, however, that, with God's blessing, it will continue and flourish, and, by its valuable effects, prove an incentive to other dioceses to pursue a like course, but on an ampler scale, and by more effective processes.

"I trust, too, that I may be allowed here to remind you of another of our recent arrangements, not merely connected with the last-mentioned institution, but also calculated, I trust, to prove beneficial, especially to the clergy resident in this immediate neighbourhood. I allude to the greater facility now given for the use of the cathedral library. The difficulty of access to volumes rich in the learning and piety of former times has often been felt to be an obstacle to the improvement of clergymen, whose local residence has placed them at a distance from the great national or academic libraries, and whose pecuniary means forbid them to purchase such works for themselves. With a view to this inconvenience, I hope that the arrangement now made by the dean and chapter will prove generally acceptable and useful, especially at a time like the present, when the reviving taste for the study of our elder and more solid theologians is deserving of all praise and all encouragement."

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14.

BIBLE PRINTING IN SCOTLAND.

THE Duke of MONTROSE presented a petition from the senate of the University of Glasgow, praying that due care might be taken in regard to publishing an authorized version of the Bible in Scotland.

The Earl of HADDINGTON said, it would be satisfactory to know what arrangement her Majesty's Government intended to make on this subject, which was one of the deepest importance.

Viscount MELBOURNE admitted the great importance of the subject. The plan which the Government intended to propose was as follows:—"To incorporate by charter, a body composed of the Lord-Advocate and Solicitor-General for Scotland, for the time being, together with the Moderator of the General Assembly, and two divines and two laymen, members of the Scotch Church." To this body was to be committed the duty of inspecting, from time to time, the publication of Bibles in the different towns of Scotland, in order to insure their correctness. The free importation of the Bible from England was also to be permitted, provided that the copies so imported had the sanction of the Board to which he had alluded. This Board was also to have the power of licensing readers and collators of the press, to correct the printing of Bibles, provided the Board were satisfied of their qualifications. No fee was to be charged for affixing their imprimatur to any Bibles, or licensing any correctors of the press. And the Lord-Advocate might apply for injunctions against parties who printed Bibles without the sanction of the Board.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

Lord WYNFORD presented a petition against the Church Discipline Bill, from the clergy in the diocese of Canterbury, fifty-seven in number.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY, after presenting a petition in favour of the bill, reverted to a speech made in the House of Commons by a right hon. member, in which the sentiments of his grace, on the getting up of certain petitions on the part of the clergy, on the subject of the general plan of education, had been, he said, totally misapprehended. He denied having ever used such words as those imputed to him, and he was inclined to believe that the words "bad clergy of Oxford," in the hon. member's speech, must be a misprint. The most rev. prelate then presented a petition from the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, against the Government plan of education.

FRIDAY, JULY 5.

GOVERNMENT EDUCATION.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY rose to move the resolutions of which he had given notice respecting the Government plan of education.

His Grace entered at great length into the history of the education of the poor, and examined the bearings of the Government plan. He then concluded by moving the resolutions. The most important of these was the last, which was for an address to her Majesty, "humbly praying that her Majesty will be graciously pleased to give directions that no steps shall be taken with respect to the establishment or foundation of any plan for the general education of the people of this country, without giving to this House, as one branch of the legislature, an opportunity of fully considering a measure of such deep importance to the highest interests of the community."

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE defended the Government plan, at great length, and concluded by moving the previous question.

The Bishop of EXETER supported the motion of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and answered the observations of Lord Lansdowne.

The Bishop of DURHAM, Earl FITZWILLIAM, and the Bishop of NORWICH supported Lord Lansdowne.

The Bishop of LONDON supported the Resolutions of the Archbishop in a speech of great weight and power.

Lord BROUGHAM followed on the other side.

The Duke of WELLINGTON replied concisely to some things which were said by Lord Lansdowne and Lord Brougham, and concluded by supporting the Resolutions.

Lord MELBOURNE shortly defended the Government.

At the conclusion of the debate, their lordships then divided, when the numbers appeared:—Content, 229; Non-content, 118. Majority in favour of the Resolutions, 111.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13.

ROMAN CATHOLIC ARCHBISHOP.

MR. D. BROWNE rose to present a petition from Dr. M'Hale, the Roman Catholic Archbishop, and priesthood of the diocese of Tuam, against the national system of education in Ireland. The petitioners stated that they considered the education of the Roman Catholic people of that diocese was exclusively vested in the Roman Catholic clergy, and that such being the case, they could not give up what they conscientiously believed to be their rights.

MR. LAW moved that the petition be rejected on the ground stated by the hon. member, that the petition was signed by a person calling himself the Archbishop of Tuam, and thereby incurring penalties under the statute.

The House, after a long discussion, divided: against receiving the petition, 165; for receiving it, 82; majority against receiving the petition, 83.

TITHE COMMUTATION.

MR. HODGES asked whether it was the intention of Government to introduce, in either House of Parliament, any bill to amend and explain the Tithe Commutation Act.

Lord J. RUSSELL replied that it was the intention of Government so to do.

CHURCH LEASES.

MR. LAMBERT observed that Church lessees were suffering serious injury from the present unsettled state of their property, they could not borrow money on their property, or sell their property. He wished to ask whether it was intended this session to propose any measure.

Lord J. RUSSELL said that it was not his intention to propose any bill in the course of the present session, but it was his intention early next session to introduce a bill.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL having moved the order of the day for the House resolving itself into a committee of supply,

Lord STANLEY rose for the purpose of objecting to any scheme which gave the direct controul, and all but the legislative controul, of the education of the people of this country to any board or any body of men, who were exclusively political in their character—who were necessarily and of course a fluctuating body of men, who possessed not in their constitution any one fixed or definite principle, or any enduring character, and when by no possibility or chance could it ever happen that there could be admitted into this board, which was to preside over the moral and the religious education of the people of this country, any single person of that body who were by law bound to attend to, and who were entrusted with, the spiritual education and religious instruction of the people. He objected on principle to the constitution of the board, and to the unrestricted and irresponsible power proposed to be given to them, of making, at their sole will and pleasure, most important changes (as might be) in the whole system of moral and religious education under which the youth of this country were to be trained; and he protested, as he always would do, against giving to any Government or Administration powers so extensive and arbitrary as those claimed by her Majesty's advisers. After having spoken at great length, the noble Lord concluded by moving an address, praying that her Majesty will be graciously pleased to revoke the order in council of the 10th April, 1839, appointing a committee of council to superintend the application of any sums voted by Parliament for the purpose of promoting public education.

The Government plan was supported by Lord Morpeth, Mr. Hawes, and Mr. Slaney, and opposed by Lord Ashley, Lord F. Egerton, and Sir W. James: after which the debate was adjourned.

The debate was resumed on Wednesday, June 19th, and on Thursday, June 20th. The speakers on the Government side were Mr. Wyse, Mr. Buller, Dr. Lushington, Mr. Ewart, Mr. M. Gibson, Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Spring Rice, and Lord John Russell.

Against the plan, the speakers were, Mr. Colquhoun, Mr. Acland, Mr. Plumptre, Mr. G. Knight, Sir R. Inglis, Sir J. Graham, and Sir Robert Peel, who concluded the debate in a speech of great power. He warned the Ministers that their scheme, if carried into effect, would give rise to endless discord, instead of universal peace and charity; and, therefore, he would advise the House to adopt the amendment. He advised them to recommend the withdrawal of the scheme, and he gave that advice on these distinct grounds—first, because from the present state of public feeling relative to a board of education it was not wise to consent to the establishment of such a body; in the next place, because if such a board could be constituted, and in its constitution there would be the greatest difficulty, it ought not to consist exclusively of members of the government. In the third place, he would ask them to advise her Majesty to rescind the order in council, because in the education of the children of members of the Established Church it was highly improper to exclude the ecclesiastical authority of those who were the legitimate teachers of the people; and lastly, because there had been presented petitions, in number unequalled, and coming from those actuated by the purest motives, in opposition to this scheme; and because their temporary success, if they should succeed, so far from advancing the cause of sound religion, would only be the ground of a new religious struggle, on the worst grounds, and in the worst possible arena.

The House divided—For the motion, 280; for the amendment, 275; majority for Ministers, 5.

MONDAY, JUNE 24.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

The House having resolved itself into a committee of supply,

Lord J. RUSSELL said, that in explaining his views with respect to the grant which he proposed to move for, and which was to be applied to the purposes of education, he did not think it necessary to enter upon the general question which the subject suggested. The objections which had been taken, or which might be taken, to the proposition of the Government relative to education, rested on a great principle, which had already been fully discussed before the Speaker had left the chair. The noble Lord concluded by moving that a sum not exceeding 30,000*l.* be granted for the purposes of National Education.

The speakers on the side of the Government were, Lord J. Russell, Messrs. Baines, Langdale, M. J. O'Connell, V. Smith, and Shiel. They were replied to by Lord Mahon, Lord Teignmouth, Messrs. Litton, Creswell, Sir G. Clerk, and Goulburn. Lord J. Russell concluded the discussion. The committee divided; for the motion, 275; against it, 273; majority, 2.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON CHURCH LEASES.

The report of this committee has been presented to the House of Commons. The concluding part is important to the interests of the Church. It states that

"Although fully sensible of the vast importance of this subject, which affects so much of the property of the country, and involves so many interests and considerations, even beyond those with which your committee have thought themselves competent to deal, they cannot close their report without recommending that the Legislature will direct its attention, as soon as possible, to the settlement of this important question, as at present, since the publication of the first report of the Church Commissioners, and the discussion of the subject in Parliament, such is the state of uncertainty among the Church lessees, that they find considerable difficulty in selling or borrowing money upon their property, and all improvement is suspended, to the injury of both lessors and lessees.

"Your committee thought it due to the importance, rather than the number, of their recommendations to state, at some length, the nature of the evidence and arguments upon which they are founded. It may be convenient to conclude with the briefest possible recapitulation of them. They recommend,—

"1. The abolition of the injurious system of fines upon leases for lives, and also upon leases for terms.

"2. The substitution of a fee-simple, for a leasehold, tenure, throughout the property of the Church.

"3. An Act to provide for the conversion of Church leasehold into fee-simple, commonly called enfranchisement.

"4. The customary confidence of renewal by the lessee to be considered according to local circumstances, by the authorities established under this Act, in the principles of enfranchisement laid down by them.

"5. The interests of the Church, present as well as future, to be provided for by a combined system of money payments and corn rent-charges."

A Bill entitled, An Act for Removing Doubts as to the Appointment of a Dean of Exeter, or of any other Cathedral Church.

WHEREAS by the statutes and customs of the cathedral church of Exeter, and of certain other cathedral churches, it is required that the deans of such churches respectively shall be appointed or elected out of the number of the prebendaries or canons residentiary thereof;

And whereas the deanery of the said cathedral church of Exeter is now vacant; but by reason of the provisions of an Act passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late majesty, entitled, "An Act for Suspending for one year appointments to certain Dignities and Offices in Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, and to Sinecure Rectories," which act was and is continued by an Act passed in the last session of Parliament, entitled, "An Act for Suspending until the 1st day of August, 1839, and to the end of the then Session of Parliament, the appointment to certain Dignities and Offices in Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, and to Sinecure Rectories," doubts are entertained whether any collation to a prebend or any election to a canonry can be made in the present circumstances of the chapter of the said church; and whereas similar doubts may arise upon the vacancy of the deanery of any of such other churches as aforesaid;

Be it enacted, by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that nothing in either of the said acts contained shall, during the vacancy of the deanery of any cathedral church, prevent any spiritual person from being collated or elected to the prebend or appointed to the canonry in such church held by the last dean thereof, for the purpose of qualifying such person to be appointed or elected dean thereof, but that such person shall, upon such collation, election, or appointment, be a prebendary or canon residentiary of such church to all intents and purposes, and entitled to all rights, privileges, and omoluments to such prebend or canonry belonging or appertaining, subject nevertheless to such measures and regulations as may hereafter be enacted respecting the same.

A Bill entitled An Act for apportioning the Spiritual Services of Parishes in which Two or more Spiritual Persons have Cure of Souls generally throughout the Parish. By the Lord Bishop of Exeter.

WHEREAS there are several benefices, in every of which more than one spiritual person is instituted to the cure of souls generally within the same: and whereas it would conduce to the spiritual good of the inhabitants if the cure of souls were apportioned between or among the said spiritual persons; be it therefore enacted, by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act it shall be lawful for the Bishop of the Diocese in which any such benefice having more than one spiritual person instituted or licensed to the cure of souls generally within the same is locally situated, from time to time to direct a decree, with intimation, to issue from the registry of the diocese, calling upon the spiritual persons instituted to the cure of souls, and upon the churchwardens or chapelwardens and other inhabitants of any such benefices, or any of them, to show cause before the bishop in person, at a time and place specified in such decree, such time not being within one month from the service of such decree, and such place being within the diocese, why the spiritual duties of such benefice should not be apportioned between or among such spiritual persons in the manner and in the proportions specified in such decree; and if at the time and place appointed cause to the contrary be not shown to the satisfaction of the said bishop, it shall be lawful for him to issue an order in pursuance of and in conformity with such decree, or, if cause be shown, to withhold, amend, or vary such order, as to him may seem just and proper; and every such order shall issue under the hand and episcopal seal of the bishop, and shall, on its being issued, be registered in the registry of the diocese; and every such decree and order shall be served on every such spiritual person thereby affected, and on one of the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the benefice, by delivering to them a copy thereof, or leaving a copy at the house or legal residence of such spiritual person, churchwardens or chapelwardens, and on the inhabitants of the benefice, by affixing and leaving affixed a copy thereof, on the doors of the several churches or chapels of such benefice; and a copy of such order shall be deposited and preserved by the churchwardens of the parish or parishes within such benefice, or one of them, in the parish chest of every such parish, and be shown without fee to any parishioner requiring to see the same, at reasonable times; and in case any such spiritual person shall refuse or neglect to comply with such order for the space of one month after such service, or if any such spiritual person shall at any time after such service refuse or neglect to perform the spiritual duties of the benefice in the manner and proportions in and by such order directed, then and in any or either of such cases it shall be lawful for the said bishop to proceed against such spiritual person so neglecting or refusing to comply with such order in the same manner as the bishop is empowered to proceed in the case of a spiritual person by reason of whose negligence the ecclesiastical duties of his benefice are inadequately performed: Provided always, that any such spiritual person who shall have appeared to show cause against and who shall think himself aggrieved by any order made by any bishop in pursuance of the powers given to the bishop by this Act may, within fifteen days from the service of such order, appeal against the same to the archbishop of the province, and the archbishop shall hear and determine such appeal, and confirm, revoke, or vary such order, as to him may seem just and proper; and if he shall revoke or vary the same, such revocation or variation shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and be served, preserved, shown, and enforced as herein-before directed with regard to the original order; and it shall be lawful for the archbishop, if he shall think fit, to order the appellant to pay the costs of such appeal.

UNIVERSITY AND CLERICAL INTELLIGENCE.

OXFORD.

Oxford Commemoration.—On June the 12th, the Vice-Chancellor having opened the Convocation, which he did with much grace and dignity, the candidates for the Honorary Degrees were presented in the following order:—

Doctors in Civil Law.—The Right Hon. the Earl of Ripon; the Right Hon. Stephen Rumbold Lushington, of Norton Court, in the county of Kent, late Governor of Madras; the Chevalier Bunsen, Privy Counsellor and late Envoy Extraordinary, and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the King of Prussia at the Court of Rome; Sir John Frederick William Herschell, Bart., F.R.S., Corresponding member of the Institute of Paris, &c. &c.; Major Sir Thomas Livingston Mitchell, F.G.S., &c. &c.; Henry A. Merewether, Esq., Sergeant-at-Law, Solicitor-General to Her Majesty the Queen Dowager; Francis Beaufort, Esq., Captain R.N., F.R.S., Corresponding member of the Institute of Paris, &c. &c.; William Henry Smyth, Esq., Captain R.N., F.R.S., Corresponding member of the Institute of Paris, &c. &c.; Lieut.-Col. John Sidney North, of Wroxton Abbey, in the county of Oxford; William Wordsworth, Esq., of Rydal Mount, Westmoreland.

It is needless to remark that the laudatory addresses of Dr. Phillimore, the Regius Professor of Civil Law were, as they always are, remarkable for their felicitous allusion to the peculiar merits of the individuals eulogized, as well as for good taste, good Latin, and forcible and animated delivery.

Honorary Masters.—The Right Hon. the Lord Brooke, of St. John's coll., presented by the Rev. H. B. Wilson, B.D., of St. John's coll.; George Bowyer, Esq., of the Middle Temple, eldest son of Sir George Bowyer, Bart., of Radley, Berks, presented by the Public Orator.

It is hardly necessary to say of such a list that every name was received with the loudest acclamation. The chief attraction, however, appeared to be Sir John Herschell and Wordsworth, particularly the latter, whose reception from every part of the theatre could not but have been most gratifying to that amiable and accomplished poet. After the Honorary Degrees had been conferred, and the candidates had taken their seats upon the Doctors' benches, the Rev. Thomas Branker, of Wadham, introduced the Rev. Joshua Brooks, M.A., of Trinity coll., Cambridge, who was admitted to an ad eundem degree by the Vice-Chancellor. Immediately after which the Poetry Professor, Mr. Keble, pronounced the Creweian Oration, couched, it is scarcely necessary to add, in the most pure and elegant Latin. In the course of the oration he adverted particularly to those founders of Colleges, and other benefactors, in whose statutes and provisions, the highest degree of attention to the welfare of the poorer classes of society was eminently conspicuous. His well-timed allusion to our distinguished visitor, Dr. Wordsworth, was fully appreciated, and the oration concluded amidst general applause.

The Prize Compositions were then recited in the following order, and were received with the usual marks of approbation:—

Latin Verse.—Marcus Atilius Regulus fidem hostibus solvit.—William George Henderson, Demy of Magdalen coll.

English Essay.—The Classical Taste and Character compared with the Romantic.—Thomas Dehaney Bernard, B.A., of Exeter coll.

Latin Essay.—Quænam sint erga Rempublicam Academicæ officia.—Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, B.A., of University coll.

Sir Roger Newdigate's Prize.—English Verse.—Salsette and Elephanta.—John Ruskin, Gentleman Commoner of Christ Church.

The Vice-Chancellor then dissolved the Convocation, and amidst loud shouts from the Undergraduates' gallery, the company left the theatre, every one, we really believe, highly delighted with the entertainment they had received.

In a Convocation holden June 14, the Rev. Ellis Wade, M.A., of Sidney Sussex coll., Cambridge, was admitted ad eundem. In a Congregation holden at the same time the following degrees were conferred:—

10th) have exceeded his 28th Term. 3. He must have commenced his 16th Term eight weeks previous to the day appointed for sending in his essay to the Registrar of the University. In every case the Terms are to be computed from the matriculation inclusively. The essays are to be sent under a sealed cover to the Registrar of the University on or before the Wednesday in Easter week next ensuing. None will be received after that day. The candidate is desired to conceal his name, and to distinguish his composition by what motto he pleases; sending at the same time his name sealed up under another cover, with the motto inscribed upon it. The essay to which the prize shall have been adjudged will be read before the University, in the Divinity School, on some day in the week next before the Commemoration; and it is expected that no essay will be sent in, which exceeds in length the ordinary limits of recitation.

The first of the above subjects is intended for those gentlemen who, on the day appointed for sending the Exercises to the Registrar of the University, shall not have exceeded four years, and the other two for such as shall have exceeded four, but not completed seven years, from the time of their matriculation.

Sir Roger Newdigate's Prize.—For the best Composition in English verse, not limited to fifty lines, by any Undergraduate who, on the day above specified, shall not have exceeded four years from the time of his matriculation.—The Judgment of Brutus.

In every case the time is to be computed by calendar, not academical years, and strictly, from the day of matriculation to the day on which the exercises are to be delivered to the Registrar of the University, without reference to any intervening circumstances whatever. No person who has already obtained a prize will be deemed entitled to a second prize of the same description. The exercises are all to be sent under a sealed cover to the Registrar of the University on or before Friday, the tenth day of April next. None will be received after that time. The author is required to conceal his name, and to distinguish his composition by what motto he pleases; sending at the same time his name, and the date of his matriculation, sealed up under another cover, with the motto inscribed upon it. The exercises to which the prizes shall have been adjudged will be repeated (after a previous rehearsal) in the theatre, upon the Commemoration-day, immediately after the Creweian oration.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METROPOLIS.

Hackney.—Funeral of Archdeacon Watson.—A very impressive and valuable testimonial of respect has lately been paid to the memory of their deceased rector by the parishioners of Hackney. The Venerable Archdeacon Watson, after having been incumbent of Hackney for forty years, during which time he was ever actively engaged in promoting the spiritual and the temporal welfare of his parishioners, and never more so, as far as health would permit, than at the time of his decease, was, on the 9th of June, after an illness of only three days, taken from them by death. No sooner was this melancholy event known throughout the parish, than there was a strong wish expressed by the inhabitants that they might be allowed to show their respect for their departed rector, and their unfeigned sorrow for his loss, by attending his funeral. And this wish being most kindly complied with by the family of the deceased, gave rise to a scene on Monday, the 17th of June, the day of the funeral, which those who witnessed it can never forget, and which will be heard of with interest and gratification far beyond the boundaries of the parish in which it took place.

It having been found in the preceding week that a very large number of persons were desirous of being present, arrangements were made to secure order and quietness, and to allow of all who wished it to join in paying this last tribute of affectionate respect to one to whom they were so much and so justly endeared. Every house in the parish was closely shut, and the stranger passing through could have seen in this, and many other outward signs of mourning, an evidence of the general feeling. When the time arrived for the mournful business of the day, a large number of parishioners, four abreast, took the lead of the procession.—then followed a large body of clergy in their robes, the greater part of them uninvited, but willingly coming, some from considerable distances, to bear testimony to their great esteem for their departed brother, and to have the sad gratification of following his mortal remains to the tomb. Eight of the parochial clergy officiated as pall-bearers; having been closely connected with the deceased during his life, they were allowed the melancholy honour of still remaining near to him on his passage to the grave. The various branches of the family of the deceased closed the procession.

At the entrance of the churchyard, the officiating clergyman, the Rev. H. H. Norris, brother-in-law of the deceased, met the mourning party; and as the long-extended line slowly and silently, save when the commencing words of the burial service fell upon the ear, approached the great entrance of the church through the beautiful avenue which leads to it, the effect was most solemn and imposing. Every part of the immense edifice was crowded with spectators, by far the larger portion of them, poor as well as rich, showing by their dress, that they came there as mourners. The service in the church was commenced and terminated by sacred music. At the moment of the corpse entering, the solemn notes of the organ were heard, and the appropriate music selected for the occasion was the "Dead March in Saul." And again, while the procession was leaving the church, the children of the parochial charity schools chanted the "Nunc Dimittis:" thus, young and old, rich and poor, vied with each other in paying respect to departed worth, and in bearing their united testimony that they had lost a father and a friend. It may be added, that this method of showing respect for the character of Archdeacon Watson was not confined to the members of his own congregation, or even to churchmen. The Dissenters of the parish were equally ready with their neighbours to close their houses and shops, as an evidence that a parochial loss had been sustained; and many of them, of various denominations, joined the funeral procession.—From the British Magazine.

The first stone of the new St. Saviour's church, Southwark, was laid on Wednesday, June 27, by the Bishop of Winchester, with the usual solemnities, in the presence of about 300 persons. The church is to be built in the pure Gothic style, and will resemble the old structure as nearly as possible, but will be of smaller dimensions. The architect is Mr. Rose, who restored the Ladye Chapel.

Sunday Trading.—The rector of St. George's, Bloomsbury, has lately visited all the shopkeepers in his district, and requested them, as a personal favour, to close their shops by half-past ten on the Sunday morning. There was not one dissident, and the rector was heartily thanked for the trouble he had taken.

Rectorship of St. Mary-le-Strand.—At a vestry held in the vestry-room of the above parish, on Thursday, June 20, for the purpose of laying before the parishioners the official appointment of the Rev. Joshua Frederick Denham to the rectorship, presented to that gentleman by the Lord Chancellor, a resolution was unanimously adopted, expressing their thanks to the Lord Chancellor, for his kind condescension in receiving and complying with the wishes of the inhabitants in the appointment of the Rev. J. F. Denham, M.A., who had long been the officiating curate, to fill the then vacant rectorship of this parish, occasioned by the demise of the Rev. J. E. Gambier.

Clergy Orphan Corporation, St. John's Wood, Marylebone.—At a Quarterly Court, holden on the 31st of May, eight boys and three girls were elected into the schools.

The annual Public Examination took place on Friday, June 7th, before the Archbishop of Canterbury, the president of the Institution, the Bishop of London, the vice-president; the members of the two Committees; and a large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen.

The first class of girls underwent a very satisfactory examination in religious instruction, in Sacred, Grecian, and Roman history; ancient and modern Geography; and in English and French grammar. Their English reading was greatly commended for distinctness and propriety of pause and emphasis.

Specimens of needle-work were afterwards exhibited.

Dr. Shepherd, one of the Treasurers, stated that the first class of boys had lately been examined before the Committee, by the Rev. Dr. Russell, Professor Browne, of King's College, and himself, in Scriptural and classical subjects; in arithmetic, algebra, and the elements of Euclid; and that he was enabled to make a very favourable report of their behaviour, as well as of their proficiency. Upon which his Grace the president was pleased to express himself highly satisfied with the state of the Schools, and to signify his approbation of the Instructors, of whose diligence and efficiency such proofs had been set before him.

The next election of Children, of which due notice will be given in this Gazette, will be in Feb. 1840. The existence of these Schools is not, perhaps sufficiently known in different parts of England; and the Clergy may often render a great service to the widows of their brethren, by pointing out the benefits which their Orphan children may derive from this Institution.

June 16.—The Archbishop of Canterbury consecrated the Right Reverend Father in God, Doctor George Davys, Bishop of Peterborough, assisted by the Bishops of London, Lincoln, and Chester. The Rev. Henry Lindsay, M.A., Vicar of Croydon, preached on the occasion from part of the 2d verse of the 10th chap. of the Gospel of St. Luke:—"The harvest truly is great but the labourers are few, pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest."

St. Mary, Islington.—The third of the new churches erected in this parish, by the voluntary contributions of the inhabitants, liberally aided by the Metropolis Churches Fund, was consecrated, June 18, by the Lord Bishop of London, who subsequently preached a most excellent sermon, from the 7th verse of the 5th Psalm, in the presence of the Lord Mayor, a numerous assemblage of the neighbouring clergy, and a crowded congregation of the parishioners. It is situated in the New North Road; the principal front is a pure and elegant specimen of Gothic architecture; the arches of the windows and other details of the body of the church resemble those of Merton College, Oxford. The whole exhibits considerable taste and elegance, and reflects great credit upon the architects, Messrs. Inwood and Clifton. The church is capable of accommodating 1100 persons, and the cost of the building will not exceed 3,500*l.*

Christ Church, New North Road, Hoxton, built and endowed by the Metropolis Churches Fund, was on Saturday, June 21, consecrated by the Bishop of London. It is a plain but spacious edifice, designed by Mr. Blore, in the Norman style, and will contain nearly 1200 persons, almost one half of the seats being free for the use of the poor. Mr. H. C. Sturt, M.P. for Dorsetshire, the owner of a large estate at Hoxton, gave the site for the church, and for a parsonage house and schools adjoining. A district will be assigned to the church, and the Rev. W. Scott, M.A., of Queen's College, Oxford, late Curate of Christ Church, St. Pancras, has been nominated by the Bishop of London to the incumbency.

PROVINCIAL.

Derbyshire.—The foundation-stone of a new church has been laid at Tansley, near Matlock.—Derbyshire Courier.

Harlow, Essex.—On Tuesday, May 28th, the foundation-stone of a new episcopal chapel, to be called "St. John's Chapel," was laid by the Marquis of Bute, at Harlow. Divine service was performed in the parish church, and an impressive and appropriate sermon preached by the Rev. Charles Webb Le Bas, M.A., principal of Haileybury, and prebendary of Lincoln.—Essex Standard.

Gloucestershire.—The Rev. Dr. Warneford has munificently presented 500*l.* towards the endowment of a new church, to be erected at Whiteshill, near Stroud. The same benefactor has also presented upwards of 150*l.* towards the erection of the new church at present in course of erection in the town of Stroud.—Salisbury Herald.

The foundation-stone of a new church has been laid at Brimscomb, by the Rev. William Cocking. Most of the clergy of the district, and many people of all grades in the neighbourhood attended. Mr. John George of Brimscomb, has given the ground required; and Mr. Ricardo, of Gatcomb Park, has undertaken to endow the edifice. Mr. Ricardo has already built one church entirely at his own expense.—Gloucestershire Chronicle.

Herefordshire.—The school-house, which was built by Lady C. Greenly, near Kington, has been, within the last few days, endowed by Mrs. Greenly, of Titley Court, with the munificent sum of 1000*l.*, to be invested in such a way as will be most useful in procuring the blessings of education in the tenets of the Church of England to the children of the poor.—Hereford Journal.

Queen's College, Bath.—This superb institution is no longer a project of speculation, but a work in actual progress, and bids fair to be one of the noblest and most attractive ornaments of the city, independently of its national purpose, as a religious and literary foundation.—Bath Herald.

Staffordshire.—The Earl of Dartmouth has most liberally offered a piece of land near Hill Top, in the parish of West Bromwich, for the site of a new church, and also the sum of 1200*l.* towards the erection of the edifice, and 300*l.* to be invested as a fund for keeping it in repair.

Sir Robert Peel has contributed 500*l.* to the Lichfield and Coventry Diocesan Church-Building Association, the object of which is, the erection of new churches and parsonage houses where they are required.

Warwickshire.—The new church of Alverston, the first stone of which was laid on the 1st of August, 1837, has been consecrated by the Bishop of Worcester. The expense of erecting this edifice has amounted to about 2900*l.*, which has been principally defrayed by the voluntary contributions of the proprietors and inhabitants of the parish.

Yorkshire.—A bazaar has been held at Leeds, in aid of the fund for the repair of Christ Church and St. George's Church. The success of the bazaar has exceeded the most sanguine expectation. The total receipts amount to about 2165*l.* 1*6s.* 9*d.*—Watchman.

The church at Haselbury, Somerset, was reopened for public worship on Wednesday, the 19th inst. It has been rebuilt on an enlarged plan during the past year. The church contains about 600 sittings, being an increase in its numbers of nearly 250 free seats. The cost was about 1300*l.*

Castle-street chapel, in Reading, which has been 40 years in the Countess of Huntingdon's connection, has been consecrated for the service of the Church of England by the Bishop of Salisbury.

The Deanery of Exeter.—The Rev. Precentor Lowe was yesterday elected to the office and dignity of Dean of the Cathedral of Exeter, by the Chapter. Had not the election taken place, of which, we understand, notice was given to the Government, the gift of the deanery would to-morrow (Saturday) have lapsed to the bishop. We have heard, upon good authority, that objections will be made to this appointment, upon which the opinions of the Attorney and the Solicitor General have been taken, and that an application will be made to the Court of Queen's Bench, next term, for a mandamus, calling upon the Chapter to show cause why they refuse to elect the nominee of the Crown. Had the Ministers of the Crown understood the nature of the patronage, before they undertook to seize upon the Chapter privileges, and gave away the preferment to a brother of the Home Secretary by letters patent, the delay and difficulties which have occurred would have been prevented. We hear that a learned Whig divine of this county has expressed his opinion that the last bill of Ministers on the deanery was a greater blunder than the first.—Woolmer's Exeter Gazette.

On Tuesday, June 18th, the foundation-stone of a new church, in the parish of St. Paul, Bedford, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was laid by Lady Carteret, in the presence of a large assemblage.

Luton School, Herefordshire.—On Thursday, June 20, the Rev. Dr. Shepherd, preacher to the Honourable Society of Gray's Inn, and the Venerable Archdeacon Hale, preacher of the Charter-house, two of the governors of this foundation, visited the school. Having inspected the writings, they examined all the boys in reading, arithmetic, knowledge of the Scriptures, and the Church catechism. The boys in the higher classes were examined also in Greek and Latin authors, Geography, and History, and some of them in a portion of the elements of Geometry. At the conclusion of the second day's examination, the Visiting Governors expressed their satisfaction at the result, commending the boys for their proficiency, and the [Rev. C. C. Walky, the master, and his assistants, for their attention to the discipline of the school. They afterwards inspected every part of the school-house, which they found in excellent order; and noticed the improvements lately made by the direction of the governors, for the suitable accommodation of the master's boarders. They received a favourable report of the general behaviour of the boys on the foundation, and observed with pleasure their improved good appearance. The assistant-governors held their half-yearly visitation of the school, to admit boys on the foundation, &c., and both they and the masters dined with the visiting-governors at Mortimer's Cross.

The small church at Chapel Hill, Lincolnshire, having been put in substantial repair by the Curate of the parish, with the assistance of voluntary contributions, a sermon was preached on Sunday, 23d of June, by the Rev. John Haynes, M.A., of Coningsby, late Fellow of Clare Hall, in aid of the funds for defraying the expenses incurred thereby, when the sum of 6*l.* 1*8s.* was collected.

Faringdon.—On the 29th of May last the newly-erected church in the hamlet of Littleworth, in the parish of Faringdon, Berks, was consecrated by the Bishop of Oxford, who immediately after also consecrated the church-yard attached to the same. Prayers were read by the curate, the Rev. J. Moore, M.A., and the sermon was preached by the Rev. R. L. Cotton, D.D., Provost of Worcester College. The church was crowded, not only with the inhabitants of the village, but the neighbouring clergy and gentry. A handsome collation was provided on the occasion at Wadley House, the seat of T. M. Goodlake, Esq., of which most of the clergy and gentry present partook. The expenses of the building and endowment have been defrayed mostly by the munificent contributions of Oriel College, aided by those of many pious individuals who have taken an interest in the extension of the blessings of our Church to this hitherto spiritually-neglected hamlet. —Oxford Herald.

FOREIGN.

Five Roman Catholic missionaries left Lyons a few days ago for Paris, on their way to London, where they are to embark for Sydney, in New South Wales. They will afterwards join M. Pompallier, Bishop of Maronia, and Apostolic Vicar of New Zealand, in the island of Hokiang, where he has formed a prosperous religious establishment. —Galician's Messenger.

VIENNA, June 22.—Orders have been sent by the Austrian government to all the provinces, directing that the decree of the Emperor Joseph II., enjoining religious toleration, be respected, and threatening with punishment any of the Catholic clergy who shall refuse conforming to it. —German paper.

"The procession of the Fête-Dieu," says a correspondent at Rome, on the 30th ult., "has just taken place under the colonnades of St. Peter's, and was formed of monks of all orders and priests, all the bishops and cardinals in Rome preceding the Pope, who bore the host. It is calculated that 30,000 strangers were attracted to Rome by the recent ceremony of the canonization, and that the greater part were present on this occasion also. The concourse was immense." —Times.

France.—The late cardinal Fesch, the uncle of Napoleon, has been succeeded in the archbishopric of Lyons, by the cardinal d'Isaard, archbishop of Auch.

Boulogne.—The Rev. R. J. Meade has been presented by the British Protestant residents in Boulogne, with a beautiful silver salver and two pairs of candlesticks, on his retiring from that place, he having accepted the living of Keyford, near Frome. In his answer, Mr. Meade says, "Receiving the treasure which you have conveyed to me, as a token of respect for the sacred office which I have lately held among you, I shall, with additional interest, hand it down to my children, a proof of the encouragement which will be given to the honest, though humble efforts of a Christian minister, and at the same time of the affection which Englishmen, at a distance from their native land, continue to cherish for the Church of their fathers."

The presents consisted of a purse of 100 guineas, a pocket communion service, a salver, and ink-stand, of silver, and a beautifully-executed portrait of the Rev. Gentleman, by Barber, of Nottingham. T. D. GREGG, A.M., Minister of the Free Church, Swift's Alley, Dublin, and the Rev. THOMAS MAGUIRE, P.P., of Ballinamore.

It is necessary to inform the Public, that inasmuch as a disagreement arose between the parties, there is no joint edition of the discussion. The Protestant edition is not signed by Mr. Maguire; nor is the Roman Catholic edition signed by Mr. Gregg. A reference to the correspondence will clearly explain the reasons why.

This edition has a copious Index, which will enable the reader at once to turn to the arguments advanced on both sides, and the answers given.

The Wood-cuts by O. Jewitt, from Drawings by J. Fisher and W. A. Delamotte.

Containing one hundred Engravings on steel, and upwards of two hundred on wood.

"We have, placed at the head of this article, one of the most beautiful and interesting illustrations which has yet been published of the external appearance of the University of Oxford. It contains some valuable historical sketches by the President of Trinity College, and will supply a very useful and pleasing introduction to that more serious consideration which, in the present state of the country, that University well deserves."—Quarterly Review, Jan., 1838.

"Most persons who fall in with this work would but consider it as a collection of beautiful prints in illustration of one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. In consequence they will be disposed to place it on their drawing-room table; a position which seems to confirm the impression which the first view of it creates. And it really is a most interesting publication, considered merely as a work of art; but those who have been led to cast their eyes over the letter-press will find a kind of matter there of a very different complexion from the running accompaniment, in large type and small sense, which in such publications is commonly used to swell the volume, without hurting its character. Dr. Ingram, however, the learned writer of the letter-press, is evidently not a man to figure as a mere cavalier aux dames, or to serve as an elegant appendage to the fashion of the hour. Judging by the work before us, we should say he was as little like a writer in an annual or album as any author we ever read. He is apparently one of the race of men, now almost extinct, who used to live all their days both in and for the University."—British Critic, July, 1838.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. HODGSON, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street"

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. Members are secured from personal liability by the special provisions of an Act of Parliament.

Attention has been gradually awakened amongst all orders of the Clergy, to the important uses of this SOCIETY, and the business of it has very considerably increased within the last year, and is increasing every week. If it should be found, as by many it is supposed it will be, that life is of longer duration on an average amongst the Clergy than amongst the community at large, Profits upon Life Assurance in this SOCIETY will result in a corresponding ratio. The whole of these Profits will be returned. A Life Assurance Policy is entitled to its full share of profit from the day of its date. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below; and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 14.—VOL. II.

LONDON, TUESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1839.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

WE are happy to learn that the account which we gave in our last Number of the progress of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, during its first year, has attracted considerable attention. It seems that many of our readers were not aware that our plan had been carried out to its full extent, by sending a copy to the resident clergyman of every parish throughout England and Wales, during the whole year; and that this had been done without the aid of any particular fund, or any extraordinary resources: we hope that the simple statements which we have made will have the effect of increasing the support which we continue to receive from the Clergy, and will help to procure more extensive Subscriptions from the Laity.

We have not overlooked the suggestions which have been made to us recently for the improvement of the GAZETTE, some of which we hope to notice more particularly hereafter.

We have been requested to call the attention of the Clergy to the Act of Parliament relating to Marriages within the prohibited degrees, which appears not to be sufficiently known. It will be found in page 27.

••• In our account of the Great Meeting at Willis's rooms on the subject of National Education, on the 28th of May last, we omitted to mention the name of the Bishop of Ripon. His lordship was present during the whole of that meeting.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

August, 1839.

The SOCIETY is now about to publish "An Account of its Origin, Objects, and General Proceedings," which has been drawn up by the Rev. T. B. MURRAY, M.A., Assistant Secretary.

From this we make the following extracts:—

"Towards the end of the seventeenth century, in the reign of King William and Queen Mary, a number of excellent persons of high consideration among the Clergy and Laity, grieved at the profaneness and impiety which were spreading in this country, especially in the Metropolis and large towns, formed themselves into Societies for the Advancement of Christianity, and the Reformation of Morals. These good objects they continued to pursue, in connection with the Church of England, of which they were members, and with the co-operation of the highest order of the Clergy; the Bishop of London, Dr. Henry Compton, before whom they laid their plans, and methods of proceeding, having given his sanction and encouragement to the undertaking.

Various productions, which issued from the press at that time, tend to show that a great struggle had commenced between the enemies of divine truth, and the friends of religion and virtue; some writers throwing contempt on every thing sacred; others, who were of a better mind, lamenting the prevalent licentiousness and infidelity, and warning the nation and individuals against the awful consequences of vice.

It was at this important period that the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE had its beginning. The character and objects of the SOCIETY are concisely described in a small work published in 1701, entitled, 'An Account of the Rise and Progress of the Religious Societies in the City of London, by Josiah Woodward, D.D., Minister of Poplar,' the following extract from which will be read with interest. The concluding passage indicates the activity of the SOCIETY at a very early stage of its existence: and those persons who are acquainted with its line of operations at the present day, will observe with pleasure how closely it has kept to its original purpose.

'And here, as I pass, I cannot but take notice, with great thankfulness to God, of a very honourable and beneficial SOCIETY erected about two years ago in this city, by which the Propagation of Christian Knowledge at home and abroad is vigorously endeavoured; which seems to fill up all that could be thought deficient in the methods that were before set on foot, in order to the general amendment of the lives and manners of men. For whilst the Societies for the Reformation of Manners (Morals) pluck up the weeds, and prepare the ground, this sows the good seed. In the Society which I am now describing, there are several persons engaged that are of eminent rank in Church and State, and many who are of the Societies for Reformation; who have established a most useful correspondence abroad with other Protestant Churches; and do very bountifully contribute towards the education of poor children; the supplying of poor families with books of piety and devotion; and the advancing of religion in our plantations.'

The Rev. J. F. Ostervald, Professor of Divinity, and Pastor of the Church of Neufchatel, Switzerland, addressing the Members of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, Nov. 8, 1702, bore the following testimony:—

'In London, and in divers other places in England, this SOCIETY has caused many schools to be set up, wherein numbers of poor children are instructed, clothed, and educated. This SOCIETY has caused good books to be distributed at its own charge, in the schools in town and country, in the fleets, among the soldiers, and in the prisons.'

'Your zeal,' he adds, 'has not been confined to the wants of England, but has extended itself even to Foreign countries. You make it your business, with extraordinary application and expense, and with great success, to cause the light of the Gospel to shine in America; and you have there erected libraries, as you have also done in England, for the use of country ministers who are not capable of furnishing themselves with books. You invite other Protestant Churches to concur with you in these religious designs, to unite among themselves, and to put an end to those fatal divisions which till now kept them at a distance from each other.'

Dr. Edmund Gibson, Bishop of London, in a letter to his Clergy, dated April 3, 1740, in which he points out some of the means of suppressing vice and infidelity, refers to the labours of the SOCIETY:—

'It was with this view several Bishops, Clergymen, and other serious persons among the Laity, did long since form themselves into a Society, under the name of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, for printing and dispersing practical tracts in great numbers, along with Bibles, New Testaments, and Common Prayer Books: and as by their endeavour in that way great good has been done to Religion, so much more would probably be done if their design and their methods of carrying it on were more generally understood and attended to.'

Thus early in the history of this Institution did the tree, which was planted in faith, and singleness of purpose, receive the gracious dews of heaven; and thus openly and effectually did God, with His blessing, give it an increase. To Him be the glory for all the good which it has accomplished!

For one peculiar and distinguishing feature of the plan, namely, the Promotion of Christian Knowledge abroad, the SOCIETY was chiefly indebted to the Rev. Dr. Thomas Bray*, who, in April, 1696, had been offered by Bishop Compton the appointment of Ecclesiastical Commissary in Maryland, America; the affairs of the Church in that province requiring careful superintendence and regulation. Dr. Bray having accepted the office, quitted England for America in December, 1699. On his return home, in 1700-1, he successfully followed up his long-cherished scheme of establishing, under a charter, a Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts. At its commencement, however, the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE included both branches, the Home and Colonial; although separate subscriptions were received from its Members, according to the nature of the object which they desired to assist.

The first Meeting of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE was held in London, on Wednesday, the 8th of March, 1698-9, when the following persons were present:—Lord Guildford, Sir Humphry Mackworth, Mr. Justice Hook, the Rev. Dr. Bray, (who has been mentioned above), and Colonel Colchester.

These five original Members of the SOCIETY, in the very outset of their proceedings, declared their conviction, that the growth of vice and immorality was greatly owing to a gross ignorance of the principles of the Christian religion: and, acting upon this wise and sound opinion, they at once began to form Catechetical Schools, and Lending Libraries, in the principal towns of the kingdom, and took measures for distributing religious books and tracts, but especially Bibles and Common Prayer Books, and the Homilies of the Church, either gratuitously, or at a very cheap rate, among their poorer neighbours.

Among the eminent persons who assisted at the deliberations of the SOCIETY, soon after its establishment, we find the following:—Bishops Stillingfleet, Kidder, Williams, Fowler, Evans; Dr. Willis, Dean of Lincoln; Dr. Hayley, Dean of Chichester; Dr. Stanhope, afterwards Dean of Canterbury; Dr. Hare, afterwards Bishop of Chichester; Dr. White Kennet, afterwards Bishop of Peterborough; Dr. Josiah Woodward, Dr. William Nicholls, Dr. John Mapletot, Dr. Ernest Grabe, Sir George Wheeler, D.D., Sir Richard Blackmore, Sir John Chardin,

* This excellent and public-spirited clergyman was born at Marton in Shropshire, A. D. 1656. He died in 1730. An institution originally established by Dr. Bray and his associates is still in operation. Its principal objects are, 'The making provision for Parochial and Lending Libraries for the Clergy; and the conversion of adult negroes, and the education of children in the British Colonies.' The Members are called 'Bray's Associates.' Additions are made to the Association from time to time, by the recommendation of Members.

John Chamberlayne, Esq., Robert Nelson, Esq., William Melmoth, Esq., Mr. Humphry Wanley, &c. And at an early period the SOCIETY opened a correspondence abroad, with Professor Franck, of Halle, in Saxony; Mr. Ostervald, of Neufchatel; Mr. Jablonski, of Berlin; Turretin, of Geneva; Ludolf, of Erfurt, and others.

In the course of two years the SOCIETY had ample proof of the good it was doing. It was then separated into two branches; one of which, under the title of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS was incorporated by a Charter from King William III., dated June 16, 1701, and had intrusted to its care the advancement of true religion, and the establishment of Clergymen of the Church of England in the Colonies and dependencies of the British empire.

At a Meeting of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, held on the 23d of June, 1701, his Majesty's letters patent, under the Great Seal of England, for erecting the above Corporation, were laid before the Members; Dr. Bray being present, who received the SOCIETY's thanks 'for his great care and pains in procuring the grant of the said letters patent.*' Thanks were also voted to the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, for his assistance towards this object; and a Committee was appointed, including Dr. Bray, for the purpose of waiting on his Grace, to lay the Resolution before him, and 'to know of him what time and place he would be pleased to appoint for the first Meeting of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.'

The Institution of which we are about to furnish an account continued to promote its pious designs at home, under the name of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE. In March, 1709, a motion was made for Incorporating this Society; but the proposition was negatived at a subsequent General Meeting.

The bounty of the SOCIETY was soon extended to India. As early as the year 1710, it undertook the care and management of such funds as were intrusted to it for the instruction of the heathen, and for the support and enlargement of the Protestant Mission, which Frederick IV., King of Denmark, had established at Tranquebar, on the coast of Coromandel, in the south of India—a district in his possession. Thus it was the first of our Societies in England to set the example of a Missionary zeal†; and ever since that period it has continued to labour in the cause of Christ in the remote and benighted regions of Hindostan. It first aided the Danish mission; it afterwards established and supported missions of its own: and now that these exertions are happily crowned with an Indian Episcopate, it rejoices in the opportunity of doing good by the hands of the prelates in India. Some particulars will be given of the services rendered by its missions in the East, and of the grants of money and books which have been made from time to time, for the promotion of its objects, not only in India, but in the Cape of Good Hope, Australia, the West Indies, Canada, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Bermuda, and other parts of the world. But it is proposed, in the first place, to furnish a general statement of its domestic operations.

I.—DOMESTIC OPERATIONS.

The Domestic Operations of the SOCIETY may be classed under three heads:—

1. The education of poor children in the doctrines and duties of Christianity, as taught by the Church of England.
2. The gratuitous supply and cheap distribution of the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Common Prayer, the Homilies of the Church, and Religious Books and Tracts; as well as of Books of general instruction.
3. Translations of the Scriptures, the Common Prayer Book, and other books, into foreign languages.

* A transcript of the original sketch of the two venerable societies, as drawn up by Dr. Bray, and bequeathed by him, among other MSS. to Slon College, London, is inserted in the "Account."

† The Bishop of Calcutta (Dr. Wilson), writing to the SOCIETY in 1833, styles it 'The Primitive Missionary Society of India.'

1. The Education of Children.

1. At the first meeting of the SOCIETY, one hundred and forty years ago, it was resolved, 'To further and promote that good design of erecting Catechetical Schools in each parish, in and about London.'

On the 10th of March, 1698-9, being the second meeting of the SOCIETY, the following resolution was passed, 'That this SOCIETY will subscribe a stock for insurance of the charge of setting up the Schools for Promoting Christian Knowledge; and that Mr. Justice Hook do draw up an instrument of insurance, and a form of subscription, for the contributors in their respective parishes.' The poor were taught to read, and instructed in the Church Catechism; and the attendance of the parents was frequently enjoined in the hours devoted to this requisite branch of teaching. For many years successively, 'an Account,' stating the number of charity schools, and of the children in each school, was printed by the SOCIETY, and transmitted to the Members, and through them to the public. The SOCIETY also recommended, in circular letters to its correspondents, dated 1712, that with instruction in Religion they should join all proper methods of training the children in habits of labour and industry.

From this time the progress of Charity Schools formed a leading feature in the proceedings of the SOCIETY. The following is a specimen of the numerous statements laid before the Meeting.

'13th January, 1700-1.

'Mr. Skeat reports, that the school for girls in East Smithfield, in the parish of Aldgate, was opened this day; above forty pounds being subscribed thereunto. Also, that there are three schools lately opened at Wimbledon, two for girls, and one for boys, erected by twenty gentlemen, who have each subscribed four pounds a piece for ten years.'

The next minute records the establishment of an office, which, being placed in the hands of a zealous and discreet clergyman, could not fail to have proved highly important to the interests of these rising institutions.

1700-1. Jan. 13. 'Resolved, that the Rev. Mr. Cogan be the Inspector of all the charity schools in and about London and Westminster.'

It is an important fact, ascertained from original documents, that some of the earliest parochial and ward schools arose under the auspices of this SOCIETY, and that to the aid and encouragement which it afforded, is owing the origin of the annual assembly of the charity schools of London and Westminster in the cathedral church of St. Paul. Although the general arrangement of the affairs connected with these meetings devolves on a body of gentlemen, called the SOCIETY OF PATRONS of the Charity Schools, much interest has always been manifested in the object by the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, which contributes a certain sum annually towards the expenses of the Anniversary, and, from time to time, undertakes to apply for the kind offices of a preacher.

We find by the SOCIETY's first Report, that 'at the first meeting of the gentlemen concerned in promoting the charity schools in and about the cities of London and Westminster, the masters and mistresses were present, on the 8th of June, 1704, at St. Andrew's church, Holborn, with the poor children under their care, in number about two thousand.' This was the earliest annual assembly of the charity schools.

The space in St. Andrew's church proving insufficient, and the poor children of Wapping and Whitechapel having been excluded, in consequence of their alphabetical place in the procession in 1704; on the Thursday in Whitsun week, in the following year, the schools assembled in increased numbers at St. Sepulchre's church, Snow-hill.

In October, 1715, the Princess of Wales having expressed a wish to see the charity children at their next anniversary meeting; and it having appeared that her Royal Highness had not been invited on the previous occasion, 'upon account of the straitness of the room,' an application was made by the SOCIETY to the Commissioners for finishing St. Paul's Cathedral, for leave to assemble them there at the ensuing meeting. Statements were accordingly prepared, and the Dean and Chapter of St.

Paul's were applied to: but after an interview which the Committee had with Sir Christopher Wren, the scheme was abandoned. The anniversaries continued to be held at St. Sepulchre's, until 1738, in which year the schools resorted to Christ Church, Newgate-street. They met there for forty-four years successively. In 1782, they were, for the first time, assembled at St. Paul's Cathedral, where they have met every year since. The average number of children annually collected, is calculated at between five and six thousand; to which amount, if adequate accommodation could conveniently be provided in the building, large additions might be made from the schools in and about the metropolis. The total number of persons present, including the schools, may be generally estimated at nearly 17,000. Comparatively few, perhaps, who have witnessed the impressive and affecting scene, and listened to the chorus of praise ascending from so many thousand children's voices, are aware of the origin of this meeting.

The Members of the SOCIETY will not be displeased at this mention, however slight, of a national celebration, which has been pronounced one of the highest interest and importance; and which, it is to be hoped, will never cease out of our land. Nor will the benevolent Society of Patrons, who rejoice in the opportunity afforded them of contributing to the preservation of the national faith, and attaching the children of the poor to the doctrine and discipline of the Church, fail to receive the grateful acknowledgments of all who seek the prosperity of England itself.

Very soon after its formation, the exertions of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, in the cause of Christian education, were extended to different parts of the kingdom; its first care having been bestowed on the metropolis. By the year 1741, nearly two thousand charity schools had been established, through the means of the SOCIETY, in Great Britain and Ireland. At a subsequent period, on the introduction of the system of Sunday schools, about the year 1780, the SOCIETY gave its support and encouragement to this excellent object, which it has continued to afford up to the present time.

In giving its sanction and aid to Sunday and other schools, the SOCIETY proceeded on the express and avowed principle, that Religion, as inculcated by the Church of England, should be the basis of education. From this distinct line it has never deviated; and the blessing of the Almighty has abundantly accompanied its efforts for the present and future welfare of mankind.

The general adoption of parochial schools on the national system, which is sometimes called the Bell's, or the Madras system, completed the great work, of which the foundation had been thus laid upwards of a century before. The establishment of the NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR IN THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH, in the year 1811, and the Incorporation of that Society by royal charter, in 1817, became the means of increasing and regulating the efforts previously made in this important department. It must not be forgotten, however, that the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE still cheerfully co-operates in the work, which prospered so well in its hands, by supplying large quantities of Bibles, New Testaments, Common Prayer Books, and Tracts, to these schools, at a rate far below the cost price, and frequently by bestowing large gratuitous grants of books, where the means of purchasing them are wanting.

The SOCIETY has recently manifested the regard which it entertains towards the objects of the National Society in a very substantial manner. A copy of the Resolutions, unanimously adopted at a public meeting of the friends of National Education in the principles of the Church, at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Tuesday, the 28th of May, 1839, having been transmitted by the Secretary of the National Society; it was agreed at the General Meeting in July, 1839, to grant the sum of five thousand pounds to that institution in furtherance of the objects set forth in the Resolutions. Notice had been given by the Standing Committee a month previous, of their intention to propose this grant to the Board.

As it appears, on the best estimate which can be made, that more than ONE MILLION of children of the humbler class in England and Wales are now receiving Christian instruction in connection with our Church, it is not surprising that the number of applications for books should be increased, and the calls on the SOCIETY's funds become more pressing in consequence."

We intend making further extracts from "the Account" in our next Number.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EMPLOYMENT OF ADDITIONAL CURATES IN POPULOUS PLACES.

Patron.—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

Presidents. { HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.
HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

THE last statement which was laid before the Subscribers and Friends of this Society contained the names of the parishes and districts to which grants for the current year (97 in number) had been made, and it was mentioned that the total sum so appropriated was 6,915*l*.

A few extracts from the correspondence of some of the incumbents thus assisted are appended to this Report; and they will be read with interest, as exhibiting a specimen of the beneficial results which, by the Divine blessing, have even in this short period ensued from the establishment of the Additional Curates' Fund.

But the Committee are now chiefly desirous to draw attention to the present condition of the SOCIETY.

All the grants before mentioned expired at Easter, 1839. Previously to that period the Committee had inquired, by a circular letter, whether in each of these cases the aid of the SOCIETY was still necessary, or whether local contributions or other causes enabled any of its grants to be withdrawn. From the return to this circular it appears that five of their grants have been relinquished. With regard to the remaining cases (so far as a return has been received through the several bishops) it appears that a second grant from the SOCIETY, to the same amount as the former one, is urgently needed. Such second grant the Committee have accordingly felt themselves called upon to make; and the result is, that, including the sum reserved to meet the cases from which a return is still due, the SOCIETY is pledged for the ensuing year to the payment of a sum which amounts to within 100*l*. of its whole annual income, that income being at present 6,700*l*., and the aggregate of grants 6,600*l*.

While the entire resources of the SOCIETY are thus unavoidably devoted to the continued wants of former applicants, no less than fifty-one new applications have been made for grants. Many of these cases are of a nature which renders it more than ordinarily painful to the Committee to be unable to assist them. In some a new church is actually built, and its consecration and use only delayed for want of funds to maintain a Curate; in others external aid is only asked for a limited period till local funds can be raised.

Under these circumstances, the Committee, notwithstanding the appropriation of this year's income, have resolved to offer to such cases as the above, and a few others of the greatest urgency, a temporary assistance. This they are enabled to do, owing to the delay which took place in many of the former grants becoming payable, which has left in the SOCIETY's hands the sum of 2,600*l*. They propose to apportion this sum to eleven parishes, in the way of an annual grant to each, if they continue entitled to it, for three years, at the expiration of which period the whole sum will be exhausted. In the meantime it is hoped that in several of these places the benefit of the instruction and ordinances of the Church will have been sufficiently felt to induce the inhabitants to make an effort to secure to themselves the continuance of so great a blessing. The Committee are satisfied, and would strongly impress upon their friends, that the CENTRAL SOCIETY can only hope to render extensively serviceable the resources with which it may be entrusted by strenuous local efforts being made in furtherance of its grants. And to enable such efforts to assume a better and more permanent form than that of precarious payments from year to year, the Society will always be ready to sacrifice a part of their funded capital in order to aid and encourage Endowments.

While the Committee thus urge the necessity of local exertions, they do not forget that the circumstance of some districts is such as to present a barrier seemingly insurmountable to their success; and they would therefore earnestly appeal to the wealthy members of the Church, and to those who find their spiritual wants amply provided for by the piety of former days, to contribute to the relief of poor and populous parishes which have no such provision. A simple abstract of the eleven cases proposed to be assisted with grants, which must be again withdrawn for want of funds, unless the income of the Society is promptly and considerably increased, is here subjoined; and the Committee feel sure that it will plead the cause of these destitute districts far more powerfully than any arguments which they can use.

W. J. RODBER, Secretary.

4, St. Martin's-place, July, 1839.

Ashby-de-la-Zouch.—Diocese of Lincoln.—At this place a new church is ready for consecration, but entirely without endowment. This they hope in a few years to obtain; at present they have no means of raising any salary for the curate. Population, 5,400.

St. John's, Wolverhampton.—Diocese of Lichfield.—The population of the district is 9,000, of the parish, 37,000. The incumbent states that "assistance from the Society will probably only be needed two or three years."

Werneth.—Parish of Stockport, Diocese of Chester.—Population of the district 3,462, of the parish 66,610. Fifty pounds is offered locally towards a curate's salary. If he can be obtained, a church will be built, and in the mean time a school-room licensed for Divine worship.

Newington.—Trinity Church, Diocese of Canterbury.—Population of the district 17,500, of the parish 44,500. Great poverty and vice prevails in part of this district. It is stated that the aid now solicited from the Society may after a while be otherwise supplied.

Irlams-o'-the-height.—Parish of Eccles, Diocese of Chester.—The population of the parish is 40,000, and that of this hamlet, together with two other townships, for all of which the additional curate is intended, 5,700. Efforts are being made to build a church, which will be greatly stimulated by his appointment: meanwhile there is a school-room in which he will give two or three Sunday services, and also week-day lectures. "Most of the people have never been in the habit of going to any place of worship, and the Socialists are endeavouring to raise a chapel."

Stanton.—Parish of Youlgrave, Diocese of Lichfield.—In this parish, which has a wide-scattered population, a new church is being built, but they cannot obtain a curate without the Society's aid.

Yardley Wood.—Parish of Yardley, near Birmingham, Diocese of Worcester.—Population of the district 1,000, of the parish 3,000. "Most of the people [of this outlying district] have grown up in ignorance of all religion, and are unacquainted with the services of the Church." A dissenting meeting-house has been bought by the clergyman and a resident in the district, and is to be licensed for the curate till a church can be built; and this depends on a curate being first provided. To this object the Society is only asked to contribute a part, the persons above mentioned giving a house and 50*l.* per annum.

Dawdon.—Parish of Dalton-le-Dale, Diocese of Durham.—This new population, 2,000 in number, having no place of worship, a church has been built with the help of the bishop, who has both given and advanced money towards it. They are obliged to look to the Society for funds for a curate for it.

St. James's, Leeds.—Diocese of Ripon.—The population of this district, which has only one clergyman, is 12,000, and is "in the poorest part of Leeds."

Chelmsford.—Diocese of London.—The services of an additional curate for this parish (the resident population of which is 6,000) are required among the workmen employed on the Eastern Counties Railway, in number 1,000. A temporary chapel will be erected for this purpose, and a local subscription raised to meet the Society's grant.

Worsborough.—Diocese of York.—This parish contains nearly 5,000. "At that extremity of it nearest to Barnsley a new population has sprung up, consisting chiefly of poor weavers, who are nearly two miles distant from the Church." A school-house has been built near them by a gentleman, who will enlarge it if a curate can be obtained regularly to perform divine service in it. Fifty pounds towards his salary is offered by the clergyman, whose own receipts from the living are only 140*l.*

From the foregoing abstract of the circumstances of these cases it appears, that should the temporary aid, which is all the Committee have at present to offer in the way of annual grants, be accepted, it will be the means of providing, over and above the general labours of Eleven Additional Clergymen in an aggregate population of upwards of 50,000 souls, the following specific benefits:—

It will enable three churches already built, or on the point of completion, to be opened for Divine service, which might otherwise remain unused.

It will enable religious worship to be offered in four other places where no regular service is now performed.

It will be the probable instrument of forwarding the erection of three new churches.

These facts speak for themselves. If so much good can be produced by means so scanty and precarious, how greatly would the interests of our holy religion, and the social well-being of the country, be promoted, if this Society were enabled extensively and permanently to minister to the wants of populous and destitute parishes!

Extracts from the Correspondence of some of the Clergy to whom grants have been made.

Parish of —. Population 8,871.

"In consequence of the assistance afforded me by the Society I have been enabled to give a strictly Catechetical Lecture on the Sunday evenings in the school to the more advanced classes. This, I rejoice to state, has been blessed far beyond my expectation, in communicating the knowledge of the principles of our holy religion, not merely to the young persons connected with the school, but even to many in the middle and advanced periods of life."

Parish of —. Population 35,000.

"The usual winter-services of my church are at half-past Ten A.M. and half-past Six P.M.; but this winter (during at least the season of Lent) I was enabled by the assistance afforded by your excellent Society, to institute a weekly service and lecture on Wednesday evenings at half-past Seven P.M. and also an additional service on Sunday afternoons at Three P.M., when the children of the congregation were catechized, and a short catechetical exposition given after the Second Lesson, as required by the Rubric; and in Passion Week a lecture was read each evening in the school-rooms to the teachers and senior scholars of my Sunday-school."

Parish of —. Population 4,000.

"Although among a population of 4,000, my own work is not sensibly diminished by the aid of an additional curate, because so much was necessarily left undone before; yet the comfort and satisfaction of my labours is, I might almost say, immeasurably increased by the constant presence and assistance of a fellow-labourer. I feel, therefore, that I cannot be sufficiently thankful, or too earnestly solicit the continuance of so great and welcome a favour."

"It may, perhaps, not be uninteresting to the Society to add, that by means of the help afforded by it, a daily service is contemplated, to be continued during the summer months, if not during the whole year."

Parish of —. Population.—District 3,500; Parish 20,000.

"I am thankful to say that I have had the pleasure of seeing our congregation steadily and satisfactorily increase during the past year; the old attendants seem more confirmed in their attachment to the Church, and many new ones have been added. We have lately opened our Church for regular service on Wednesday evenings instead of a school-room lecture, and the numbers, so far from diminishing, have been increased. During Passion Week we had a full service every evening except Saturday, which has never been attempted before in this place, and an average attendance of at least 150, which is very pleasing, because almost all who came were working people, or engaged in business, and scarce any could come without some exertion. Our list of communicants is also considerably swelled, and the increase of the last has, I think, been larger than that of any preceding year."

"I should add, in conclusion of this short sketch, that the congregation attending this church, and the inhabitants of the district at large, have contributed no less than 80*l.* to the support of the church and schools, and 50*l.* to the different missionary societies, during the past year."

Parish of —. Population.—District 1,500; Parish 11,000.

"The Curate of — has great pleasure in stating that the maintenance of a resident minister at — is producing most satisfactory results. In this neighbourhood, where hitherto comparatively few attended public worship, and where the Christian Sacraments had almost altogether fallen into disuse, the church is now numerously attended, and the number of communicants gradually increasing."

Parish of —. Population.—District 1,000; Parish 2,000.

"The appointment of a curate has yet been but of short continuance, but there are now two extra services in the parish besides the former regular duties. They are extremely well attended, and the people are very thankful for the privileges they enjoy."

Parish of —. Population 4,000.

"The Society's grant has been of essential service in this place. It has relieved the incumbent from a load of duty under which his health was giving way. The whole population, 4,000 in their families, can be visited four times a year, or once a quarter. A chapel and school will be erected in —, as by the continuance of the grant a service can be given there on the Sunday in addition to three in —; and funds are collecting for this purpose. The school children are catechized twice in each week. Dissent is diminishing; the congregations are steadily increasing; a more wholesome and deliberate attachment to the Church is advancing in the parishes. It is too much to say that all this is the fruit of the Society's grant, as since the present incumbency (three years) a change has been taking place. But the progress has been more rapid during the past nine months of the grant."

Parish of —. Population 4,429.

"Since I have had a curate we have been, either the one or the other, enabled to give up some portion of every day to the general management of the schools, as to funds, mode of education, &c. The consequence of this has been that our numbers have more than doubled, and that we have seldom less than twenty children admitted every monthly committee-day. I attribute this entirely to the attention paid to the schools by the vicar and the curate."

Parish of —. Population.—District 1,500; Parish 10,000.

"A great change for the better has taken place in the district of —. The inhabitants never used to attend the services of the mother Church, owing to the distance and want of accommodation. Since they have had service in the school-room our congregations have been numerous, and several have become communicants. The sick of the district have been regularly visited; and a district of the town has been allotted to the additional curate."

Parish of —. Population 6,000.

"In general, I can humbly affirm, that the utmost benefits have arisen to us here, considering the period during which assistance has been afforded. Mr. —, the curate, is in every respect an able and zealous coadjutor, and is highly respected by the people."

Parish of —. No church till recently for 200 years.

"I have much satisfaction in stating that the congregation, both in the morning and the afternoon, are rapidly increasing. In the afternoon there are seldom less than 800 persons. The communicants have likewise increased."

Chapelry of —. Population 15,000.

"Three additional services have been established. A congregation of upwards of 200 has been raised in —; it is steady, and promises to increase. The two additional services in — are attended by as many as the Sunday school-room will contain.

REPORT OF THE LORD PRIMATE OF IRELAND, RESPECTING THE FUND FOR THE RELIEF OF THE IRISH CLERGY.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

IN submitting to your Lordships and to the Committee, a further account of the distribution of the funds placed at my disposal, for the relief of the Irish clergy, I have but little to add to my former Report, in proof of the extent of distress among that deserving body of men, and of the greatness, and opportuneness of the relief afforded. That distress, it will be easily imagined, could not be small, arising as it did in most cases, from a withholding of professional income, in whole or in great part during a period of seven years, and from expensive and harassing litigation when any portion of the tithes were to be recovered; the distress of the Irish Clergy is in fact beyond effectual relief, occasioned by the disappointment of plans for placing children in respectable professions, and securing for them a decent maintenance in life. This calamity exceeds the efforts of private benevolence, and there remains nothing for a large class of these sufferers but resignation under irremediable evil with a broken heart.

Still the Committee may rest assured, that their munificent contributions have not been without abundant and blessed fruits. In all cases they have operated in mitigating calamity, and in very many they have enabled incumbents to continue the services of curates, who must have been dismissed destitute; whilst their flocks would have been left without sufficient pastoral care. They have also enabled the Clergy to preserve their life insurances, and thus to secure a future provision for their families. In illustration of the important services rendered to the cause of religion, by rescuing numerous individuals from immediate want, and enabling them to continue their ministrations, I cannot do better than quote the words of Archdeacon Cotton, Dr. Elington, and Archdeacon Thyle, extracted from Reports recently made by them, of what has been done in the Dioceses of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, Lismore, Leighlin, Ferns, Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, which were respectively placed under their care by the desire of their bishops:—"By this statement," Archdeacon Cotton says, "as compared with my former account delivered in July, 1836, it appears that since the month of April, 1835, there has been intrusted to me, and distributed amongst the Clergy most in need of such help, about 30,000*l.* sterling. In transmitting this paper, which I trust will be found correct (and the vouchers for which are at your Grace's call), it would be unpardonable in me not to offer what it must be most satisfactory to your Grace to receive, namely, the strongest assurances of the Clergy's deep sense of their obligation to Providence, to its instruments, their munificent benefactors throughout the British Empire, and to your Grace, under whose kind and judicious direction, this great and seasonable aid has been supplied. I may add my own full conviction, that this bounty has been to very many of the highest possible importance. It has saved Life Assurances from forfeiture, children from being withdrawn from school, curates from dismissal, incumbents from overwhelming debts, their families from actual want, and some of themselves from a gaol.

"Under these circumstances, we must be less than men and Christians, if we are not penetrated by sentiments of most unfeigned gratitude; and we desire to offer through your Grace, to the London Committee, the warmest expression of our feelings for their successful exertions in carrying us through the complicated difficulties, under which, but for them, we should have sunk."

Dr. Elington observes—"In giving up my account of the trust which your Grace was pleased to repose in me, I hope your Grace will permit me to express, however imperfectly, my sense of the greatness of the benefit conferred upon the Irish Clergy, by the munificent contribution of the British nation. Much has been said of the sufferings of the Irish Clergy, but I firmly believe they have been little understood; indeed, it would be impossible for any person, who was not himself a witness, to form a conception of the cases of individual suffering, or of the exemplary patience with which it was endured. I may briefly state to your Grace, that some of the money intrusted to me was employed in purchasing articles of necessary furniture, to replace what had been sold to procure the means of subsistence, in redeeming the very beds upon which their children had slept, and I should add, that the most distressing of these cases was made known to me in consequence of the enquiries which I had set on foot, the individual himself not having applied to me for relief. I believe I may venture to assure your Grace, that there has not been a single instance of a life insurance being forfeited since your Grace communicated to me your earnest wish that they should be provided for in the first instance. The Clergy of the dioceses of Leighlin and Ferns trust that your Grace will convey to their British benefactors their heartfelt gratitude for the Christian sympathy and active benevolence which prompted their most liberal contributions, and I am happy to assure your Grace, that no language can be too strong for expressing their sense of the obligation which they owe for the assistance vouchsafed in the hour of their deepest distress. The prayer of those, who we trust have been purified by suffering, is, that their benefactors may experience that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and that the overruling Providence of the Most High may exempt them from such privations, as called into action their truly Christian liberality. But I should do injustice to the feelings of those in whose name I write, if I did not express to your Grace, their deep sense of the unwearied exertions which you have made in their behalf, and of the kind, paternal, and unremitting attention which your Grace has shown to all their wants."

Archdeacon Ryle writes—"My brother Commissioners and myself have again respectfully to request your Grace to have the kindness to convey to the London Committee of management, the deep sense of gratitude which the Clergy of the dioceses in common with their brethren throughout Ireland, must ever entertain of the noble and unprecedented munificence of the British people, in the time of their severest privations and distress. That their bounty has not been ill bestowed is apparent from the numerous life insurances which it has sustained, and thus preserved to the families of the Clergy the hard earned savings of many years; while the sums allocated for the payment of curates, have kept up the means of spiritual instruction, in districts which otherwise must have been deprived of its blessings. To your Grace, as the zealous advocate and guardian of our interests, we feel the warmest and most respectful acknowledgments of our gratitude are eminently due."

The Reports from the other dioceses are to the same effect, concluding with the same grateful acknowledgments. It now only remains that I should account to the Committee for one circumstance in the general Report, which to their liberality will seem to require explanation. Between 13,000*l.* and 14,000*l.* of the fund still remain to the credit of the Committee in London undrawn and unappropriated. This reservation has arisen from the following causes:—In the year 1835, when the great subscription was raised, there was a prospect of a speedy settlement of the tithe question, and a liberal scale of distribution was adopted, proportioned to the then existing distress of the Clergy, and without reference to its continuance. But the events of that year extinguished all hopes of a speedy settlement, the resistance to the payment of the compositions rents continued, and the application of a remedy by legislative enactment was indefinitely postponed, while only a comparatively small part of the relief fund remained. It was therefore necessary to form a very limited scale for distribution. I accompanied my Report to the Committee in 1837, with a copy of this scale, from which it will appear that the sum in each case, which was to be the criterion of relief to be afforded, gradually increased in proportion to the income, but did not exceed 150*l.*, and that the commissioner in each diocese had a very complicated account to settle with each individual clergyman, before he could ascertain the amount to which he was entitled. He had first to determine the net amount of the incumbent's income, and then the gross amount of his receipts; and secondly, the expenses of collecting the income, and the net amount of the receipts. It is obvious, therefore, that in drawing out a general scale for the distribution of the fund in all the dioceses of Ireland, it was impossible previously to calculate the amount of the claims which would be made by each diocese, while at the same time, it was absolutely necessary to keep the scale so low as to guard against the embarrassment, which an excess of claims above the means of relief must have caused. The necessity of adopting so limited a scale—the uncertainty in each year as to the probable duration of the distress, and a wish to retain some funds for the most pressing cases, which might present themselves in the event of a still further postponement of a legislative settlement, left the above balance unappropriated at the end of the last year, when the unexpected interposition of Parliament at length terminated the persecution which had lasted for so long a period. The operation of the Tithe Act of last year at the enormous sacrifice of two-thirds of the arrears, and of 25 per cent. of future annual income, occasioned an earlier payment than usual, or than could have been anticipated of the tithe composition (converted into rent charge), due last November; so that a further distribution equal in amount to that of the preceding years became unnecessary.

It is to be hoped that in return for those sacrifices, the income of the Clergy, although reduced in amount, will in future be more certain, and more punctually paid; and it is mainly owing to the generosity and sympathy of the British public, that the Irish Clergy were enabled, in the midst of their privations and distress, resolutely to resist the abandonment of any principle, the giving up of which might have endangered the stability and permanence of the Established Church. It may be proper to mention that having felt myself bound by the instructions of the subscribers, and of the London Committee, to disburse the funds only among those of the Clergy who were in distress, in consequence of the non-payment of their professional income, I was debarred from extending relief to a larger number of sufferers, who did not come immediately within the description of the objects of the benevolence of the British public, but, who nevertheless were the victims of the same afflictive wants. I allude to the widows and orphans of clergymen, who died during the progress of the persecution, and who left their families in destitution, owing to their incomes having been withheld for so many years.

I hesitated to recommend this class of persons to the notice of the Committee, from an apprehension that the fund might not have been more than adequate to its primary object. It is impossible but that some errors of judgment may have been committed in so extensive a distribution; either in exceeding the proportion of relief allowed by the rules laid down, or in a seeming parsimony in those rules, little proportioned to the wants of the applicants, and ill according with the feelings of the benevolent donors. I have endeavoured to account for any error in the latter case, and as for errors of excess, they cannot have been frequent or glaring. On the whole, I am persuaded that no funds could have been more impartially or judiciously distributed. The praise of both rests with the bishops and their commissioners, in their respective dioceses. The higher praise of Christian charity belongs to the British public, for their seasonable interposition, and to the London Committee, for their unwearied exertions in carrying out the intentions of that public. But their praise is recorded elsewhere, and they seek not the praise of men.

I have the honour to be,
My Lords and Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obliged servant,
JOHN G. ARMAGH.

LOCAL SOCIETIES.

UPPER CLAPTON AND STAMFORD-HILL CHURCH FUND.

THE remarkable success which has attended the establishment of this fund induces us to bring the plan under the notice of the clergy generally. In consequence of a recommendation contained in the charge of the Bishop of London last year with reference to five Church societies, an address to the members of the congregation of Stamford-Hill chapel was drawn up by the Rev. C. J. Heathcote. Its object was to explain the nature of the five societies named by the bishop, and to exhort every one to contribute something. Mr. Heathcote also waited upon the master or mistress of every family and endeavoured to interest them in the object. A permanent committee has been formed, and is carrying out the object with much success. In the address which they have put forth they state, that "though the importance of collecting a large sum must not be overlooked, it is much more desirable, that we should all, out of one common feeling for the Church of which we are members, give something, than that a few only in comparison should give largely.

"It is, however, the heads of families among us, the masters and mistresses of households, who are more especially called upon for their co-operation in this work. Nor is their own individual support of the 'Church Fund' more earnestly requested, than that they would recommend it to the different members of their families and households, that they would interest themselves in explaining to them the great Christian purposes to which they are invited to contribute, and, as far as their own households are concerned, take the charge of the collection upon themselves.

"And to what better end, it may be asked, could the influence of that station be directed, in which it has pleased God to place every master and mistress of a family? or what would better become the Christian heads of Christian households, standing as they do before God in something of the light of His ministers to the Church in their own houses, than the coming before Him, once a year, and laying upon His altar the united tribute of themselves and their families to the service of His Church."

The congregation consists of about a hundred families. Each individual names, to the person who collects, the societies to which he wishes it to be given. The amount of their contributions to the several societies during the year is as follows:—

ADDRESS TO THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

On Thursday, July 25, a deputation from the clergy of the diocese of Hereford waited on his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and presented the following address:—

"We, the undersigned clergy of the diocese of Hereford, are desirous of approaching your Grace with the expression of our veneration for the sacred office to which, by Divine Providence, you have been called, of our respect and affection for your personal character and virtues, and of our gratitude for the firmness and discretion which you have evinced in a season of peculiar difficulty and danger.

"At a time when events are daily passing before us which mark the growth of latitudinarian sentiments, and the ignorance which prevails concerning the spiritual claims of the Church, we are especially anxious to lay before your Grace the assurance of our devoted adherence to the apostolical doctrine and policy of the Church over which you preside, and of which we are ministers; and our deep-rooted attachment to that system of education of which your Grace has been so determined a supporter.

"And while we most earnestly deprecate that restless desire of change which would rashly innovate in these important matters, we are not less solicitous to declare our firm conviction, that should anything, from the lapse of years or altered circumstances, require correction or renewal, your Grace and our other spiritual rulers may rely upon the cheerful co-operation and dutiful support of the clergy of this diocese, in carrying into effect any measures that may tend to revive the discipline of ancient times, to strengthen the connexion between the bishops, clergy, and people, and to promote the purity, the efficiency, and the unity of the Church."

THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

(From the Leicester Journal.)

Presentation of the Valedictory Address of the Archdeacon and Clergy of the Archdeaconry and County of Leicester to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln.

OUR readers are already aware that a meeting of the clergy was held in this place on the 17th of May ult., at which a valedictory address to the Bishop of Lincoln, on the occasion of the separation of this archdeaconry and county from his lordship's diocese, was unanimously adopted. On Friday last, shortly after the consecration of Christ Church, the address was presented to the bishop in the Visitation Court in St. Martin's church. His lordship arrived at the church about half-past 3, and was received at the south door by Mr. Stockdale Hardy, the registrar of the archdeaconry, Messrs. Berridge and Moxon, the churchwardens of the parish of St. Martin, the apparitors, &c., by whom he was conducted to the court, where, notwithstanding the inclemency of the day, a very large number of the clergy had assembled.

The Venerable the Archdeacon, after stating the circumstances under which the address had been prepared, and that 223 of the clergy had affixed their signatures to it, proceeded to read it as follows:—

"The Valedictory Address of the Archdeacon and Clergy of the Archdeaconry and County of Leicester, to the Right Rev. Father in God, John, Lord Bishop of Lincoln.

"We, the Archdeacon and undersigned Clergy of the archdeaconry and county of Leicester, upon an occasion of the deepest interest and concern to us all, beg leave to approach your lordship in the spirit of faithful affection, and of unfeigned regret for the cause which demands from us this parting address.

"Heartily grateful for the numerous privileges and benefits which, through the Divine goodness, we have enjoyed under your lordship's spiritual superintendence and paternal care, we cannot contemplate, without the most painful emotion, our separation from your lordship as our diocesan. The mild and benignant manner in which you have exercised your episcopal authority endears, and will ever endear, to us, your venerated memory and name. To your constant attention and promptness in the dispatch of business, to your profound judgment in ecclesiastical affairs, to your extensive knowledge in theology, and to your eminent talents and learning, we think it but justice humbly to offer the respectful tribute of our praise. The experience which we have had of these excellent qualities makes us more deeply lament our severe loss.

"Without entering into the question of the expediency of that legislative enactment which calls for our separation, and which we fervently pray may be productive of permanent good to that Church, which is 'the mother of us all,' we desire to cherish the consolatory reflection, that we shall still participate in your heart's warmest prayers, while, together with the rest of the community, we shall reap the fruits of that wisdom, which benefits each separate part by improving the whole, and of that indefatigable zeal which is ever seeking to extend throughout the land the great interests of the Redeemer's kingdom.

"In thus expressing the sincere feelings of our hearts, may we be permitted to add our earnest hope, that every blessing, both temporal and spiritual, may attend your steps through life, that the termination of your earthly labours may be distant and peaceful, and that when we shall stand together at the latter day before the Judge of all, 'an entrance may be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ,' where there will be neither division nor separation, but abiding happiness and union without measure and without end."

The Archdeacon then presented the address to the Bishop, who replied, as nearly as could be collected, in the following terms:—

"It requires greater eloquence than I possess to give adequate expression to the feelings called forth in my bosom by this too flattering testimony of your esteem and affection. Would that, in looking back upon the past, I could discern ground for believing that I had displayed, in the administration of my high office, the qualifications which your partiality has induced you to ascribe to me. But I am too conscious of my own defects,—too conscious how far my discharge of the episcopal duties has come short even of my own imperfect conceptions of their nature and importance,—not to feel that I am entitled to no other praise than that of right intention. Whatever success has attended my labours must, under the Divine blessing, be ascribed to the favour with which you have always received my suggestions, and the cordial assistance which you have afforded me in carrying them into effect. Having been a party to the introduction of the legislative measure which has occasioned the dissolution of my official connexion with you, I am especially bound to join in the prayer of your address, 'that it may be productive of good to that Church which is the common mother of us all.' I have, indeed, given the strongest possible proof of the sincerity of my own conviction that such will be its result. I assented to its introduction with a clear foresight of the personal sacrifice on my part which it involved. I foresaw that sooner or later it would separate me from the archdeacon of Leicester, and from the clergy of the archdeaconry and county. Amidst the regrets which I feel at that separation, I find one source of consolation. The spiritual superintendence over you has been transferred to one with whom I have lived in intimate friendship even from my youth up; of whom, therefore, I speak from personal knowledge when I say, that he possesses every qualification necessary to the effectual administration of the episcopal office; one, especially, in which I have had occasion to lament my own deficiency—a practical acquaintance with all the details of parochial duty. Under his paternal rule that friendly intercourse, that free and unreserved interchange of opinions will continue to subsist, which ought to subsist between the clergy and their diocesan, and which, it is my happiness to believe, has subsisted during the whole of my official connexion with you. Let me repeat that I feel my inability adequately to thank you by words for the uniform kindness which I have experienced from you, and especially for this last and crowning testimony of your esteem and affection. I must, therefore, thank you by my prayers. May the blessing of God ever be with you! May He bless you in every relation of life, private and public; in your persons, in your families; above all, in your labours for the salvation of the souls of those committed to your charge!"

His Lordship was deeply affected during the delivery of his reply to the address, as were also the clergy present; and thus terminated one of the most impressive and interesting scenes it has ever been our lot to record.

T. H. LISTER.

AN ACT TO RENDER CERTAIN MARRIAGES VALID, AND TO ALTER THE LAW WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN VOIDABLE MARRIAGES.

August 31, 1835.

WHEREAS marriages between persons within the prohibited degrees are voidable only by sentence of the ecclesiastical court pronounced during the lifetime of both the parties thereto, and it is unreasonable that the state and condition of the children of marriages between persons within the prohibited degrees of affinity should remain unsettled during so long a period, and it is fitting that all marriages which may hereafter be celebrated between persons within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity should be ipso facto void, and not merely voidable: Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That all marriages which shall have been celebrated before the passing of this Act between persons being within the prohibited degrees of affinity shall not hereafter be annulled for that cause by any sentence of the ecclesiastical court, unless pronounced in a suit which shall be depending at the time of the passing of this Act: Provided that nothing hereinbefore enacted shall affect marriages between persons being within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity.

II. And be it further enacted, That all marriages which shall hereafter be celebrated between persons within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

III. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to extend to that part of the United Kingdom called Scotland.

IV. And be it enacted, That this Act may be altered or repealed by any Act or Acts to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

LAW.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, WESTMINSTER, MAY 25.

EDWARDS v. THE BISHOP OF EXETER AND ANOTHER.

THIS was an action of quare impedit for disturbing the plaintiff's right of presentation to a living in Devonshire. The plaintiffs and another person are joint tenants of the advowson in question, but the latter being a Roman Catholic he is incapacitated by Act of Parliament from presenting to the living, the right of a Popish patron being transferred by statute to one of the universities. In the present instance the presentation had been made by the plaintiff alone, and the bishop refused to induct her clerk on the ground that a presentation by only one of two joint tenants was insufficient. No other presentation having been made within six months from the time at which the living became void, the bishop claimed the right of presenting by lapse, and accordingly collated the other defendant to the living. Hence the present action. The facts having been turned into a special case, it came on for argument in the course of the last term, when

Mr. Manning, on the part of the plaintiff, contended that the statute did not deprive his client of her right of presentation, merely because her co-joint tenant was incapacitated as a Roman Catholic from exercising his; neither did the act in this case transfer a joint right to the university. All that the legislature had provided for was, that a Popish patron should not have the power of presenting, and that to prevent the church from remaining void in consequence of such incapacity, the university might present instead: but they never contemplated giving that power to the university in a case where, although one joint tenant was incapacitated by his religion, there was another who laboured under no such disability, and upon whose presentation, therefore, the church might be filled.

Mr. Kelly, for the defendants, argued that the right of presentation of every Popish patron was transferred by statute to the university, and that, consequently, whatever right the plaintiff's co-joint tenant possessed was vested in that body. The university, therefore, must be taken to stand in the shoes of that individual; and that being so, and the bishop not being bound to induct upon the presentation of only one of two joint tenants, the defendant was justified by the omission of the university to join in the presentation of the plaintiff's clerk in refusing to induct him to the living. The church thus remaining void for six months, the bishop acquired by lapse a right to present an incumbent of his own.

The Lord Chief Justice to-day pronounced the opinion of the Court. After reviewing the provisions of the statutes, and the authorities cited in the course of the argument, his Lordship stated their opinion to be, that the legislature had merely intended to transfer to the university the right of presentation in those cases in which, through the legal incapacity of Popish patrons, there would otherwise be no person to present at all, and the church would, consequently, be left vacant. But in cases where one of two joint tenants was a Papist, they (the legislature) either intended that the incapacity of the latter should have the effect of investing the other joint tenant with the sole right of presentation; or, if that was not their intention, then there being no words providing for such a case, this must be taken to be a casus omissus in the act, and the Court could not supply it by extending the intention of the legislature beyond its actual provisions. Nor could any inconvenience result from this construction of the law on the subject, because, even in the case of joint tenants, neither of whom was incapacitated from presenting, the bishop might, if he pleased, (although he was not bound to do so,) induct upon the single presentation of one of them. Upon the whole, therefore, they were of opinion that the bishop ought to have inducted the clerk presented by Mrs. Edwards, and that therefore there must be judgment for the plaintiff.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, SERJEANT'S-INN-HALL, JULY 4.

IMPORTANT TITHE SUIT.

COOPER, CLERK, v. BYRON AND OTHERS.

THIS was a suit instituted by the Rev. Thomas Lovick Cooper, clerk, rector of the united parishes of Mablethorpe, St. Mary's-cum-Stam, in the county of Lincoln, against John Byron and nine other defendants, who were considerable occupiers of pasture-land in that parish, and the bill claimed an account of tithes from the date of the plaintiff's institution in 1831. The defendants set up a modus, to the effect, that from time immemorial there has been, and still is, within that part of the parish of Mablethorpe, called Mablethorpe St. Mary, an ancient and laudable custom, that if any persons not resident in the parish occupy or take to farm any pasture-ground, being ancient pasture-ground within the parish, he shall pay a modus of 4d. for each acre of such ground yearly on the 1st of August, in lieu of all tithes; and that if any of such ancient pasture be ploughed up or meadowed it pays full tithe, but when again restored to pasture it is again entitled to the benefit of the modus, in the hands of such non-residents. The case was very elaborately argued before the Lord Chief Baron, in March and May last, when an immense mass of documentary evidence, commencing in the reign of Charles II., and extending almost continuously down to the present time, was produced on both sides, and occupied the exclusive attention of the Court for eight days. Counsel for the plaintiff, Messrs. Simpkinson, Swanston, and Anderdon. Counsel for the defendants, Messrs. Boteler, Bethell, and Sharpe.

On Thursday, the 4th instant, the LORD CHIEF BARON delivered his judgment to the following effect. After stating the nature of the plaintiff's claim, and the customs relied on by the defendants, he proceeded as follows:—"This is substantially the modus under which the defendants seek to cover a portion of the lands occupied by each of them; some of which are ancient pasture without redemption; others, ancient pasture which had been broken up, but since restored to pasture, and so again, as they allege, covered by the modus. The first thing to be considered is, the meaning of the words 'ancient pasture.' The first and popular sense is that of ancient pasture as contrasted with modern. This does not necessarily include a state of pasture beyond the time of legal memory, and cannot be the sense of the words as used in pleading this modus. If it be, this modus is clearly bad, not merely for the uncertainty of the lands, and of the time when it attached upon them, but from the evident absurdity of a contract intended to apply to lands that might in future times become ancient pasture, according to no definite rule for measuring its antiquity, but by the fluctuating judgment of men in different ages to come. There is another sense of the words which seems to me the true sense, and the most consistent with the legal use and understanding of them, and that is, that the antiquity of the pasture is carried up to the time of legal memory,—that is, to the time of Richard

I.; and this interpretation of the words seems to dispose of the modus as pleaded. It is a contradiction in terms to call that ancient pasture which has been 100 years arable, and in the last year again converted into pasture, merely because it was originally ancient pasture; the quality and epithet of ancient cannot be applied to a substance of recent origin. The land is not now ancient pasture because it was anciently in pasture; it must continue from all antiquity, and now remain in pasture, to support a modus for ancient pasture. Besides, the finding of the jury in the case of 'Asfordby v. Newcomen' in the reign of Charles II., that the customary payment of 4*d.* an acre for pasture was for ancient pasture, 'when the same remained pasture,' disposes, in point of fact, of the modus as here pleaded. If it is to turn upon the evidence,—for it surely cannot be expected that a modus should be established upon modern evidence directly opposed to the modus found by a jury in the time of Charles II., upon the trial of an issue involving the same question; that is to say, I could never take any modern evidence to form a modus for the land to pay after it had once been broken up and turned into pasture in opposition to the finding of the jury in the time of Charles II., that the modus applied only to land when it "remained" in pasture. The counsel for the defendants, aware of these objections, have endeavoured to support the modus by arguing that the modus is not for pasture, but for the land when in pasture; that the lands which are covered by it are well known and easily distinguished, and go by the appellation of ancient pastures, but are not necessarily of that character; that these words mean no more than to indicate a portion of the lands in the parish, the quality, position, and boundaries of which are well known, and which from time immemorial have been covered by a modus of 4*d.* an acre, when in pasture, or in the occupation of a non-resident. This mode of interpreting the modus as pleaded calling upon me to treat it as if it had been pleaded in this manner,—that each of the defendants is a non-resident, and occupies certain lands, specific in quantity and description, which lands have from time immemorial, when in pasture, and occupied by a non-resident, been liable to pay 4*d.* an acre as a modus for all manner of tithes. I am not prepared to say that a modus so pleaded would not be good in law. Nothing is more common than a modus for land in a certain cultivation, but which pays tithe in kind when otherwise cultivated; and it is too late, after the case of 'Chapman v. Monson', for me to deny that a modus may be good for lands occupied by an out-dweller, which nevertheless pay full tithes in the hands of an inhabitant, whatever I may think of the reasoning upon which that case was founded. But would a modus so pleaded have been sustained by the evidence in this case? I think not; though on the whole of this immense mass of evidence, ancient and modern, the idea of ancient pasture is connected with the modus set up, whereas upon this mode of pleading the modus it would be no answer to it to show that the lands to which it is applied, in fact, were not pasture-lands until after the time of Richard I.; neither would it be any answer to a modus so pleaded, to show that it did not apply to many portions of land in the parish that were undoubtedly ancient pasture in the legal sense of the words, because a custom so pleaded being applicable to specific lands, the non-application of it to other lands of the denomination of ancient pasture would become immaterial, whereas nobody can deny that the modus as here pleaded involves a custom extending, not only over the pasture-lands the defendants possess, but over all the lands in the parish which go under the denomination of ancient pasture, and the rector, upon these pleadings, has a right to establish his claim upon the negative of that general custom. The verdict of the jury in the case of 'Asfordby v. Newcomen' is inconsistent also with this mode of interpreting the modus, for that verdict confines the modus to pasture-lands remaining in pasture, which implies that when once the pasture is broken up the modus is gone. Upon these several grounds I cannot think that I can establish the modus either as it is pleaded in words, or as it has been originally rendered by the defendants' counsel. But it has been pressed upon me that there is evidence to support a modus in a more limited form; viz., a modus of 4*d.* an acre for ancient pasture properly so called; that is, continuing so from the beginning to the present time, when in the hands of out-dwellers, and that with reference to the Tithe Commutation Act, which will prevent the further agitation of this question. I ought to direct an issue to be tried by a jury whether there be any such modus as is pleaded, with liberty to endorse on the postea any other modus they may find, which it is said will not prevent the defendants from setting up that branch of the modus before the tithe commissioner, though there should be a decree against them in this suit. I think, however, that an issue could not be directed with such an object except at the exclusive expense of the defendants, and that expense would probably be equal to the fee simple value of the tithes in kind; but, however that may be, I am of opinion that I ought not in any case to direct an issue for the purpose of giving the defendants an opportunity of throwing the whole of this mass of evidence at the heads of a jury, in order to take the chance of their finding a modus which either has not been pleaded, or has not been proved; and if the evidence now before me would justify a decree partially establishing the modus they have pleaded, it appears to me that it is my duty to determine that question myself, and not to leave it to a jury. Under this impression, I have, since the argument, read over the whole of the evidence, with the pleadings in all the suits which have been instituted touching the tithes of this parish, from the reign of Charles II. down to the present time, in order to satisfy myself whether there was sufficient evidence to sustain a modus of 4*d.* an acre for ancient pasture in the hands of out-dwellers, the land continuing in pasture (for that is the modus to which the evidence taken altogether seems to approach the nearest), and it is remarkable, that in each of those suits, except the 1st and the 4th, the modus is differently pleaded." His Lordship then went through a minute and lengthened examination of the proceedings in all these ancient acts, and proceeded as follows:—"Considering these several cases, therefore, as a series of judicial decisions, they do not appear to me to justify a conclusion in favour of the modus when put in opposition to various other considerations which arise upon a review of the whole case. As the utmost degree of certainty to which I can arrive from the whole of the evidence in this case must borrow some light from conjecture, I own that I think it much the most probable conjecture that this payment of 4*d.* an acre by out-dwellers for ancient pasture, was in its origin nothing more than a reasonable composition made long since the time of legal memory for the tithe of agistment. This is properly the tithe of pasture; for wool, lambs, calves, and milk, have nothing to do with the tithe of pasture. The farmers dwelling and having their homesteads out of the parish would very probably have driven their sheep home to be sheared and to lamb, and stocked their pasture in this parish with nothing but barren cattle, unless they could make a composition with the rector for the tithe, and thus leave him nothing to claim but agistment tithe, for which 4*d.* might, for aught I know, be something more than a reasonable sum in the time of Charles II. Upon the whole, therefore, it appears to me that the plaintiff is entitled to have an account of his tithes from the period of his induction. The decree must be for the plaintiff, establishing his right to the tithe, with costs.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.

WORCESTER, TUESDAY, JULY 17.

(Before Mr. Justice WILLIAMS and a Special Jury.)

THE QUEEN AGAINST NICOLAS HILL, JOSHUA BELL CRANE, WILLIAM WHITEHOUSE, SAMUEL TAYLOR, JOSHUA PINFIELD, WILLIAM SANSOME, GEORGE WAKEMAN.

THIS was an indictment against the several defendants for riot and assault on the Rev. Thomas Barrington Geary Moore, curate of Bromsgrove.

Mr. Serjeant Talfourd, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Lee appeared on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. Serjeant Ludlow, Mr. Godson, and Mr. Beadon for the defendants.

Mr. Serjeant TALFOURD, in opening the case to the jury, said, that this was a case perfectly independent of the abstract opinion whether or not the present levying of a church-rate was in itself proper or for the benefit of the established religion of the country. True it was, that though the present indictment was founded upon some proceedings which had taken place at a meeting called by public notice for the purpose of voting a church-rate of 1*d.* in the pound in the parish of Bromsgrove, and in which the defendants had so grossly and outrageously conducted themselves as to render this course necessary, still the abstract question was in no way called into discussion. The learned serjeant then proceeded at some length to detail the case.

Mr. Justice WILLIAMS summed up, and, after some consultation, the jury found—N. Hill, Guilty of assault and riot; Crane, Taylor, Pinfield, H. Hill, and G. Wakeman, Guilty of riot; and Whitehouse and Sansome Not Guilty.

His Lordship deferred passing judgment.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 11.

THEIR lordships sat as usual, for the purpose of hearing appeals till about one o'clock, at which time the House began to fill with peers who attended for the purpose of proceeding in state to Buckingham Palace, with the address agreed to on the motion of the Archbishop of Canterbury. There were about 80 peers present at half-past one o'clock, the majority of whom were in uniform.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR, in his robes of state, took his seat on the woolsack at half-past one o'clock, when the names of the peers present were called over by the Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, according to their seniority, in which order their lordships proceeded in state to the Palace.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and some others of the bishops, were most enthusiastically cheered by a large concourse of well-dressed persons, who had assembled outside the House to witness the procession.

HER MAJESTY'S ANSWER TO THE ADDRESS.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR had to inform their lordships that the House had that day waited upon Her Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and had presented an address, to which her Majesty had been pleased to return the following gracious answer:—

"I duly appreciate your zeal for the interests of religion, and your care for the Established Church.

"I am ever ready to receive the advice and assistance of the House of Lords, and to give to their recommendations the attention which their authority justly deserves.

"At the same time, I cannot help expressing my regret that you should have thought it necessary to take such a step on the present occasion.

"You may be assured that, deeply sensible of the duties imposed upon me, and more especially of that which binds me to the support of the Established Church, I shall always use the powers vested in me by the constitution for the fulfilment of that sacred obligation.

"It is with a deep sense of that duty that I have thought it right to appoint a Committee of my Privy Council to superintend the distribution of the grants voted by the House of Commons, for public education. Of the proceedings of this Committee annual reports will be laid before Parliament, so that the House of Lords will be enabled to exercise its judgment upon them; and I trust that the funds placed at my disposal, will be found to have been strictly applied to the objects for which they were granted, with due respect to the rights of conscience, and with a faithful attention to the security of the Established Church."

The answer was then ordered to be printed.

THURSDAY, JULY 18.

PRISONS BILL.

This bill passed through Committee, after some opposition from the Bishop of London to the fourth clause, which gives the sitting justices the choice of religious books for the prisoners; his lordship wished this power to belong solely to the chaplain, but at length withdrew his opposition, and the original clause was retained.

Clause 14 (which allows of paid Catholic or Dissenting chaplains), was struck out. The other clauses were agreed to, by a majority of 42.

TUESDAY, JULY 23.

TITHE COMMUTATION.

The MARQUIS of LANSDOWNE moved the third reading of the Tithe Commutation Acts Amendment Bill, which was accordingly done, and certain verbal amendments having been added, the bill was passed.

THURSDAY, JULY 25.

STATE OF THE CHURCH IN THE COLONIES.

The ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY said, he rose to present some petitions to their lordships on a most important subject, and the character of the petitioners was so high that he was sure it would be admitted that they had a strong claim upon their lordships' attention. One of the petitions was from the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge—a body which embraced greater part of the clergy of the Church of England, and a great portion of the people who were interested in the spread of religious instruction. The other petition was from an individual, but it was not on that account the less deserving of their lordships' attention, as it was from a distinguished prelate of high character in Australia. The subject of these petitions had reference to the interests of the colonial church—to the interests of the church established in our distant colonies in connexion with the Church of England. The petition from the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge began by asserting, that it was the duty of the State to provide religious instruction for the people wheresoever they might be situated. It then went on to observe that this country was more responsible than any other for the propagation and support of religion, because it had a more extensive dominion than any other country. It stated, also, that this country had not fulfilled the obligations due from her to her subjects in the colonies. The petitioners prayed that means of further instruction might be granted to all our colonies, and they implored of the Legislature protection for the property of the church, and the erection of churches and chapels appropriated to the use of the Church of England; and they further prayed that no new colony might be established without making sufficient provision for religious worship. In all these particulars he agreed with the sentiments expressed by the petitioners. We had been more negligent than any other country in the world in making provision for church establishments in the lands which we had colonized. If we looked at Spain, at Portugal, at France, and Holland, we should find, especially where the religion of the state was Roman Catholic, that ample means were supplied for the purposes of religious instruction in their colonies. But no such care was taken by us to provide for the spiritual wants of our extended empire. For many years we had actually sent out convicts to the penal colonies quite unprovided with the means of religious instruction. Nor was this all. The provision, which in 1791, was made for the clergy of the Established Church in Canada, was now threatened with abolition. With respect to the wants of our colonies, it appeared that in Upper and Lower Canada, in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Van Dieman's Land, there were no less than 300 clergymen wanted, besides those employed by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel; and there were at present a great number of clergymen employed by this Society, at an expense of not less than 30,000*l.* or 40,000*l.* Thus much for the facts stated in the first petition. He now came to the petition which he had presented from the Bishop of Australia. This petition showed that instructions were issued under the Royal sign-manual, in July, 1825, to set apart a seventh portion of the lands in Australia for the support of the Established Church; that such lands were accordingly set apart for that purpose, and that since that time the lands had been used for other purposes (as we understood the most reverend prelate), but that they still continued subject to the same liabilities of providing churches and schools according to the principles of the Church of England. The petitioner prayed, therefore, that their lordships would take this matter into their serious consideration, and that they would not allow any act to pass without making a due provision for the wants of the clergy in that colony. With respect to Van Dieman's Land, the same system was originally established there also, but that system had been since changed, and 400 acres of glebe had been allotted to each living, and these livings were held, not only by clergymen of the Church of England, but by members of the Presbyterian and the Roman Catholic church. Now, here was a point to which he wished to call their lordships' particular attention. He apprehended that the policy now pursued with respect to the colonial church was to put all religions in the colonies on an equality. He held in his hand a letter from a very distinguished Governor of New South Wales, in which he said that the recent dissolution of the church corporation afforded him an opportunity of placing on an equitable footing the principal churches in the colony—the Church of England, the Church of Scotland, and the Church of Rome. The writer, therefore, recommended her Majesty's Government to take the whole case into their serious consideration, and to adopt measures which would give satisfaction to the colony; and he further observed, that in a new country it was impossible to establish a dominant and endowed church without giving great offence. Now, he (the Archbishop of Canterbury) knew very well, that with respect to Canada great difficulties were to be encountered in attempting to endow an Established Church; but with Australia there was no such difficulty. Three-fourths of the population of Australia were members of the Established Church, and their good feeling towards the church in that colony was evinced by their having subscribed very large sums towards building churches much larger, in proportion, than had been subscribed in other countries. He believed, therefore, that there was no objection to the establishment of the Church of England in that colony. He had no objection to the State affording assistance to large bodies of Christians differing from the Church of England; but what he complained of was, that the church ought not to have been deprived of her revenues. They ought not to have taken away from her what had been given. He would maintain also, that the church ought not to depend upon voluntary contributions, which, when they amounted to a large sum, might not be willingly paid, or might, at some time when faction was hostile to the support of religion, be altogether withdrawn. He said, then, that true policy would leave the church in the possession of land, which would tend to quiet the minds of those who had settled in the country, and to the preservation of the pure Protestant faith. It was not his intention to go into the subject at large upon the presentation of a petition, but he trusted and hoped that a concern of so much importance to all our colonies, might not be settled without the intervention of Parliament. He trusted that it would not be left to the discretion of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, who had so much on his hands that he had not time to give it his deliberate attention, and who was therefore almost compelled to act on the suggestions of a governor who might give him wrong information, or have a favourite theory of his own, which he was anxious to carry into execution. The most Rev. Prelate then presented the petitions, together with one on the same subject from the minister and inhabitants of Clapham. At the same time he moved for copies of, or extracts from, any correspondence that might have taken place with the Government relative to the institution of the corporation for managing the school lands in New South Wales, and to the dissolution of the same.

The MARQUIS of NORMANDY said, it was not his intention to argue this important question incidentally on the presentation of a petition, and he should therefore confine his observations to the papers moved for by the most Rev. Prelate. It was true, that in 1825 a corporation was established for managing the lands appropriated for the purposes of national education; but an alteration was subsequently made on the ground that the appropriation of lands was not the best mode of furnishing support to the church. In 1829 it was intimated by his late Majesty that the grant of lands would not be continued, and the grant had ceased since 1830. Since then the system followed in New South Wales was that of furnishing religious instruction to all persons in proportion as the population required it, the state supplying one-half of the expense; and the money supplied by New South Wales for this purpose showed there existed no disposition on the part of the Government to withhold religious instruction from the members of the Church of England. 17,943*l.* had been given to the Church of England, 5,400*l.* to the Church of Scotland, and 5,650*l.* to the Church of Rome.

The ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY did not complain of want of liberality on the part of the Government of New South Wales, but of the principle by which persons of all denominations were placed on the same footing.

The BISHOP of LONDON could not allow the principle announced by the Noble Marquis, that it was the duty of the state to afford religious instruction in proportion as it might be required, to pass unnoticed. That instruction should be imparted, not in proportion as it might be demanded, but in proportion to the destitute condition of the population.

The motion for papers was then agreed to.

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

On the third reading of this bill being proposed, the BISHOP of EXETER moved the adjournment of the House, alleging the lateness of the hour (ten o'clock) as a reason why the bill could not be properly considered, but afterwards withdrew his motion.

VISCOUNT CANTERBURY and LORD WYNFORD opposed the bill, as harsh and unjust to the inferior clergy, who would by its provisions be liable to be dragged from Cumberland or Cornwall to London, when the accusation against them could be better discussed at home. The noble and learned lord moved that the bill be read a third time that day three months.

The BISHOP of EXETER then said, the effect of this bill was to extinguish the jurisdiction of the consistorial courts of Chester, and all other consistorial courts in the province of York, except that of York itself. Now, by the returns which he had examined, he found that the comparative experience of the court of Chester was much greater than that of any other court; for instance, in the last ten years there had been four suits for correction tried there, whereas, during the same period, there was only one at York; and yet the former court was to be abolished. Then again, the noble earl objected to bishops acting as judges; but he could tell their lordships that bishops had been invested with the authority of judges by a higher tribunal than any House of Parliament; they had received their authority from the great head of the church; it was coeval with the establishment of Christianity upon the earth. He could also refer to the authority of an eminent English lawyer, Sir Matthew Hale, who stated that the bishops derived ecclesiastical jurisdiction from the law. The right rev. prelate then proceeded to say, that under this bill an innocent man had no chance of justice, whilst at the same time it tended to screen those who were guilty. He would suppose the case of an incumbent of one of those large livings amounting to some 5,000*l.* or 6,000*l.* a-year. If he were charged with some grave offence, he might go before his bishop, and say that he was willing to submit his case to his decision. The bishop might think his case so bad, that he would banish him from the parish, and allow him only a small pittance to support existence. Well, then, of the large revenue of the living, the bishop would allow only 200*l.* a year to the curate whom he might appoint to do the duties of the parish. What was to become of the revenue of the living? According to the bill, the parishioners who paid the tithes could derive no benefit from it beyond the services of the curate. The banished clergyman might, he would suppose, live 40 years, during which time the revenues of the living might accumulate to 200,000*l.*, and how did the bill propose to dispose of this vast sum? Why, it said that it was to be applied to the "repairs and sustentation" of the church, and of the glebe and demesne lands. It might be very well to keep those in proper condition; but to say that 200,000*l.* should be applied for keeping up a house and glebe for a man with 200*l.*, it was absurd. Indeed, he had never seen so much trash and absurdity contained within the four corners of any bill. The right rev. prelate next contended that the bill, by giving power to a layman, in the Court of Arches, to depose a clergyman from his orders, would suspend pro tem. the canon of the church, and deprive it of one of its characteristics of a church: for a deposition, like an excommunication, must be by the just judgment of the church, which could not be subject to the judgment of a layman.

The DUKE OF WELLINGTON was sure their lordships could not decide with propriety on the measure at that late hour of the night, after the speech which they had just heard, and would, therefore, under the circumstances, earnestly recommend to their lordships to determine the debate either to-morrow or Monday.

The BISHOP OF LONDON said, the principle to which the right rev. prelate objected so much, of a private hearing before the bishop, was a principle contained in the bill of 1836. A clergyman's conduct might be such as to throw great scandal on the church, and he was, by this bill, enabled to express his willingness to assent to the sentence which the bishop might pronounce on him, without any further proceedings against him. The intended effect of this clause was merely to give validity to such an arrangement. With regard to the case of a supposed accumulation of church property, a case might come under the existing law, where a bishop sequestrated a living, he might, after having assigned whatever sum he pleased for the performance of the spiritual duties of the parish, dispose without control of the whole residue. He himself had so applied a residue of 1,000*l.* in assisting a poor clergyman's family. The right rev. prelate then contended (and quoted several authorities in support of his position), that since the church had ceased to be an independent power and had become connected with the state, the Legislature had a right to appoint what court it pleased to carry the judicial functions of the bishop into effect. On the subject of the excommunication of a bishop, an appeal might be made to the Court of Arches, which overrode the whole theory of the right rev. prelate. The right rev. prelate then quoted the authority of Charles I., since approved of by many eminent divines, that "the bishop was made subordinate to the civil power after the church began to be connected with Christian princes where there was a jurisdiction." With regard to the severity upon the clergy which was charged upon this measure by the noble and learned lord, it ought to be remembered that the adoption of the process pointed out was perfectly voluntary, and the clergyman knew before hand what he had to expect. He could not help also expressing his regret, that the noble viscount (Canterbury), should have spoken of the bill as containing some features of harshness towards the clergy, for the object of the committee had been not only to avoid every thing like harshness, but to save the clergy from some inconveniences to which they were now subject; indeed, almost all the alterations made in committee were intended in mitigation of the present law. Upon the whole, though there was not much chance of the bill getting through the other House this session, still he was anxious that it should pass their lordships' house in such a shape as might show the clergy and the country what their lordships' committee had deemed to be the most desirable provisions in a measure of this kind.

The BISHOP OF EXETER explained.

The House then divided, when the numbers were:—

MONDAY, JULY 29.

ECCLESIASTICAL PREFERMENTS SUSPENSION BILL.

VISCOUNT MELBOURNE, in moving the second reading of this bill, said, the object of the present bill was to suspend for one year the appointment to cathedral preferments, except under certain specified circumstances, so as to allow time for further inquiry, and to give Parliament in the next session time to carry out the measures to which he had alluded.

The BISHOP OF EXETER said, the noble viscount had laid no ground for calling on their lordships to assent to the bill. The ground that Parliament had passed similar bills before was no justification of this, because no hope was held out that the inquiries would be more complete, or that Parliament would be better prepared in the next session to pass the measures alluded to than it was in the present, for it was well known that the commissioners had ceased to act for the last nine months. He should wish to impress on their lordships the injustice that would be inflicted on the tenants and lessees of church property if they passed this bill. No leases which might fall in could be renewed. The only evil that could possibly accrue, if the bill were not passed, would be to fill up the vacancies in preferments which had been made till the commission could bring forward a bill. The right rev. prelate concluded with moving that this bill be read a second time that day three months.

The BISHOP OF ROCHESTER thought the bill most unjust to the whole of the clergy and to the welfare of the church. The bill ought not to be brought forward at this period of the session, when a great number of their lordships, and more particularly of the rev. bench, had left town. He considered this measure as a precursor of a more general one.

The BISHOP OF LONDON concurred with his right rev. brother, who had just sat down, in what he had stated about bringing forward the bill at that period of the session. He thought, however, on the whole, that the bill should be continued. He would not give his vote for the second reading if it were not for the understanding that her Majesty's Government would submit early in the next session of Parliament, the Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues Bill to their lordships. He did hope that that bill would then be brought forward, and not render the Suspension Bill necessary again.

The EARL OF WICKLOW thought there might be an improvement in the bill if they did away with the prevention of lessees renewing. If that could be remedied in committee, it would do away with one of the most powerful objections against the measure.

After a few words from the Bishop of Oxford, which were inaudible in the gallery,

The ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY said, that a rectory preferment in Berkshire (which had, we believe, been alluded to by the Bishop of Oxford), which was vacant, would still be suspended till the bill that was proposed to be brought in for the suspension of sinecures was passed. If that bill were brought in, and did not pass, that sinecure rectory must be presented to, and it would be continued for the life of the person who received it. He was speaking in this instance against his own interest, because that sinecure was in his own gift. That, and another sinecure, of very considerable value, had been placed at the disposal of the commissioners, and were to be disposed of in the way they might direct, by act of Parliament. He considered that the mention of that circumstance would rather operate as an inducement to their lordships to pass this Suspension Bill for this year. He entirely concurred in what had been said by his right rev. friend on his left (the Bishop of London), that it would not be desirable to put off the consideration of the measure respecting collegiate churches and sinecures after next year. He hoped that the bill might be submitted to Parliament next session; because, if not brought forward, he really did not see how their lordships could be called on to pass another suspension bill. He hoped their lordships would pass this bill, by which he would be saved the distress, from which he could not prevent himself, of presenting the two sinecure rectories, which, in his opinion, ought to be devoted to those uses which he thought the bill now before the House of Commons was intended to promote.

The BISHOP OF CHICHESTER said, if he had not been assured that there would be a bill next session, he should be inclined to support the amendment. He did not think it right to get rid of the great measure by such a shadow as the present bill.

The bill was then read a second time without a division.

AUGUST 3.

REGISTERS OF BIRTHS BILL.

LORD DUNCANNON, in moving the second reading of this bill, observed that the Jews and the Roman Catholics had altogether declined to give up their registers to the Registration Commissioners. The Quakers, whose registers were considered to be kept in the most perfect state, had not altogether declined to surrender them, but would either give up the originals or a prepared index to them. About 7,000 registers had been delivered in, and one of the objects of the bill was to make these registers, after being properly examined, admissible as evidence in courts of law.

The Bishop of London entertained considerable objections to the bill, but was unwilling to oppose the second reading. He did not disapprove of bringing the different registers into one safe keeping; but he must say a word or two as to the course pursued by the commissioners. They had applied to the different religious bodies in England and Wales for their registers, and from some had received a flat refusal, and from others an answer implying considerable hesitation. The bill did not propose, and wisely in his opinion, to take the registers from some of those bodies, but from others, on the other hand, it was intended to take the registers, and he (the Bishop of London) did not clearly understand whether with or against their consent. The Bishop of London had a considerable number of registers in his possession, and it was proposed to take them from him, not only without his consent, but even without consulting him. He did not know that he should be unwilling to deliver up the registers on being satisfied that they would be safely and properly kept, but he thought he was entitled to be treated with the same consideration as had been extended to the Jews and Roman Catholics. He should therefore be disposed, if the bill went into committee, to move the insertion of words giving the Bishop of London the power of assenting or withholding his assent to the surrender of his registers. He also desired their lordships to notice that the bill proposed to give the examined registers of the Dissenters a new character, and to make them as available as evidence as the ancient parochial registers of the country. He thought this was a point deserving serious consideration; and he doubted whether so important a measure as the present had not been introduced too late in the session.

After a short conversation between Lord LYNDDHURST, Viscount DUNCANNON, and the Bishop of LONDON,

LORD LYNDDHURST said, as this was a very important measure, and had been only brought up to this house on the 18th of July, their lordships would not have time to examine it this session, and he should therefore move that it be read a second time this day three months, in order that a measure might be brought forward in this house early next session.

The house then divided—

PROTESTS AGAINST THE THIRD READING OF THE CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

Dissentient—Because to pass a bill on a subject of so much moment, of which by reason of its great, manifest, and manifold imperfections, it is acknowledged by its authors and warmest advocates that it cannot be expected, and ought not in its present state, to become an act of the Legislature, is derogatory to the honour of this House, and would be a precedent of the most dangerous character, if the glaring unfitness of such a proceeding did not forbid all apprehension that it will ever hereafter be imitated.

July 25.

H. EXETER.

Dissentient—Because, owing to the long pleadings and the mode of taking evidence in the ecclesiastical courts, the expense and delay of these courts are so great, that many clerks who have misconducted themselves have remained unpunished in consequence of no person being willing to bear those expenses and delays.

Because, from the first establishment of the English church, the duty of deciding on charges made against clerks had belonged to the bishops; that duty cannot be taken from them without greatly diminishing the utility of and the respect in which bishops are held.

Because it is admitted that this bill wants many corrections, and it is unwise at any time to send an important bill from this House to the House of Commons, and particularly so at this late season of the session, when the Commons have not sufficient time to amend it.

WYNFORD.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, JULY 19.

CATHEDRAL PREFERMENTS BILL.

The bill was read a third time. On the question that it do pass, Mr. AGLIOSBY proposed a clause empowering the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to renew leases in certain cases. On this Sir T. ACLAND proposed and carried an amendment, that the clause should only take effect from 1st Jan., 1839, instead of 4th Feb., 1835. Mr. HUME proposed 1st March, 1835, but this was negatived. The question, that the amendment of Sir T. Acland be added to the bill, was carried by a majority of 40 to 37; but Lord John Russell opposed it, as unjust to the church; and on the question that the clause as amended stand part of the bill, the clause was negatived by a majority of 45 to 39. The bill was then passed.

FRIDAY, JULY 26.

Mr. LANODALE said, he had been intrusted with a petition of importance, to which he begged to call the attention of the House. The petition arose from a large meeting of Roman Catholics assembled on the subject of education; and the object of that meeting was to give an expression of their opinions in consequence of the calumnies urged against the Roman Catholics at other meetings of persons opposed to their principles. It was signed by something more than 4,000 persons; and the petitioners claimed for the pastors of their church, the exclusive controul over the education and religious instruction of their flocks. The petitioners proceeded to state, that they belonged to a church which was connected by its succession of bishops with the apostles themselves; and that from these bishops, and the pastors appointed by them, they never could think of withholding the entire controul of the religious instruction of their children and families. The petitioners then repelled the attacks of their adversaries at numerous public meetings, and claimed the most unimpeachable purity for the morality inculcated by the pastors of their church.

The petition was ordered to lie on the table.

VISCOUNT CASTLEREAGH had a petition to present from a parish in the county of Down, against any further grant to Maynooth College.

These petitioners state that they view with increasing alarm the efforts of the Roman Catholics in Ireland to subvert the Protestant church, through the machinations of a political priesthood—(hear)—employing an instructed and superstitious peasantry in the accomplishment of the most unholy objects. The petitioners, therefore, prayed that no grant whatever might be conceded for the education of men like these.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

It will be seen by an advertisement in our Gazette of this month, that an EMIGRANT'S LIBRARY, selected from the Permanent and Supplemental Catalogues, has been formed by the Committee of General Literature and Education appointed by the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE. The Committee, it appears, have taken this step for the religious welfare of settlers in the Colonies, with the view of sustaining in their minds an attachment to their faith and their Church; so that while provision is making for their present wants, means may not be wanting for promoting their spiritual interests.

The Bishop of Winchester has embarked for the Channel Islands, to hold visitations and perform other episcopal duties in that part of his diocese. The bishop has appointed the Rev. Dr. Dealtry, Chancellor of Winchester, to act as Commissary for institutions, &c. &c., during his absence.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol has returned to the palace at Gloucester, after an absence of three months spent in attendance upon his Parliamentary duties in town.

METROPOLIS.

Third New Church at Rotherhithe.—The first stone of this Church, to be called "All Saints," was laid on Monday last, July 15, by Major-General Sir W. Gomm, K.C.B., who gives the site, which is on the Lower Deptford-road, about two miles from London-bridge. Sir W. Gomm, accompanied by his lady, was met at the new school-rooms by the Rector, the Rev. E. Blick, the parish authorities, and the architect, Mr. Kempthorne. From thence a procession (including the children of the schools in the upper part of the parish, to the number of 440) was formed to the site. An appropriate prayer having been offered up by the Rector, and a hymn sung, the foundation-stone was adjusted by Sir W. Gomm, amidst the hearty cheers of the numerous assembly. The lower classes, especially, seemed to take great interest in the occasion of the day. The Church is calculated to hold 1,000 sittings, of which one-third are free, one-third secondary seats, to be let at a low rate, and the remainder pew sittings. When finished, this Church will complete the benevolent designs of the Rector for the spiritual benefit of his flock, five large school-rooms having been also erected by his instrumentality since his entrance upon the living, about four years ago.—Times.

On July 4th, the Church of St. James, Shore-ditch, in the Curtain-road, Worship-street, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of London—attended by the clergymen of the district, the churchwardens, and other parochial officers, and a numerous and respectable congregation.

The Church of St. Paul, Bunhill-row, in the parish of St. Luke, was consecrated on July the 10th, by the Bishop of London, in the presence of Lord Radstock, the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, a large number of clergy, the churchwardens, and other parochial officers of the parish, and a highly respectable congregation. The Rev. Nugent Wade, M.A., is the appointed minister. The ground for the erection of the Church was given by the proprietors of the Artillery Ground, on part of which it is raised.

The New Church of St. Luke, the first stone of which was laid about eighteen months ago, in Berwick-street, by Earl de Grey, has been consecrated by the Bishop of London. This Church is the largest that has been erected in the metropolis for several years. The cost of its erection and the purchase of its site has exceeded 14,000*l.*, of which 2,500*l.* has been supplied by the Metropolis Church Building Fund, and upwards of 10,000*l.* has been raised by voluntary subscriptions of the nobility, gentry, and tradesmen of the district and others anxious for the dissemination of religious instruction. The building is in the Gothic style of architecture.

Camberwell.—National Education.—Three schools in connexion with the National Society are about to be built—one in the district of East Dulwich, a second in the district of St. George's, and another near the church lately built by Mrs. Hyndman's trustees. These schools, it is hoped, will contain and educate 1,000 children in the principles of the Established Church, in addition to those already in course of instruction in the five Church of England schools already established in the parish. The school in the district of St. George's will be commenced speedily, and we believe the sum of 1,200*l.* has been already subscribed towards the laudable object. That in the new district of Mrs. Hyndman's church will also, it is hoped, progress without delay, as a considerable sum has been already collected. In both cases it is just to say that the exertions of the clergymen of the respective districts, the Rev. S. Smith and the Rev. Mr. Burton, have been indefatigable, and their personal pecuniary sacrifices very great. On the 10th instant, the first stone of the proposed East Dulwich and Peckham Rye school was laid by the Rev. Matthew Anderson, in the presence of a large and most respectable assembly. The ground, which cost 450*l.*, was purchased by nine gentlemen in the district. The sum required for the building was stated to be about 500*l.*, and we are happy to say that the whole sum has been subscribed.—Times.

PROVINCIAL.

Coventry Religious and Useful Knowledge Society.—On Monday, July 22, the fourth annual meeting of the above society was held at St. Mary's Hall. The chair was taken about a quarter to one by the Rev. Dr. Hook. The meeting was addressed by the chairman; the Rev. John Howells, vicar of Trinity; the Rev. T. Sheepshanks, Head Master of the Free Grammar School; the Rev. D. Butler; the Rev. H. Bellairs, Rector of Bedworth; the Rev. E. Gibson; R. K. Rotherham, Esq.; the Rev. H. Maclean, the Rev. R. Chapman; Mr. Brindley; the Rev. G. L. Cooke, of Cublington; Mr. Wall, Mr. Caldicot, &c. The meeting was more numerous attended than on any former occasion, and the repeated cheers with which the speakers were greeted, showed the determination of the audience to support an institution that had for its object the benefit of the working classes of this city. The meeting separated about half-past two.—From the Coventry Standard.

A Roman Catholic chapel has been opened at Everingham in a style of splendour unequalled in England. The building cost 30,000*l.*, and the procession of bishops and clergy, with the Pope's banners and the host elevated, was more splendid than ever witnessed before in modern days in this country.—Sheffield Iris.

Mr. C. Bathurst, of Lydney Park, has sent the munificent sum of 1,000*l.* towards endowing the new church of Cinderford, in the Forest of Dean.—Worcester Journal.

An Example worthy of Imitation.—Mrs. Ann Kyrewood, late of Droitwich, has bequeathed by will to the Worcester Diocesan Church Building Society the sum of 700*l.* stock in the three per cent. consols.—Worcester Journal.

Queen's College, Bath.—The plans of the intended Protestant college, to be called Queen's College, at Bath, have been presented to her Majesty, who has approved of the same, and ordered that the institution should be placed on the same footing as the King's and University Colleges.—Bath Gazette.

The new church at Clevedon, Somersetshire, was consecrated on Friday se'nnight by the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells. The appointed Minister is the Rev. George Weare Braikenridge, M.A., of University College. G. W. Braikenridge, Esq., of Brislington, who has a summer residence at Clevedon, took the burthen of the expenses of the building, &c. wholly upon himself, and to his liberality and public spirit the public are therefore chiefly indebted for the accommodation they now possess.

The new church in the parish of Trowbridge, and the chapel at Staverton in the same parish, have had ecclesiastical districts assigned, by virtue of an order in Council to that effect.—Bath Chronicle.

Harrow School.—Mr. Joseph Neeld, M.P. for Chippenham, and one of the Governors of Harrow School, has just founded two additional Scholarships at Harrow for boys going thence to any college in the University of Oxford. Mr. Alexander James Beresford Hope, son of Viscountess Beresford, has given up the proceeds of his Scholarship gained at Harrow in 1837, to found a prize at the same school.—Times.

Leeds.—The ceremony of laying the chief corner stone of Christ Church, building at Loft-house, near Leeds, took place a few days ago, in the presence of the neighbouring clergy, the parochial schools, and the inhabitants of the adjoining hamlets.—Leeds Intelligencer.

The actual proceeds of the late bazaar for the repairs of the churches at Leeds have been ascertained to amount to 2,103*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, to which donations to the amount of 82*l.* have since been added, making a total of 2,185*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*—Ibid.

Norfolk.—The old church of South Runcton, between Lynn and Downham, has been from time immemorial in a dilapidated state. The Rev. Francis Edwards, the incumbent of Holme, having directed his energies to render this place available for public worship, applied first to the Society for Building and Repairing Churches, who granted him about 160*l.* The whole cost, we believe, was between 700*l.* and 800*l.* Nearly 400*l.* were raised by voluntary contribution, and the remainder was supplied by the liberality of the reverend gentleman above named. On the 27th of June the place was opened for divine worship, on which occasion an appropriate sermon was delivered by the Rev. E. Edwards, of Lynn, to an overflowing congregation.—Norfolk Chronicle.

Oxford.—The parishioners of All Saints, in this city, have been recently at great cost in re-decorating their beautiful church, the production of that admirable amateur architect, Dean Aldrich; and Henry Goring, Esq., whose munificent charities are so well known in this city, has presented a splendid covering of Angora velvet for the pulpit and altar, which, with the elegant candelabra given a few years ago by Mr. James Wyatt and Son, exhibit a picture of dignity and grace scarcely exceeded in any of our richest cathedrals.—Oxford Herald.

Huntingdonshire.—National School Society.—A public meeting of the friends of education according to the principles of the Church of England, was held at the Town-hall, Huntingdon, on the 3rd of July, for the purpose of promoting the objects of the Local Board of the National School Society, established in this county. The Rev. Dr. Hollingworth, Archdeacon of Huntingdon, was in the chair. A highly respectable company were present.—Cambridge Chronicle.

Kent.—The first stone of a new parish church at Lee, Kent, was laid on the 17th of July, by Sir Thomas Baring, the Lord Bishop of Rochester performing the religious rites. The friends and supporters of the Church assembled on this occasion in great numbers. Nearly the whole of the clergy and a large number of the respectable residents of the county for miles round were present. The new church is to be built on a site selected from a field belonging to Mr. Thomas Brandram. That gentleman has consented to allow the purchase-money to be considered as a loan to the building fund, in addition to presenting the committee with the munificent allowance of 500*l.* in the purchase, and an additional frontage of fifty feet. Sir Thomas Baring, the lord of the manor, and Joseph Sladen, Esq., likewise contributed 500*l.* each.

Walton-on-Thames.—New Chapel.—On Sunday morning last, a sermon was preached in the parish church at Walton-on-Thames, by the Rev. Thos. Dale, vicar of St. Bride's, Fleet-street, after which a collection was made in aid of the funds of the new chapel at Hershams. We are happy to state that the able advocacy of this interesting cause was attended with a most successful result, the collection amounting to the large sum of 102*l*. 18*s*. 0*d*. It is probable that the edifice will be ready for divine service in a few weeks; and we trust that we shall ere long be able to record in the pages of our journal the completion of the endowment, and the building of a clergyman's residence. It must be in the highest degree satisfactory to the inhabitants of this extensive parish to know, that the spiritual wants of a remote and populous district will be adequately provided for; and we are sure that the noble examples which we understand have been set in this charitable work by the principal inhabitants will be readily and generously followed by all the parishioners.—From the Surrey Standard.

Edwards' College, South Cerney.—It should be generally known to the public, and particularly to all friends of the Established Church, that a new institution is rising in the diocese of Gloucester, which is likely to become of essential benefit to the families of the more indigent Clergy of that diocese. It appears that five years ago a benevolent lady, named Edwards, the widow of a former curate of South Cerney, near Cirencester, left the residue of her estate to the widows and orphans of distressed Clergy of the above named diocese. When this was announced, the Bishop, the lay supporters, and the Clergy generally, resolved to appropriate about half the amount in erecting a college, as an asylum for those families, who after having lived in a comfortable parsonage, are cast off without husband or father, or his professional emoluments, upon the world. To provide these houseless persons with a commodious residence seemed to be the best mode of applying this munificent benefaction, and accordingly, in the spring of 1838, the building was commenced, and is so far advanced towards completion, that five tenements are ready for the reception of inmates. The edifice is erected at South Cerney, the village in which Mrs. Edwards resided, about 4 miles south of Cirencester, and is called, after her name, "Edwards' College." The benefits are confined to the families of distressed Clergymen connected professionally at their death with the diocese of Gloucester. Application for admission should be forwarded to the treasurer, Archdeacon Timbell, D.D., of Beckford, near Tewkesbury.

The sum of 4,000*l*. has been subscribed towards rebuilding the present dilapidated church at Oldswinford, and erecting a new one in the same parish. With the view of aiding the funds that will be required to carry out the project, the Rev. C. H. Craufurd proposes to publish a volume of sermons by subscription, and several distinguished names already appear on the list of subscribers to the publication.—Birmingham Gazette.

Barnwell.—June 27th, a new church was consecrated at Barnwell, Cambridge, by the Lord Bishop of Ely. It is built in the Gothic style of the 16th century, of red brick mixed with stone. A collection was made during the reading of the offertory, and the large sum of 73*l*. 12*s*. was collected, including 10*l*. afterwards given to the incumbent by the Bishop.

Dorsetshire.—The foundation of a new church in the island of Portland, Weymouth, was laid on July the 1st. The ceremony was highly interesting and imposing. The Queen has given 300*l*. towards the building.—Salisbury Herald.

Gloucestershire.—In the Ecclesiastical Court at Gloucester, the churchwarden of Longley was condemned in costs for ringing the church bells in opposition to the wishes of the Rev. J. Daniel, rector; he obtained admission to the belfry by means of false keys.—Cambridge Chron.

Isle of Man.—On Wednesday, July 24, a meeting was convened in the Court House, Ramsey, for the purpose of forming a Diocesan Association for the furtherance of religion, in connexion with the Established Church. Among a highly respectable assemblage we observed on the platform the following clergymen and gentlemen connected with the island:—Wm. Farrant, Esq.; Vicar-General Corlett; the High Bailiff; Colonel Campbell; Captain Thompson, of Jurby; F. Lamothe, Esq.; T. Williamson, Esq.; J. C. Stephen, Esq.; Captain Anderson; Rev. A. Holmes; Rev. T. Howard; J. Mawby, Esq.; Rev. W. Carpenter; Rev. Messrs. Stephenson, Harrison, Nelson, Qualtrough, Armitage, Drury; Wm. Christian, Esq., Milntown; P. Gilgrest, Esq.; — Magnall, Esq.; J. Lamothe, Esq.; Rev. Messrs. Mainwaring and Robson; Major O'Brien; — Morrison, Esq., &c. On the motion of William Farrant, Esq., seconded by the Rev. A. Holmes, the Lord Bishop took the chair. His lordship then rose and entered into a long detail of the causes which led to the necessity of forming a Diocesan Association for the Isle of Man. It was instituted with a sole view to the moral and religious improvement of the island, and it appealed to our sympathies as fellow-countrymen and fellow-citizens, but above all as true and devoted believers in the doctrines of our most holy religion, for our most cordial support. The inhabitants of this happy island were celebrated for the aid they rendered to foreign missions, and he need only refer to the funds of the Bible Society, and the Church Missionary Society, at once as proofs of the truth of his statement. He heartily acknowledged the absolute necessity binding on all who called themselves Christians, of sending the glorious Gospel of the blessed God to the benighted heathen—he avowed that such a work devolved a deep responsibility on all, but still we must not be lukewarm at home; and, indeed, the spread of the Gospel abroad depended very much on its increasing success at home. We were met to enlarge the capabilities of the Church of our forefathers, and since population has increased with an astonishing and unprecedented rapidity, and the church-room has not increased in proportion, it was incumbent to take further steps in order to meet the wants of our fellow-creatures. Much had been done by the followers of John Wesley here. But this circumstance would frame no excuse for the want of exertion on our part, and notwithstanding all that has been done by all parties, the Gospel has not penetrated the towns and the more retired parts in such a manner as to preclude the most active and strenuous exertions on the part of the Church. It was necessary to form general rather than local Associations, because where the Gospel was most needed, there were the people the least inclined to promote it, and he wished the rich to come forward in charity towards the poor, and generally to unite in the blessed work. Those who feel the truth and love of the Gospel most, will be the most anxious to bear that truth and love into the hearts of all, and if we convert the people at home we need not fear for our success abroad, for every man who is converted at home is an additional soldier of the Cross, to promote the cause by his money, or his talents, or his person, in foreign parts. His lordship entered into a long statement of facts connected with the Church upon this Island, which facts he would rather understate than overrate. He alluded strongly to the low stipend of the respected minister at Ramsay, and hoped that all would unite to promote the publication of the word of life in other chapels, and sat down amid the unanimous applause of the company assembled, who seemed to be deeply impressed with the candour, the humility, and the benevolence of his lordship's conduct on this important and interesting occasion. The Meeting was afterwards addressed by several clergymen and gentlemen.—From the Manx Sun.

Consecration of Emmanuel Church, Bolton.—About two years since a subscription of 500*l*. was raised by the parishioners of Bolton-le-Moors, as a token of respect to the Rev. J. Slade, our worthy and highly-esteemed vicar, and that, instead of receiving it in the form of a service of plate, as originally intended, Mr. Slade requested that the money subscribed should be appropriated towards the erection of a church and school, the latter to be similar in principle to that recently erected near Trinity Church,—that is to say, a school in which the Bible will be taught and read. In addition to the munificent gift of Mr. Slade, 277*l*. 19*s*. 3*d*. was raised for the erection of the church, by private subscriptions. The amount of the endowment is 1,000*l*. We feel great pleasure in stating that James Scowcroft, Esq., who has never been found wanting in any thing which had a tendency to benefit his neighbours, and especially his poorer neighbours, furnished a plot of land, consisting of 3564 square yards, for the building of the church, and the laying out of a burial ground. Wednesday, the 26th of June, being appointed for the consecration of this church, the Lord Bishop of Chester, accompanied by his chaplain, was received at the door of the church by the Rev. Chancellor Raikes and F. Knyvett, Esq., registrar, the Rev. J. Slade, and a number of the clergy of the town and neighbourhood, the churchwardens, and trustees. After the consecration, the Bishop pleaded powerfully on behalf of the funds.

IRELAND.

THE PROPOSED DIVINITY COLLEGE, IN DUBLIN.—The Right Hon. Frederick Shaw and a deputation of the members of the House of Commons connected with Ireland, had an interview with Lord Morpeth on Monday, at the Irish-office, to present a protest from the Bishop and clergy of the united dioceses of Cork and Cloyne against the establishment of the Archbishop of Dublin's new Theological College in Dublin. The following were among the members present:—Mr. Shirley, Mr. Young (Cavan), Mr. Irving (Antrim), Colonel Thomas, Mr. Colquhoun, Sergeant Jackson, Colonel Perceval, Captain Jones, Mr. Blennerhassett, Mr. Emerson Tennent, Mr. Dunbar, &c. &c. Mr. Shaw regretted that from the very late period of the session his colleague (Mr. Leffroy), and other Irish Members, who were extremely anxious on the subject, had been prevented attending, and expressed, on behalf of himself, as senior Member for the University of Dublin, and the other gentlemen present, their warmest concurrence in the object of those protests which had been already received from the Primate and the heads of the Church in Ireland, against a scheme which they considered to militate against the interests of the University of Dublin, as detracting from its highest characteristic as a school of divinity for the clergy of the Established Church in Ireland, and he (Mr. Shaw) begged to read to his Lordship, as representative of the Irish Government, a protest against the plan, which had been intrusted to him (Mr. Shaw) by the Bishop and clergy of the united dioceses of Cork and Cloyne. The following is a copy of the protest:—

"We, the undersigned clergymen of the united dioceses of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, desire to express our solemn and strenuous protest against the establishment of any new College for the theological education of the clergy, without the deliberate sanction of the heads of our Church and of the clergy: and against any measure calculated to detract from the Protestant character of Trinity College, Dublin, or to impair its efficacy as a school of divinity. And we earnestly request the members of Parliament for the University of Dublin, and all other such members as have a regard for the integrity, purity, or permanence of the Protestant Church, to take this matter into their serious and attentive consideration."

[120 signatures, including that of the truly learned and pious bishop.]

Lord Morpeth received the deputation very courteously. His Lordship stated that the Archbishop of Dublin had applied for such a charter, and that the Government had seen no objection to the grant of it; but that they had since received such strong protests and remonstrances against it, that without committing themselves to any ultimate course, he could only say for the present, that the charter should not be granted by the Government until they had heard and considered all the objections which should be urged against it.

COLONIAL.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

THE friends of the SOCIETY will be rejoiced to hear that the Church in the colonies has been strengthened by the foundation of two new bishoprics; one for Upper Canada, at Toronto, and the other for Newfoundland and Bermuda.

On Sunday, Aug. 4, the Venerable John Strachan, D.D., Archdeacon of York, Upper Canada, and the Venerable Aubrey George Spencer, D.D., Archdeacon of Bermuda, were consecrated bishops of Toronto and Newfoundland respectively. The solemn ordinance of the Church was administered by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Bishops of London, Chichester, and Nova Scotia.

The new see of Newfoundland is perhaps the most spiritually destitute portion of the colonial Church. There are, indeed, 40 churches in the island, but only nine clergymen to serve them. Under these painful circumstances the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL has decided upon appointing four additional missionaries, and to allow to each a salary of 200*l.* a year, with 100*l.* for passage and outfit. The bishop has already selected two; and if any clergyman, who can produce testimonials of his qualifications for so arduous and responsible a duty, should be willing to offer himself for the service of the Church in Newfoundland, the SOCIETY would be ready to present him to the bishop, for his lordship's approval.

As the report of the Bishop of Montreal was published in the last number of the "Ecclesiastical Gazette," it is almost superfluous to add what a large accession of clergymen* is required in the new diocese of Toronto, which comprises the whole province of Upper Canada. The salary allowed by the SOCIETY to the stationary clergy in this province is 100*l.*, and to travelling missionaries 150*l.*; but in both cases something additional might be derived from local resources.

HOME REPORT.

The following grants have been made:—

For a school for Smith's and Devonshire parishes, Bermuda, 150*l.*

A stipend of 50*l.* per annum has been voted to the Rev. Mr. Disbrow, as assistant deacon to Rev. J. C. Cochran, of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia.

The SOCIETY at its last meeting resolved to grant a pension of 50*l.* a year to the widows of Indian missionaries as long as they remain unmarried.

The total amount of the collections under the Queen's letter up to the present time is 38,400*l.*

The donations and subscriptions received by the treasurer, from the 1st of January to the 30th of June, 1838, were 6,800*l.* During the same period of the present year they were 10,380*l.*

PAROCHIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

In the establishment of parochial associations the great object proposed is, to enrol every member of the Church in support of a SOCIETY whose aim and endeavour it is to publish the Gospel of Christ in all lands, but especially (as we are most bounden) in the colonies and dependencies of our own empire. So great a work can never be effected without a general and united effort. The aid, therefore, of all who would take part in it is earnestly solicited—the aid both of their labours and of their prayers.

There are in England about 1,600,000 families in communion with the Church. If each family gave on the average 2*s.* 6*d.* a year, (which is rather less than one halfpenny a week,) the amount contributed would be 200,000*l.* The rich may be reasonably called upon to give much more liberally of their abundance; but surely there is hardly a single Church family in the country that cannot afford to contribute, though it be of their poverty, one penny a week towards the propagation of the Gospel in foreign lands. The SOCIETY has recently published a very convenient "Collector's Book," to facilitate the work of those who kindly undertake to collect small sums weekly, monthly, or quarterly.

A meeting, very numerously attended, was held at Hitchin, on the 25th of July, at which the Bishop of Newfoundland stated, in forcible language, the destitution of the Colonial Church. Previous to the meeting Divine service was performed, and a sermon preached in aid of the funds of the SOCIETY by the Rev. Dr. Hook.

The following letter has been addressed to the Secretary, by the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia;—

"109, Piccadilly, August 3, 1839.

"My dear Sir,—You will be glad to hear that my late visit to Essex was very gratifying in every respect. I attended meetings on behalf of the SOCIETY for the Propagation of the Gospel, at Witham, Colchester, Chelmsford, Dunmow, Maldon, and Southend, and preached for the SOCIETY at Chelmsford, Leigh, and Raleigh. The collections were very encouraging, and are valuable earnestness of the feeling which we may hope is daily increasing among the members of the Church. The clergy have shown a warm desire to forward the objects of the SOCIETY, from the purest and most holy, and most constraining motives; and with a conviction that all which they are now attempting for the SOCIETY, will tend as much to the benefit of the church at home, as to the advantage of the church in the colonies. The steady and faithful feeling which is cherished binds all the members of the church in holy fellowship, and disposes all to desire the success of every object of the church at home, and to co-operate with heart and hand in promoting it.

"Numerous parochial associations will be formed—indeed, I hope there will be few parishes where they may not be found before the close of the year. The attempts which have already been made for this purpose, have been particularly successful. At the little fishing town of Leigh, where a large portion of the congregation were in their fishing dress, a most creditable collection was made. All were invited to attend a meeting in the school-room on the following Thursday evening, to form a parochial association. The room was filled, although a temperance meeting on the same evening occupied many. No less than eighty annual subscribers to our Society were enrolled upon that occasion, who engaged to pay from 1*s.* to 12*s.* every year, and ten collectors volunteered their assistance, in regularly receiving these contributions. Their exemplary pastor has declared his sanguine hope, that before the end of the year he shall have doubled the present number of subscribers. Indeed, wherever similar efforts are made with the same good judgment, we find similar success; and if the work be thus carried through the whole kingdom, the SOCIETY will soon be enabled to provide efficiently for the wants of the colonial church, and to do their humble part in carrying a knowledge of the salvation of God through every quarter of the globe. Who will refuse his little tribute to this great work? Who will refrain from praying to the Lord of all that His heavenly blessing may rest upon this labour of love—that His name may be glorified by the wide extension of His church, and the salvation of many souls among our distant countrymen, and among the heathen who surround them? With fervent desires for this holy consummation, I am, Rev. and dear Sir, very faithfully yours,

"JOHN NOVA SCOTIA."

STATISTICS OF THE COLONIAL CHURCH.

Extracts from the Letter of a Clergyman in Upper Canada.

"THE House of Assembly in the province of Upper Canada, in its last session, passed an Act authorizing the Clerks of the Peace or Clerks of the District to add to the assessment roll a separate column for the religious denominations; and the provisions of the Act require that this column shall be filled up by the assessor from personal inquiries when making the yearly population returns.

Some measure of this kind was necessary on account of the alleged numerical superiority of Dissenters over the Established Church, upon which ground, as well as upon the plea, that their ministers assume and receive the title of "Protestant clergy," and that the members of their communion have served the government in the conquest and defence of the province, claims have of late been made upon the Church property called Clergy Reserves.

In the course of the last three years I visited, in the discharge of missionary duty, the back townships in the Home, Gore, Niagara, Talbot, and part of the Newcastle and London districts. I had frequent opportunity of noticing the practical working of the system of provincial dissent, and from actual observation I am convinced, that though in the destitute townships, where the episcopalians have neither church nor clergymen, the advantage was obviously on the side of dissenters; yet it was equally obvious, that this advantage in the point of numbers was more than neutralized by the numerous divisions and subdivisions existing among them.

May I beg permission to remark that the assessor's report of religious denominations for the present and ensuing years ought to contain more than one column. The common division of the population into Church of England and Dissenters will not suffice in Canada; neither, so peculiar is the situation of that province, will it suffice to class the population under seven heads,—viz., Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Quaker, Roman Catholic, and Church of England; for all but the last-named denomination have subdivided, and are forming fresh schisms every day, and a large proportion of the population stand aloof and disclaim connexion with any which they have seen in the back woods.

Those seceders who retain to a certain extent, the peculiarities of the sect to which they last belonged, are, however, so decidedly opposed to it, and all the preceding seceders,—for reasons, doubtless, of sufficient importance,—that though claiming the same name or denomination they will not worship together, or, to use the popular language, hire the same preacher, and are, therefore, to be considered distinct and separate denominations.

An Englishman, not aware of this circumstance, upon finding it, states, in general terms, that so many of the inhabitants of Upper Canada were Presbyterians, and so many others were Methodists, would very naturally set down in his mind these numbers in favour of the Kirk of Scotland and the Wesleyans respectively, and so on of the other denominations, classifying them under the sects known in the mother country; and thus an impression will be received in this kingdom quite at variance with the known statistics of the colony.

To present any thing like a true statement of the various persuasions strict attention should be paid to the distinctions of each sect in the assessment roll, which I submit for your consideration, as follows:—

American or Episcopal Methodists; Primitive Methodists or Ranters; Canadian or Reformed Methodists; British Wesleyan or Union Methodists; Old Country or Loyal Methodists.

Orthodox Quakers; Hicksite or Unitarian Quakers; Davidites, or Children of Peace.

Irish Roman Catholics; French ditto.

American Presbyterians; Canadian ditto; Scotch Kirk ditto; Antiburghers or Secession Church.

Lutheran Dutch Reformed Menonists.

Independents.

Unitarians.

Universalists.

American Baptist; English Baptist; Close Communion Baptist; Open Communion Baptist; Free-will or Christian Baptist.

The unbaptized, they who do not belong to any of the above-named denominations.

Mormonites.

In the Church of England alone is unity to be found. Her members and ministers are men from every nation under heaven, of different habits, of different customs; yet they meet each other in their Father's house, and forget all past differences. With other denominations it is not so: though professing the same creed they are opposed to each other on national or political grounds; Methodist against Methodist, Presbyterian against Presbyterian, Baptist against Baptist, Quaker against Quaker, Irish Roman Catholic against French Roman Catholic; they will not walk with one another, nor talk with one another.

* "In Upper Canada I believe that employment would be found for 100 beyond the existing establishment."—Bishop of Montreal's Report to Lord Durham.

But "Peace be within thy walls, O Jerusalem!" Yes; for within them assemble the English, Irish, and Scotch; American, Canadian, and French; the German and Swede. All use the same prayers; all hear the same holy word; they eat of the same bread, drink of the same cup, are baptized with the same baptism, and, it may be hoped, have one God and Father of all, above all, in all, and through all."

The following statements are borrowed from a very interesting and ably-conducted paper, called "The Church," published weekly at Cobourgh, Upper Canada.

Statement of the population of the Bathurst district, with the numbers of the religious classes into which it is divided. It is to be recollected that, next to the county of Glengarry, the largest settlements of Presbyterians are to be found in the district of Bathurst.

Church of England, 8,239; Presbyterians, including Church of Scotland, United Synod, Seceders, &c., 8,660; Roman Catholics, 5,414; Methodists, Wesleyan and Episcopal, 1,745; Baptists, 255; Quakers, 22; Mormons, 66; Unitarians, 45; Universalists, 10; Irvingites, 42.—Total, 24,497.

Religious Statistics of the Newcastle District.

Church of England, 10,734; Presbyterians, Kirk of Scotland, Seceders, &c., 9,021; Methodists, Wesleyan, Episcopal, &c., 6,619; Roman Catholics, 4,562; Baptists, 1,471; Quakers, 595; Christians, 564; Bible Christians, 270; Universalists, 190; Independents, 91; Mormons, 70; Free Thinkers, 49; Disciples, 21; Society of Peace, 9; Reformers, 9; Latitudinarians, 6; Restorationists, 1; No Religious Persuasion, 1,918.—Total, 36,206.

N.B. There are four townships, viz., Fenelon, Harvey, Verulam, and Alnwick, the population of which is small, from whence no returns have been received. In the three former, however, it is well known that a large majority are members of the Church of England. About 200 inhabitants of the township of Emily, their religious persuasions not being known, are also not included in the above return.

Census of the Johnstown and Eastern Districts. In the latter is contained the populous county of Glengarry, which is inhabited almost exclusively by emigrants from the Highlands of Scotland.

FOREIGN.

The Archbishop of Dublin has just passed through Brussels on his return from Germany to England. Being solicited by the members of the English church residing at Brussels to confirm the younger members of their congregation, that ceremony took place on Saturday, in the chapel in the Rue du Musée. The Rev. E. Jenkins and the Rev. W. Drury attended the Archbishop. On Sunday morning his Grace preached in St. George's church, Rue de la Orangerie, and in the afternoon in the chapel in the Rue du Musée.—Brussels Paper.

The Cathedral of Bruges almost destroyed by Fire.—We write these lines with feelings of profound sorrow. Our beautiful cathedral is in flames; the roof and the steeple have already fallen. The firemen and the troops are on the spot. The furious wind that is raging makes us fear for the surrounding buildings. A cuirassier was killed by falling from the roof of a neighbouring house. It is affirmed that the misfortune is owing to the carelessness of the plumbers who were at work in the church.—Journal de Bruges.

A letter from Bruges of the 23d says,—"We hear that our Archbishop will soon publish a pastoral letter to recommend his unfortunate cathedral to the generosity of the faithful and of all friends of the arts. The expense of repairing the cathedral will be enormous. The slates alone will cost 90,000 francs."

Brussels, July 19.—A letter from Arlon has the following passage:—"The day before yesterday (the 15th of July) the church of the Capuchins in this town was struck by lightning. The three priests who were standing at the altar, were thrown down. The rector was taken up lifeless, as well as the choristers who attended. Many other persons had their feet burnt. The electric fluid then passed into an adjoining hospital, where some of the patients were more or less severely injured. One was killed."

PAPAL BULLS AND INDULGENCES.—We give the following extracts, translated from a Maltese paper, from a bull circulated at Malta during the present year. It is intitled, "Bolla della S. S. Crociata concessa dalla Santità del N. S. P. Gregorio XVI. per l'anno mille ottocento trentotto."

After having conceded to the purchasers of this indulgence the permission, "with the consent of their spiritual or bodily physician," to eat meat in Lent or on fast days, and to "make free use of eggs and butter," it goes on to say,—

"Moreover his holiness concedes to all the aforesaid persons the power of choosing for confessor any priest, whether secular or regular, out of those approved by the ordinary: which confessor may absolve the said persons, one time during life and another time at the point of death, from all sin and censure, having first imposed a salutary penitence corresponding to the fault: and, in case it may be necessary that some satisfaction should follow the fault, they may do it either by their own persons, or by their heirs, or by others. The said confessor shall also be able to commute any vow whatever, even when made with an oath, causing the penitent to give whatever alms he pleases for the benefit of the santissima crociata."

The form of absolution is as follows:—By the authority of Almighty God, and of the apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, and of our Lord Gregory the XVIth, specially conceded to thee and committed to me, I absolve thee from all thy sins, misdeeds, and excesses, which thou hast now confessed, and also from those which thou wouldst have confessed had they occurred to thy recollection: and I also concede to thee plenary indulgence and ample remission of all thy sins which now or at any time thou mayest have confessed, forgotten, or been ignorant of; and from the pain which thou wouldst have been obliged to suffer for them in purgatory!!

To guard ourselves from any charge of misrepresentation, we give the extracts in the original Italian.

MDCCCXXXIX.

Bolla della S. S. Crociata concessa dalla Santità del N. S. P. Gregorio XVI. per l'anno mille ottocento trentotto.

"Concede S. S. à tutte le persone che pigliano questa Bolla di poter con il consenso del loro medico spirituale o corporale mangiare carne in tempo di Quaresima e negli altri giorni di vigilia, e che anche possano liberamente à lor arbitrio usar uovi e latticini."

"Di più concede S. S. à tutti li sopradetti il potersi eleggere per Confessore qualsivisia Prete secol. o regol. dagli approvati dell' Ordinario, il quale possa assolverli una volta in vita ed un'altra in punto di morte da ogni peccato e censura, imposta prima una penitenza salutare corrispondente alle colpe; ed, in caso che sia necessaria qua che soddisfazione per conseguire la assoluzione suddetta, possano farla, o colle sue persone proprie, o essendovi impedimento, coi suoi eredi, o con altri. Potrà ancora il detto Confessore commutare qualunque voto, benchè fatto con giuramento, facendo dar di limosina al penitente, quel che gli piace, in beneficio della S. S. Crociata."

"Forma della Assoluzione, che, una volta in vita, e un'altra in punto di morte, si può usare, in virtù di questa Bolla, sopra, qualsivoglia persona che la pigliasse."

"Per l'autorità da Dio Onnipotente, e dei S. S. Ap. Pietro e Paolo, e da N. S. Gregorio XVI. à te specialmente concessa ed a me commessa, io ti assolve da tutti i tuoi peccati, misfatti, ed eccessi, che ora hai confessato, ed anche da quelli che confesseresti se ti occorressero alla memoria, e ti concedo indulgenza plenaria ed ampia remissione di tutt' i tuoi peccati di presente, ed in qualsivoglia tempo confessati, dimenticati, o ignorati, e della pena che per essi saresti obbligato à patire nel Purgatorio."

The Clergy are respectfully invited to an inspection of these instruments, which will be found the best and cheapest of the kind yet manufactured. The main defects in the old instruments are, the uncertainty of the keys passing correctly over the pins arising from the brass bolt-work, which, however well manufactured, soon becomes rickety and imperfect in its action; the unavoidable damage to the cogged heads of the barrels in passing them under the brass worm every time they are changed (from these causes alone the hobbling performance of the tune, so frequent in the ordinary barrel-organ, arises), the liability of damage to the pins on a barrel when changed; the noise occasioned by bolt-work at every change of tune, and the inconvenience and, in some instances, the impossibility of changing the barrels during divine service, in which case the range of tunes under command is so limited that, with the greatest care in the selection and distribution of the various metres to be set on the barrels, a change of them is almost always necessary in each service; for instance, in many churches it is the custom to commence with the Morning Hymn, and when this is the case, the barrels must be frequently changed, or none but the limited collection of tunes on one barrel will ever be heard during the service.

JOHN GRAY & SON have by their invention removed all these defects so long complained of in the ordinary barrel-organs, and the truth of which every possessor of one will readily acknowledge. The annexed section will best explain the improvements.

The spindle of the iron frame D, being cut with an endless screw, a single revolution of it changes the tune on each barrel from the first to the second, and so on in succession, to the whole extent of them (thirty in number), a contrary revolution will, of course, produce a return to the first or any intermediate tune that may be desired, its number being ascertained by reference to an index on each barrel. No bolt-work whatever is necessary: and every change either of tune or barrel, is effected with perfect silence and the greatest ease. Upon raising the worm A, it is immediately arrested by a self-acting sling, and there held until relieved by the finger of the barrel-turner after he has changed the tune or barrel, and at no time does any necessity arise for touching any part of the barrels with the hand: the possibility of damage to the pins (unless wilfully done) is therefore wholly removed.

Uniformity of plan enables JOHN GRAY & SON to supply these instruments at even less cost than the ordinary barrel-organ, the whole of the mechanism being comprised in one package, and may be set up without the assistance of an organ builder, a matter of no little consideration when required at a distance from the Metropolis. The instrument is wholly independent of an external case, which may, if preferred, be made in the country.

The same unerring principle is applied to an organ of a higher class, for both Finger and Barrels.

CROWN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 33, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON.

AT A SECOND SEPTENNIAL GENERAL COURT OF PROPRIETORS, held at this Office, on the 24th of May, 1839, GEORGE HENRY HOOPER, Esq., Chairman,

A Division of Profits for the Seven Years ending the 25th of March, 1839, was announced, and BONUSES, amounting from upwards of £1. to upwards of £3. per Cent. per annum, on the Sums assured, varying with the Age, being equivalent, on the average, to 33 per Cent. on the Premiums paid during the Septennial period, were assigned to all Policies for the whole continuance of Life effected previously to the 16th of May, 1839.

N. B. At the First Septennial appropriation of Profits, which took place in May, 1832, the BONUSES to the Policy-Holders ranged from 18*s.* to 2*l.* 12*s.* per Cent. per Annum on the Sums assured, and exceeded 26 per Cent. on the Premiums paid.

Prospectuses of the Plan and Terms of the Company may be had at the Office or of the Agents, and every practicable facility is afforded to Persons desirous of effecting Policies.

T. G. CONYERS, Secretary.

A LADY of the Church of England, who conducted many years an establishment for Young Ladies, is desirous of obtaining a situation as Governess, where she could either take charge of a young family or superintend the studies of older pupils. She has a competent knowledge of the English, French, and Italian languages, and could also teach the Elements of Music and Drawing, though not without the aid of Masters, if great proficiency should be required. Satisfactory references can be given to several Clergymen, as well as to the Parents and Guardians of her former pupils.

Letters (post paid) addressed to M. F., at Messrs. Hatchard and Son, 187, Piccadilly, will be immediately attended to.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL,

PORTUGAL-STREET, LINCOLN'S INN.

PATRON.—HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

IN Establishing a School of Medicine and Surgery in KING'S COLLEGE, the Council have been influenced by the belief that many individuals who intend their sons for the Medical Profession, will gladly embrace an opportunity of placing them in connexion with an institution which has for its principal object to educate the rising generation in the doctrines of Christianity, as taught by the Established Church, and to fix in their minds the true principles of morality.

They believe, likewise, that every one who has the welfare of society at heart, and who has considered the most effectual means of promoting it, will feel an especial interest in the success of this part of their undertaking, under the conviction that the duties which devolve upon the Medical Profession are such as to render the religious and moral character of its members not less important than their practical and scientific attainments.

To render the system of Medical Education pursued in the College perfect, the connexion of a Hospital with it is absolutely indispensable.

Hitherto much inconvenience has resulted to the Pupils, and detriment to the College, from the want of a Hospital in the immediate vicinity of, and closely connected with, the College, in which the Students might receive practical instruction from their own Professors.

By the establishment of the proposed Hospital, however, the Medical Students will no longer be required to seek, at other places, that practical instruction which forms the essential part of a complete professional education; they will, on the contrary, be enabled to continue and complete their education at King's College, and they will thus, during the whole period of their residence in town, be placed within the immediate influence of religious instruction and good example.

An additional and a not less strong recommendation of King's College Hospital to the support of a charitable public, arises from the fact, that it is calculated to supply a want which has long been greatly felt by the extremely numerous poor population of a district which is at a considerable distance from the already overburdened institutions of the same class.

The Council of King's College therefore earnestly entreat the Public and the Friends of the College to come forward liberally, and to enable them speedily to carry into effect this benevolent and useful design: benevolent, as it is calculated to relieve the wants of the sick poor of a densely-populated district of the metropolis; and useful to the public at large, as affording the means of effectually extending, to a large number of Medical Students annually, the moral and religious advantages which a King's College education affords.

Donations and Annual Subscriptions will be received by Mr. Alderman Copeland, M.P., Treasurer; by the Rev. J. Lonsdale, B.D., Principal; by Dr. Todd, Hon. Sec., at the Secretary's Office in the College; and by the principal Bankers in London.

N. B. A Donation of Thirty Guineas, or an Annual Subscription of Three Guineas, constitutes a Governor, with the privilege of a Vote and of recommending Patients.

TWO LADIES, daughters of an Orthodox Clergyman, holding a small Benefice, are desirous of engaging themselves as Governesses in the Families of Clergymen or Gentlemen. They are competent to give instruction in English, French, Italian, Music, Spanish, to which one could add Singing, and Drawing elementarily.

Terms not less than 35s., and 40s. at first. Address, post paid, to M. A., Ecclesiastical Gazette Office, 14, Southampton-street, Strand, London.

GREAT ADVANTAGES OFFERED by the UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 8, WATERLOO-PLACE, Pall-Mall, and 2, CHARLOTTE-ROW, Mansion-House, London.—This Company, established by Act of Parliament, affords the most perfect security from an ample capital, and only requires, when an insurance is for the whole period of life, one half of the very moderate premiums to be paid for the first five years after the date of the policy; the other half may remain, subject to the payment of interest at five per cent. annually, to be deducted at death, or may previously be paid off at convenience.

It obviously becomes easy for a person of very moderate income to secure by this arrangement a provision for his family; and should he at any time after effecting the insurance succeed to, or acquire, a fortune, he may relinquish his policy, having only paid one-half the premiums for the first five years, instead of the whole, as in all other Companies.

Thus a man of 25 years old may, by an annual payment of 28s. 16s. 3d. for the first five years, and afterwards by paying yearly the full premium of 57l. 12s. 6d. secure to his widow and children at his death payment of no less than 3,000l. subject only to the deduction of 144l. 1s. 3d. with interest, being the amount of premium unpaid.

This Company holds out, in various other respects, great inducements to the public. When such facilities are afforded it is clearly a moral duty in every parent who is not possessed of a fortune, but of an income, however moderate, to insure his life for a sum which may yield a comfortable provision for his family.

ARCHDEACON CAMBRIDGE, Rev. ARCHDEACON HALE, Rev. HENRY HANDLEY NORRIS, HENRY SYKES THORNTON, Esq., Rev. SAMUEL CHARLES WILKS.

A Report from His Grace the LORD PRIMATE, was read to the Meeting (for which see p. 25), and the following Resolutions were unanimously passed:—

It appearing that after the payment of all expenses, there will be a balance remaining in the Treasurer's hands of between 13,000l. and 14,000l.

Resolved,—That such Balance, when the Accounts shall have been audited, be applied to the formation of a Fund for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of the Poorer Irish Clergy; regard being had in the first instance to the Families of those Clergymen, whose straitened circumstances at the time of their decease, was occasioned by the withholding of their lawful dues. The Rules and Regulations for the Management and Distribution of such Fund to be framed by the Bishops of the Church in Ireland, with the concurrence of His Grace the Primate.

Resolved,—That the Treasurer be authorized after the payment of all expenses, to act according to the instructions of His Grace the Archbishop of Armagh, with respect to the transfer of the balance, in order to its being appropriated to the Fund above mentioned.

Resolved,—That the respectful thanks of the Meeting be offered to His Grace the Archbishop of Armagh, for his great kindness in having undertaken the task of distributing the Fund, for the able and impartial manner in which he has discharged that duty, and for the accurate and satisfactory Accounts with which he has from time to time furnished the Committee.

Resolved,—That Lord Bexley, Rev. Archdeacon Cambridge, and Rev. H. H. Norris be requested to audit the Treasurer's Accounts.

Head Master.—Rev. G. A. BUTTERTON, B.D., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

Second Master.—Rev. W. TURNER, M.A., St. John's College, Cambridge.

The Terms for Board and Tuition vary, according to age, from 45*l.* to 50*l.* per annum. Entrance, 5*l.*

EXHIBITIONS.

THE SCHOOL is now endowed with Ten Exhibitions, of 40*l.* per annum each, for Students at any College in either of the English Universities. The only qualification required for candidates is, that they shall have been educated at Uppingham School for the last two years previous to the election. This number is likely to be increased to twelve in a short time; so arranged that there will be three vacant every year. There are also Sixteen Exhibitions at St. John's, Clare Hall, Emmanuel, and Sidney Sussex Colleges, Cambridge, varying from 16*l.* to 24*l.* per annum; to which scholars from Uppingham and Oakham schools have the preference.

TO THE CLERGY AND OTHER FRIENDS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTRUCTION.

THE Parish of St. John the Baptist, the largest within the City of Gloucester, with an increasing population of 3,000 and upwards, is destitute of Sunday School Rooms. Yet it was the Rector of this Parish, the Rev. Thomas Stock, who in the year 1780 projected, and in conjunction with his friend Robert Kaikes, Esq., established the First Sunday School in this Kingdom. The Parishioners consist, in a great proportion, of small house-holders, and the living itself is under 130*l.* per Annum, and no glebe-house. The present Rector being wholly unable from his own resources, or those of his Parish, to raise the requisite funds, is constrained to appeal thus publicly to the liberality of the friends of sound and scriptural education. He is persuaded that they will not be inaccessible to the wants of a Parish, which may justly claim the distinction of having originated the whole system of Sunday School teaching.

In aid of this object, a Rev. Incumbent residing at Salisbury, and connected with the Cathedral, has happily suggested a plan, the principle of which was immediately acted upon in his own Parish, and has already been adopted in various other places, viz., that a General Subscription be set on foot, to which each Child in every Sunday School in the Kingdom be invited to contribute ONE PENNY. This proposal is now respectfully and anxiously submitted to the favourable consideration of every Incumbent and officiating Minister throughout the Country: who are hereby earnestly intreated to bring the case of the above-mentioned Parish before such of their young people, as are now sharing in the blessings of Sunday School Instruction. By this simple free-will offering, an ample fund would be raised, and the Sunday School Rooms of St. John's Parish would exhibit, to future generations, "an interesting and singular memorial of the gratitude of Children, their nurture and admonition in the Lord."

Contributions have already been received, or promised from the following Parochial Schools:—

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. Hodgson, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

* * * Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c. Members are secured from personal liability by the special provisions of an Act of Parliament.

Attention has been gradually awakened amongst all orders of the Clergy, to the important uses of this SOCIETY, and the business of it has very considerably increased within the last year, and is increasing every week. If it should be found, as by many it is supposed it will be, that life is of longer duration on an average amongst the Clergy than amongst the community at large, Profits upon Life Assurance in this SOCIETY will result in a corresponding ratio. The whole of these Profits will be returned. A Life Assurance Policy is entitled to its full share of profit from the day of its date. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £60 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below; and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

In reference to a passage in a Clergyman's statement, given in our last number, respecting the service at his church, in the afternoon, "when the children of the congregation were catechized, and a short catechetical exposition given after the second lesson as required by the rubrick," a "COUNTRY CURATE" requests us to point out the place where he may find authority for this practice. The first rubrick after the Catechism is as follows: "The Curate of every parish shall diligently, upon Sundays and Holy-days, after the second lesson at evening prayer, openly in the church instruct and examine so many children of his parish sent unto him, as he shall think convenient in some part of this Catechism."

Nicholls, on the Common Prayer, in his note on this rubrick, speaks of "the Catechism being performed in the midst of Divine Service, that the elder persons, as well as the younger, might receive benefit by the minister's expositions, &c."

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

SEPTEMBER, 1839.

SINCE the appearance of our last number, the Rev. T. B. Murray's "Account of the Origin, Objects, and General Proceedings of the Society" has been published. Agreeably to our promise, we resume our extracts from this work:—

"The gratuitous supply, and cheap distribution of books and tracts, have, from the commencement of the Society, formed an important branch of its designs.

"The Society has two catalogues; namely, "The Permanent Catalogue;" consisting of Bibles, New Testaments, Common Prayer Books, the Homilies; and religious Books and Tracts.

"The Supplemental Catalogue;" containing books which combine amusement with instruction.

"The number of applications to the Society for School-books has of late years vastly increased. One cause of this increase may be found in the measures which have recently been taken for the erection of new churches throughout the kingdom, and especially in the metropolis; a school, in most instances, following the establishment of a new church, thus tending to promote the ends of pastoral care, and carry into effect the parochial system of instruction.

"The sum expended by the Society in the course of each year for books for the use of SCHOOLS, is very considerable; and the channels of circulation which have been opened by means of LENDING LIBRARIES, and the CHARITABLE DISTRIBUTION of Books by the Clergy, also occasion large items in the amount of expenditure.

"The Society, in numerous instances, continues to furnish Clergymen with the means of affording religious instruction and consolation to their poor parishioners, by enabling them to distribute gratuitously Bibles, Common Prayer Books, and other publications on its catalogue.

"It forms part of the proceedings of each monthly meeting to assign this species of aid to parishes in which a need of it appears, on investigation, to exist; and the grateful terms in which the Society's bounty is generally acknowledged, testify the importance of the benefit thus conferred.

"PAROCHIAL LENDING LIBRARIES, the rules for the formation and management of which will be found in the Annual Report, are furnished with books at the reduced prices, wholly, or sometimes partly, at the cost of the party applying. In the case of necessitous parishes, gratuitous aid is frequently granted, in proportion to the population; other circumstances being also taken into account. The general establishment of these libraries first took place in 1821. The Society had, however, very early adopted the plan.

"In the year 1699, a sum was voted towards Lending Libraries in the Leeward Islands. In 1707, the Society proceeded to establish libraries in Wales; the first having been at Carmarthen. It supplied books for the same object to Calcutta and Madras.

"For the encouragement of SCHOOL LENDING LIBRARIES, the Board resolved in June, 1832, that a grant of books, from the Permanent Catalogue, to an amount not exceeding five pounds at the cost price, should be made to any school in union with the National Society, applying for the same, provided that books to an equal or greater amount should be added to them at the expense of the applicant, from the Permanent or Supplemental Catalogue.

"Applications are from time to time made for the formation of School Libraries in accordance with the resolution to that effect. When it is considered how much religious instruction may be communicated, and how much good done, not only to the children, but to their parents, by the books being carried home, and read in families, it seems desirable that the opportunity should be more extensively embraced than it is.

"It is necessary in this, as in the former cases, that application should be made by a Member of the Society; and that each application should be accompanied by a list of such books as are judged requisite for the purpose intended.

"Any Member of the Society is at liberty to apply for books, at non-members' prices, for any purpose: he is also entitled to apply for books at the reduced prices, for his own distribution, or for the use of schools with which he is locally or parochially connected, a most important advantage to the poor, as the books issued at reduced (or members') prices by the Society are supplied at a rate below their real cost.

"At a very early period the Society directed its attention to Hospitals, Workhouses, Almshouses, and Prisons, to which, according to their several wants, it has furnished vast supplies of Bibles, New Testaments, Common Prayer Books, and Tracts. It appears, by the minutes of July 25, 1703, that, in addition to twenty-four destitute families being relieved by the Society on that day, three poor prisoners for debt were released, and books given to all those who were relieved.

"In the year 1837, soon after the introduction of the new poor law, many applications were made to the Society, by the guardians and chaplains of unions, for advice and assistance as to the means of supplying religious and instructive reading to the inmates of these establishments. The Board accordingly resolved, in July, 1837, to furnish unions and other poor-houses with Bibles and Common Prayer Books at 10 per cent. less than the present cost price; and with Books and Tracts from the Permanent Catalogue at 25 per cent. less than that price. The union prices extend to hospitals, prisons, &c., and to charitable institutions for which application may be made. The Society does not deem it right to make gratuitous grants in cases in which a supply may reasonably be expected from parochial or public sources, nor to furnish books, in such instances, at members' prices.

"The Society, wishing to aid and encourage the efforts which are now making by individuals in this country for the erection of new churches, agreed to provide each church, which should be built out of the Metropolis Churches' Fund, or at private cost, in different parts of the country, with a large Bible and Common Prayer Book for the reading desk, a book for the clerk's desk, and suitable books for the Communion Table. Many new churches and chapels have been benefitted by this arrangement. Quarto Bibles and Common Prayer Books have also been in several instances granted for the performance of divine service in school-rooms duly licensed by the bishops.

"Although only a short time has elapsed since this resolution first took effect (Oct. 1838), a considerable number of applications in pursuance of it have been made and acceded to. No fewer than eighty sets of books for the performance of Divine service have been granted. A list of the several places will be inserted in the Annual Report. The members of the Society are satisfied that a portion of its means is in this manner very usefully bestowed. They believe the object for which the Metropolis Churches' Fund, and funds for new churches generally, have been raised, to be the cause of true Religion; and they humbly hope that the same good Providence under which the work was commenced, and has hitherto been carried on, will raise up friends for its support, and furnish more ample means for its execution; convinced that in no way can those, to whom the power is given, engage in a service more acceptable to God, through Jesus Christ, or more conducive to the present and eternal interests of their fellow-men*.

"One of the most important features in the history of the Society, is the care which it has constantly shown for the spiritual necessities of the army and navy,—a large and important portion of the community, whose religious interests had, for a long series of years, been too much neglected. The early minutes of the Society afford a pleasing evidence of its zeal in supplying this want; copies of the Holy Scriptures, and various religious books, suited to the particular profession, having been from time to time gratuitously granted to each service. The liberality of the Society, which first afforded this species of aid in 1701, was met, many years afterwards, by a corresponding feeling on the part of King George I., who directed, that the cost of several works thus distributed, particularly the 'Soldier's Monitor,' and the 'Seaman's Monitor,' amounting to about 500*l.*, should be paid out of His Majesty's treasury. For several years during the late war, the government allowed 1,500*l.* per annum for books supplied by the Society for the use of the naval service, at certain reduced prices. Since the year 1825, the Society has furnished Bibles and Common Prayer Books for the use of the army at cost prices, on the application of the Chaplain General. In 1827 a similar arrangement was made for the navy, at the instance of His late Majesty King William IV., then Lord High Admiral.

"A noble and disinterested act of charity, performed by the late Archdeacon Owen, Chaplain General of the army, in behalf of the soldiery of the united kingdom, deserves to be stated here. Concealing his name under the title of 'Clericus,' he devoted, during his life, the sum of 5,743*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.*, 3 per cent. Reduced Annuities, for the supply of the land forces with Books of Common Prayer; and at his death, in 1823, bequeathed to the Society 3,000*l.* towards the promotion of its objects.

"The fund of 'Clericus' has proved most beneficial both at home and in the colonies; sums having been frequently drawn from it, not for Prayer Books only, but for the purpose of providing books for regimental schools, and forming Regimental Lending Libraries. The latter, it is found, give the troops a quiet and wholesome resource in leisure hours, and, in many instances, keep them from the public houses, and bad company out of doors. Among numerous grants of books for military libraries, one voted for the use of the non-commissioned officers and gunners of the Royal Artillery at Woolwich, is stated to have been eminently serviceable.

"An officer in command of the recruits of a regiment stationed near London, wrote as follows respecting a library of this kind, to which the Board had supplied a grant of books, on his application, he being a member of the Society:—

"It has had the effect of inducing the recruits to consider the barracks their home, instead of resorting to the public-house. It is here that the habits of the soldier are, in a great measure, formed; this is his military infancy; and if during that period he can be brought to prefer the reading-room to the public-house, it will be not only the greatest worldly advantage, but may, by the blessing of God, be the means of preparing him to become a soldier of the cross of Christ."

"In 1835 the Board granted books to the amount of 300*l.* in aid of a fund for establishing libraries for the use of men employed at the different stations of the Coast Guard; the persons thus assisted, including their wives and families, being in number upwards of 21,000. The spiritual instruction of classes thus situated is a matter of national interest; and the plan of supplying them with wholesome reading at once received the sanction and encouragement of the Society.

"In 1838, at the instance of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs, a considerable grant of books was made for the use of the tide-waiters at Gravesend, &c. Grants have also been voted for boatmen and bargemen who work on rivers and canals; special appeals having been made in favour of those employed in the district of Worcester, and for a large body of men on the Mersey and Irwell navigation. In many instances, the poor men engaged in this labour have only recently been permitted by their employers to enjoy the rest of the Sabbath; and now, by means of religious instruction, and the active benevolence of those who feel an interest in their condition, they have been taught to value the blessing of the Lord's day, and to use it in a becoming manner. The thanks of one of these worthy applicants, after the receipt of the books, were thus expressed:—

"Really, the Christian bounty of the Society towards the important object which I ventured to commend to its pious regard, has quite overpowered me; and rendered me unable, in any adequate manner, to express the emotions of gratitude excited in my heart, and the increased attachment that I affectionately feel towards the oldest and most excellent auxiliary of our beloved and venerated Church."

"A large number of fishermen at Brixham, Devon, and in other parts of the country, have also been assisted with ample supplies of books. Much time which would otherwise be lost, or badly employed, is, in this way, it is hoped, profitably filled up by these poor men.

"In the year 1813 was published the Society's 'Family Bible,' in 3 vols. 4to. with Notes, selected by the Rev. Dr. D'Oyly, and the Rev. Dr. Mant, now Bishop of Down and Connor. The circulation of this work has been very extensive. The copies which remained unsold being few, and those chiefly in the hands of the Society, it has been determined to print the work, at a lower price, in 3 vols. 8vo. The volume containing the New Testament has already been published by the Society; and the Old Testament is now nearly ready for circulation. It has also been thought desirable to issue impressions of the plates of the 'Family Bible,' separately, at a moderate cost, for the purposes of rewards in schools, and for other educational objects.

"In the year 1819 the Society, viewing with much concern and dismay the efforts which the enemies of Christianity were making in disseminating the poison of Infidelity, considered it right to call into action all the means in its power to arrest the evil and to counteract the effects which had been already produced. For this purpose a special committee was appointed, with instructions not only to publish in a more popular form, and at a diminished charge, suitable tracts then on the Society's catalogue, but to provide such other works as might be deemed necessary. Very large impressions of several of the Society's publications were accordingly printed, and above thirty new tracts added. Active measures were adopted for circulating these; and, in less than a twelvemonth, nearly a million copies of books and tracts against infidelity and blasphemy were printed and distributed. To meet the heavy expense thus incurred, the Society made an appeal to the public for this especial purpose, which was promptly answered. The sum of 7,000*l.* was obtained, through the zeal of District Committees, the munificence of various corporate bodies, and the liberality of individuals; and the Society is satisfied that the measures then pursued were productive of much good.

"The years 1830 and 1831 were remarkable for the boldness and malignity of the assaults made upon our faith by the enemies of the truth. The infidel press teemed with the bitterest invectives against religion and the ministers of Christ. Publications of the most pernicious kind, full of blasphemy and ribaldry, were circulated with unceasing activity. Lectures were publicly delivered in the metropolis and at the large manufacturing towns, in which atheistical principles were openly promulgated. In this state of things, the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE felt itself called upon again to put forth its exertions for the maintenance of our holy religion in the land. A special committee was accordingly appointed, and a plan pursued, similar to that adopted in the year 1819. The Society placed at the disposal of the committee 1,000*l.* The whole fund raised for the purpose amounted to 2,352*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* Many of the tracts previously adopted were reprinted, and dispersed, and twenty-nine new tracts were added to the list. This list is inserted in the Society's Annual Report.

"The enemies of the Gospel have in many quarters renewed with so much activity their dreadful warfare against all which is sacred and good, that it has recently been found necessary to appoint a sub-committee, charged 'specially to consider the best means which may be devised for the counteraction of the anti-Christian and immoral principles that are at present obtruded on the young and inexperienced, in our populous towns, and throughout the country.'

On the breaking out of the cholera in 1832, and the appointment of a general fast in consequence, the Society entered into a contract with the King's printer, and was enabled to supply about two hundred thousand copies of the appointed form of prayer at an extremely low price. Many thousands of copies were circulated gratuitously.

"During the prevalence of the disease, dreadful ravages were made by it in the mining districts of Staffordshire. The impression which it created among all classes was evinced in a marked improvement, and in their attention to the duties of religion. The churches were crowded, and the public houses comparatively deserted. That the clergy might improve so favourable an opportunity, the South Stafford district committee applied to the Society for assistance. The application was readily acceded to; and a gratuitous grant was made of five hundred New Testaments, five hundred Common Prayer Books, and five hundred copies of Bishop Patrick's 'Persuasive to a Cheerful Trust in God,' for distribution in Bilston, Sedgley, and other parishes of the district. These books were sought after with great eagerness; and there is reason to believe that they contributed, in many instances, to render permanent the good resolutions and religious impressions made in the day of affliction.

"On the cessation of that awful visitation throughout the country, a day of public thanksgiving was set apart in acknowledgment of the Divine mercy; and the Society endeavoured to contribute to the wholesome effect of this solemn-nity also, by circulating, at a very small price, the form of thanksgiving set forth by authority.

"In the year 1834 the appointment of a 'Tract Committee' first took place, to whom the office of procuring and recommending additional publications for the Permanent Catalogue was transferred from the Standing Committee. Five of the bishops were nominated by his Grace the president to be a council of reference on the subject of books and tracts.

"With regard to the admission of books and tracts, which, at the first constitution of the committee, and until the year 1838, was determined by the ballot of members attending each Monthly Board, a new arrangement has been agreed to. A Tract Committee, consisting of seven members of the Society, appointed annually, are now empowered to place upon the catalogue any books or tracts which shall have been approved by them, and shall afterwards have received the sanction of the episcopal referees.

"In addition to smaller tracts, the committee have recently directed reprints to be made of standard religious publications, not intended solely for the use of the poor, but of other classes also. Portions of the works of Thomas Becon, Dr. Christopher Sutton, Bishop Patrick, Bishop Beveridge, Dr. Barrow, &c., have already been placed on the list.

"In the year 1817, in consequence of the increased appetite for reading which prevailed among the great body of the people, and with a view to the augmentation of Lending Libraries, it appeared to the Board, that the operations of the Society should be extended to such branches of literature as might be considered useful, whether directly or indirectly, for promoting the Society's designs. Accordingly, in that year, steps were taken for the formation of a Supplemental Catalogue, consisting chiefly of books combining amusement with instruction; it being provided that no part of the Society's funds should be employed in the publication and circulation of the works on that particular catalogue.

"In the Spring of 1832 the attention of the Society was called to the demand which existed for books of a generally instructive kind, and to the growing influence of the press, evinced in the large and rapid supply of popular works, and especially of cheap weekly publications, the low price and attractive appearance of which recommended them to a numerous body of readers. But the tendency of this popular literature appeared so injurious, evil opinions being inculcated in some portions of it, and knowledge studiously separated from religion in others, that the Society determined to adopt measures for issuing works of a general kind upon better principles, in a manner which should be likely to secure an extensive circulation. For this purpose the 'Committee of General Literature and Education' was appointed. The Society gave its sanction to this object, and made a liberal grant in aid of the design. In the Annual Report for 1832 the following observations were made, the correctness of which has since more fully appeared:—

"The results which may reasonably be expected from the labours of the new Committee, should they prove successful, will be, in the first place, the establishment of one or more cheap periodical publications, which may serve to counteract the mischievous papers of this class which are circulated throughout the country. Indeed, one of the principal advantages to be hoped for from the successful operations of the Committee, will be the improvement which may be expected to result in other quarters, as the necessary effect of competition. And if, through their labours, a favourable alteration should take place in the character and tendency of works of general education and popular instruction, the Committee will have answered the end of their establishment, independently of the good which may be effected directly by their own publications."

"The list of books put forth by this Committee was for some time entitled the Second Supplemental Catalogue; but by a resolution of the Board agreed to in 1836, the two Supplemental Catalogues were formed into one, which was placed under the superintendence of the Committee. The Committee, consisting of twelve Members of the Society, are elected by the Board annually at the General Meeting in February, their names being submitted to the General Meeting held in January.

"By the Society's Reports it appears, that, during the period which has elapsed since its first appointment, the Committee have issued numerous publications, the sale of which has been, and continues to be, very considerable.

"The Committee have recently published some books of education intended as Class School Books. In the beginning of the present year they put forth, for the first time, the 'Churchman's Almanack,' in a cheap form, the very large sale of which, at its commencement, gives a promise of an extended circulation in future years. They have also directed their attention to the subject of cheap Maps for Schools, some of which have already been published, and to the preparation of little works for rewards, and for the use of Lending Libraries. Many books, in embossed Roman capital letters, and other works in raised short hand, for the use of blind persons, have been added to the list. Mr. Alston's plan for printing portions of the New Testament in embossed Roman capitals, having been recommended to the Society, he was aided with a donation of fifty pounds towards carrying it into effect.

"An Emigrants' Library,' consisting of works selected from the catalogues of the Society, has been recently formed by the Committee. The Board agreed to adopt this measure, for the religious welfare of settlers in the colonies, with the view of sustaining in their minds an attachment to their faith and their church: so that while every provision is made for their present wants, some provision may keep pace with it for securing their spiritual interests. The Member, who originally suggested the formation of this library, observed, 'It is fearful to contemplate the growth of states, such as we are founding both in North America and the Australian dominions, likely to lead to such a height of physical well-being, in conjunction with so great a degree of religious destitution. Almost any proposal is worth the making, which seems to present a possibility of mitigating an evil so tremendous, because, if it comes, it will come in the place which ought to have been occupied by a blessing.'

"Although it has not generally been the practice of the Society to grant books gratuitously from the Supplemental Catalogue, the Board recently agreed to appropriate any profits arising from the sale of the books on that Catalogue to the purpose of making grants from it; an arrangement which has already proved very beneficial in certain instances."

"Reverend and dear Sir,

"I have much pleasure in sending you another report of a gratifying visit on behalf of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. It was made to Huntingdonshire, and a part of Essex, whence I have lately returned, having been most kindly received as a representative of the Society at Huntingdon, St. Ives, and Braintree, where public meetings were very respectably attended; and having preached for the Society in the two churches at Huntingdon, and also at St. Ives and St. Neot's. The collections at all these places exceeded the expectations of those who seemed best acquainted with them. But there is every reason to believe, with thankfulness, that the benefit will extend far beyond the immediate assistance which has thus been procured for the Society. The feeling and the exertions of the clergy are above all praise, and these are now extending to the lay members of the Church in the most gratifying manner. A growing conviction is pervading the whole body of the Church, that it is the bounden duty of her members to 'carry out the richest blessing which they enjoy at home, the possession of a pure and holy faith in the Redeemer of the world, to every member of the flock, wherever dispersed, and to be active agents in the holy work of making known the way of God throughout every portion of the world. Indeed, there is a strong and growing persuasion, that the very extraordinary facilities which the wealth and power, and dominion, and commerce, and enterprise of this favoured nation, afford for the performance of this work, create extraordinary responsibility in those who are so highly distinguished. And while a solemn duty is thus imposed, the privilege which is mingled with that duty appears to be rightly seen and felt. If God, in his mercy, shall bless the extension of such views and feelings, among all the members of the Church, the great objects of the Society, or rather the great objects of the Church (for she must be the distinguished missionary, under her Divine Head), will be effectually obtained; and the progress of a knowledge of the saving health which has been revealed from Heaven, will soon be manifested, with abundant blessing, in the North and in the South, in the East and in the West, in every colony, and in every clime.

"Several of the places at which our meetings have been held with the most gratifying encouragement, have hitherto been considered, from particular circumstances, as unfavourable scenes for such efforts. But the zeal of the clergy has disregarded these circumstances; they have made the attempt in a becoming spirit of faith and humility, and hope and love; and the result has exceeded their expectations, and crowned their pious wishes. This fact is important, because it may well encourage similar efforts in other places, where little hope of success has hitherto been entertained. There is evidently a spirit in the Church, and holy feelings among her members, which only require to be called into action, by zealous, pious, and judicious exertion; and it is not too much to hope, with humble confidence, that these will be brought into general and permanent effect in every part of the kingdom, in every diocese and ecclesiastical division of the country, until every parish and hamlet has its share in the holy work.

"It is therefore very gratifying to see in the country papers the long lists of places, where meetings have been, or are to be held on behalf of the Church in the colonies, that their religious destitution may be relieved by the efforts of the same Church at home. Parochial associations are forming in numerous places, to carry on this good work permanently; and it is felt, that every effort to which the members of the Church in this country are thus called, on behalf of the suffering members abroad, facilitates similar exertions for all the important objects of the Church at home. It is the sound feeling of the Church called into active operation, upon sound principle, and under Church direction, and looking to that blessing which alone can give it any value. Well, therefore, may we all join in fervent prayer, that such feeling and such effort may abound on every side, and be richly blest by the mercy of our God, and of his Christ. Much remains to be done, but that blessing will make the accomplishment of it easy and delightful.

"I remain, Rev. and dear Sir,

"Your faithful servant,

"JOHN NOVA SCOTIA."

"To the Rev. the Secretary.

"Kenwyn, near Truro, Sept. 2, 1839.

"Reverend Sir,

"I have little time for fulfilling your wish of sending you a statement of my progress in attempting to advance the cause of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel throughout these counties; but the following brief sketch may perhaps answer your purpose:—

"I began on Sunday, the 11th of August, by preaching in the morning at St. Andrew's chapel, Plymouth, in the afternoon at Stonehouse, and in the evening at St. John's, Devonport, on behalf of the Society. The congregations were large, and the collections of a very unusual amount. On Monday the Lord Bishop held his visitation at Plymouth, and both in his charge and after the visitation dinner, brought our cause and my mission before his clergy, and expressed his full approbation of it. On Tuesday, the 13th, his Lordship took the chair at our public meeting at Plymouth, and spoke most ably for half an hour in opening the proceedings of the day. The meeting was in all respects most highly gratifying. Such an attendance had never been known before in Plymouth, and the interest of the meeting on the subject was marked and most encouraging. In the evening of the same day a meeting was held at the Town hall, Devonport, which was filled with a most respectable audience: the clergy both of the town and neighbourhood took a hearty interest in our cause. The amount of the collections and increased subscriptions from these towns alone amounted to 157l. 16s. After the Devonport meeting, the Archdeacon of Totnes took me on to Modbury: whence we went in the morning to Kingsbridge, holding a meeting there in the morning, and at Kingsbridge in the afternoon. At each of these places we formed District Associations for the surrounding parishes; and the clergy of the neighbourhood who were present undertook for themselves and their neighbours, that they would at once form their parishes into Parochial Associations. Our collections were, Kingsbridge, 4l. 15s. 6d.; Modbury, 4l. 5s., besides many annual subscriptions of all amounts. My plan, I may mention here, has been throughout, to form as many parochial associations as possible at once, and get the names both of subscribers and collectors before the meeting separates. Many are led to join us heartily, while the great facts of our case are fresh in their recollection, who would probably defer joining us otherwise, until other subjects had effaced their first impression. On Thursday, the 15th, I preached, by the appointment of the Lord Bishop, at the consecration of Bickleigh church, which has just been magnificently rebuilt at the sole cost of Sir Ralph Lopez, the patron; and thus had an opportunity of bringing before all the principal laity and clergy of this part of the county the case of our Society. On the 16th, I went on to an important agricultural station, Lifton, meeting the neighbouring clergy at dinner, and having afterwards a service, at which the whole neighbourhood attended. The congregation, indeed, was crowded, and exhibited a lively interest in the cause of Church of England missions, then for the first time, probably, brought before very many of them. All the clergy present undertook for their own, and many of them (in the name of their brother clergy) for the neighbouring parishes, that each should forthwith be formed into a parochial association; and we collected in the small sums of hearty givers, 4l. 1s. 11d. at the church doors. On the following day two meetings were held in Tavistock, at both of which I explained fully our case, and preached for it the next morning in Tavistock church. The growing interest of the people, with the increase of knowledge on the subject, was strikingly exhibited here. Last year it was scarcely deemed fit for Dr. Short to hold a meeting; and when he did so, about two pounds were raised for the cause: this year our collections reached twenty-six pounds, besides gaining a large accession of subscribers and collectors. The officiating minister takes up the subject warmly, and, I doubt not, will prosper in it. Your district secretary also is most active and effective here. On Sunday evening I went on to Milton Abbot, another agricultural centre, and here again preached to a congregation, full of attention, and so numerous that the fine church overflowed largely into the churchyard: 9l. 8s. were collected; a very large sum, being made up of the widows' mites, the pence and half-pence of the labouring poor. Here, and all round, parochial associations, I trust, will flourish. The following day I met the Bishop of Exeter at his visitation at Liskeard, and again was enabled by his lordship to introduce the subject to his clergy there assembled. The following day he took the chair at our meeting at Liskeard, supported by the mayor and all the leading gentry and clergy of the neighbourhood, and a numerous attendance of the town's people. Parochial associations were again formed, collectors' names obtained, and 11l. 7s. 1d. collected at the doors. The following day the district secretary took me to Tor Point, where an excellent meeting was held and an association formed; 4l. 8s. 8d. was collected in the room, and a large body of subscribers enrolled. On Thursday I proceeded to Callington, preached for the Society, and afterwards held a meeting in the Town Hall: our collections reached 6l. 13s.; and we set up, or obtained engagements to institute, several associations in that neighbourhood. Our next meeting was at Bodmin on the following day, when the Bishop again presided; and on Saturday evening Wadebridge and the neighbouring parish of Egloshayle were formed into an association, at a meeting at which 4l. 15s. was collected, and the foundation of several parochial associations in the neighbourhood was laid. On Sunday morning, the 25th, I preached at Bodmin, collected, with the collection after the meeting of Friday, 18l. 12s. 3d., and then went on to preach at St. Austell in the evening, where 10l. 17s. 3d. was contributed in the church. On Monday, the 26th, the Bishop again took the chair at our meeting at Fowey, which was filled, after his lordship had left the room through indisposition, by the Hon. G. Fortescue. The most lively interest in our cause was here displayed; and a body of zealous collectors formed, under the vicar of the town. Eleven pounds were collected at the doors. Tuesday, the 27th, I preached at Lostwithiel church, to a highly respectable congregation, who contributed 8l. 6s. 6d. to our funds. A parochial association was to be formed the following Thursday, Mr. Fortescue undertaking the office of patron. Thursday, the 29th, I proceeded to St. Columb, and, at a most gratifying meeting in the evening, formed a parochial association there under the best auspices: 9l. 6s. 2d. was collected in the room, and annual subscriptions amounting to almost six pounds entered. The following evening a meeting at St. Austell, at which Mr. Tremaine, of Heligan, presided, was most respectably attended, and 9l. 9s. 10d. were added to the Sunday's contribution. On Sunday morning, Sept. 1, I preached to a magnificent congregation at St. Mary's, Truro, when 31l. 15s. 4d. were collected at the doors. In the evening, at a sermon at Redruth, I brought the subject before the mining population of that large district, and collected a little above five pounds for our cause. We are to hold meetings at Truro and Redruth this afternoon and to-morrow, under the presidency of the Lord Bishop, and again in the evenings, for the poorer classes.

"Upon the whole, I thank God that our success has been great and evident. Our collections have been throughout almost twice as large as those usually made for similar objects; and what is of far more importance, in almost every single instance I have been heartily welcomed by the laity and clergy. If it please God to prosper me, I do, indeed, trust, that through His blessing, a safe foundation for general parochial associations is being laid throughout these two large counties. Even in parishes which were thought pre-occupied by other societies, the attempt of introducing our own has been hitherto eminently successful; and we have had some most gratifying instances in which the clergyman was previously almost ignorant of our true character, and therefore devoted to other instruments, where, after the statements made at the meeting, he has united with me in declaring, that, however useful other societies may be, we have the first claim. In these cases it has hitherto appeared that other causes have suffered no loss, whilst we have been at once put at the head of the list.

"Let me have your prayers, Reverend Sir, that God's blessing may rest on my endeavours, and that His work may be done in this matter simply, solidly, and lastingly.

"I am ever your obedient servant,

"SAMUEL WILBERFORCE.

"Our collections hitherto amount to 335*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.*"

The Hon. and Rev. S. Best, who has kindly undertaken to advocate the Society's causes in the counties of Wilts and Dorset, says, "I have now attended several meetings, and have been much pleased throughout with the zeal and ferventness in the cause that has been shown. I have taken the opportunity of pressing on each meeting the importance of acting parochially, and have pointed out the facility and readiness with which this may be done. It gives me great pleasure to report that a strong feeling in favour of this system appears to be awakened, and all parties are beginning to apprehend the real strength of their position, and how important it is that the Church, which, in the establishment of this very Society, set the example of missionary exertion, should take up and carry out its great principle.

"I have now to mention the establishment of an association in my own parish; and I have reason to be thankful for my success. Our population is 560, and entirely agricultural; and yet, exclusive of my own family's subscription, I shall have, I hope, to remit nearly five pounds, raised, with only one exception, in sums under five shillings, and the greater part of it in shillings, sixpences, and pence. I preached on the subject on the Sunday evening, but without a collection, and gave notice of the meeting at the school-room on the following evening. I then engaged some of my farmers' daughters to go round, and, in delivering the papers as notices, to use their influence, which they did with success; and I hope, that as the subject becomes better understood, (as I shall endeavour to make it, by circulating two or three copies of the Report on strong paper, and after the manner of a reading society,) that we shall have a still better report to make.

SUNDAY TRAINS ON RAILROADS.

THE following address, signed by the clergy and a large number of gentlemen and tradesmen, was presented to the directors of a railroad passing under the eye of the subscribers, and creating great disturbance in the place. It has since been brought before the public, being prefixed to "An Appeal to the Public, on the subject of Sunday Trains on Railroads." By the Rev. Thos. Bowdler, M.A.

Gentlemen,

We beg to submit to your serious consideration, in language which will but ill express the strength of our feeling upon the subject, the evil and demoralizing tendency of the course now pursued by running the trains through nearly the whole of the Lord's day. Even the hours appointed for Divine service in the morning can scarcely be said to be free from interruption*; and on those days on which the Holy Communion is administered, the sound of the trains is heard long before that solemn service is concluded. But it must be remarked, that many persons, especially of the lower orders, cannot conveniently attend in the morning; and those who desire to worship twice in the day, agreeably to the rules of the Church, have surely a right to expect that peace and order should be preserved; and all who would bring up their families in the fear and love of God, must desire, above all things, that every part of this sacred day should be marked by decent observance, and distinguished from the remainder of the week. It is, in a great measure, on account of these persons that we now address you; praying for the protection of those who are desirous to serve God, and who are already exposed to much of obloquy and offensive remark; all which is greatly increased, and much of noise and unseemly conduct is added thereto, by this new and glaring breach of the Christian Sabbath.

But while we lament with great grief the impediments and discouragements thrown in the way of those who are religiously disposed, we contemplate with awe and fear the open support and countenance which are given to Sabbath-breaking and all ungodliness, and the further mischievous consequences to which it must lead.

The work upon the railroad, while it was in progress, introduced into the neighbourhood a great number of persons whose habits were such that it was necessary to establish a police for the protection of the inhabitants; such a force could only prevent flagrant misconduct; no step was taken to counteract the evil which was working more secretly. And now, when it might be hoped that the demoralizing effects thus produced would cease, we have (if possible) a greater evil brought upon us in the open violation of that sacred rest which has been enjoined and blessed by the Most High.

Sabbath-breaking is notoriously the beginning of all crime, especially among the poor. Here it is held up to them every week by the practice and example of those who have no necessity to plead for the breach of the commandment. The railroad is not open for the accommodation of those who may have some urgent cause to travel on the Sunday. It is for the offering a temptation to the hundreds and thousands who might remain quietly at their homes, but are induced to sacrifice duty to pleasure.

justly drawn from such a source by those who acknowledge the law of God, or can have His blessing upon them; whether the largest amount of such profits can compensate for the scandal which is created, and the injury done to religion and good morals; and whether the example may not be pleaded by every person who desires to find an excuse for exercising his worldly calling on the Lord's day.

ECCLESIASTICAL DISTRICTS ACT 2 and 3 VICT. ch. 49.

THE attention of the clergy is called to the provisions of this Act; by which some important alterations (an abridgment of some of which is here given) are made in the law respecting churches and chapels augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty, and by which several Acts therein recited, relating to the clergy, are amended. The Act is printed at length in the present Number of the "Ecclesiastical Gazette."

By sections 1 and 2, the incumbents of churches or chapels which have been or shall be augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty, and to which a district chapelry has been or shall be assigned by the commissioners for building new churches, whether before or after augmentation, are to be perpetual curates, and to have sole and exclusive cure of souls within such district chapelry, and are not to be subject to the controul or interference of the rector, vicar, or minister of the parish or place from which the district chapelry assigned to such augmented church or chapel shall have been taken.

By sections 3 and 4, the commissioners for building new churches may assign a district chapelry to any church or chapel, with such consent as is required by the Acts 58 Geo. 3. ch. 45. and 59 Geo. 3. ch. 134; and the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may augment the same, either before or after such assignment of a district chapelry, on the same terms, conditions, and regulations as may be in force concerning such augmentation.

By section 14, the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may lay out at interest purchase-moneys paid to them for glebe-houses sold under the Act 1 and 2 Victoria, ch. 23.

By sections 15 and 16, power is given to sell lands and hereditaments purchased by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, for the augmentation of any benefice where such lands, &c., are not situate in the parish of the benefice to which they belong, or in the adjoining parish. And the same power is also given, under special circumstances, though the lands be situate in the parish of such benefice, or an adjoining one.

By section 17 to 21 (both inclusive), the power of sale given by the Act 1 and 2 Victoria, ch. 23, is extended, by allowing any dwelling-house, shop, warehouse, or other erection or building (other than the residence-house) belonging to any benefice, to be sold, in any case in which the same shall be so old and ruinous as that it would be useless or inexpedient to expend money in repairing and maintaining the same, or for other good and sufficient reasons it should be thought advisable to sell and dispose of the same.

By the 6th, 7th, and 8th sections, some amendments are made in the Act 1 and 2 Victoria, ch. 106, by extending the powers thereby given for separating part of a parish, and for adding the separated part, or an isolated place, to another parish, or making the same a separate parish.

By the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 22nd sections, the church building Acts are explained and amended in some minute particulars.

By the 12th and 13th sections, the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may, if they think fit, accept the transfer of endowments and emoluments which shall have been, or may hereafter be, provided for the use or benefit of any church or chapel, whether already or hereafter to be built, acquired, or appropriated under the church building Acts, or under any other authority, or for the use or benefit of the incumbent of any such church or chapel, or of the spiritual person serving the same; and on acceptance of such transfer, the said governors are to hold the endowments upon the trusts for which they were provided.

CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY.

INSTITUTED FEB. 19, 1836.

Extracts from the Answers to Special Circular, with a Tabular Statement of some General Results.

"The population in the following case is comparatively small, being only between 2,000 and 2,500. The grant is 60*l.* for a Curate. The object and result are stated thus:—

"In reply to your circular I beg to send the following statement respecting this parish:—

"I. The necessity there was for aid. On taking possession of this benefice, about a year and a half ago, I was sorry to find the parish church three quarters of a mile from the village, with very few houses within that distance. In addition to this, I found the church by no means large enough for the large and increasing population, and very inconveniently situated in a corner of the parish, three or four miles from some of the population. The population is considerably more than 2,000; the church holds only 511. Some of the seats are very inconveniently situated for seeing and hearing. I felt desirous of bringing all my people within the sound of the Gospel; but the distance of the church, and the difficulty of obtaining sittings there, were for a time insurmountable obstacles. The ———, however, having given up their chapel, situated very conveniently for the village, and far more so than the church for the parish at large, I applied to the Society for assistance, proposing to ask the Bishop to license the chapel for the services of the Church. My request in both cases having been complied with, I beg to state,

"II. The results of the aid. The chapel, which is rented for 10*l.* a year, and will hold about 170, was opened on Sunday evenings; and I am thankful to say, has been filled ever since it was opened. Many go away every Sunday unable to obtain a seat. Old and infirm people, mothers with young children, servants and invalids, are thus able to attend the means of grace, who before rarely, if ever, enjoyed them. I have every reason to believe that the opening of the chapel has been a very great blessing to its inhabitants. A weekly cottage lecture has been established at a hamlet from two to four miles from the church, in a room adapted for the purpose. It has been, on the whole, well attended. Some infirm and aged people, for whom it was especially intended, who were never able to go either to church or chapel, constantly attend this lecture, and with much professed spiritual advantage. It is as plain as possible.

"III. The need there may be for further aid. I have several plans in view for the spiritual welfare of my people. A chapel, to hold 500, ought to be erected and consecrated in the village. It would, I doubt not, be well attended, and seats, to a considerable amount per annum, might be let. Another chapel might be built at a hamlet containing about 500, from two to four miles from the church. The population here being poor, seats would not let to any extent. It should, therefore, be endowed, and a district attached to it. An infant-school is much wanted. It would be a peculiar advantage to this parish, where mothers are so much engaged in the manufacturing of needles. (A child was burnt to death a very short time ago in the absence of its mother.) But as we have an organ in debt, a school in debt, a library in debt, and a chapel in debt, I must wait till matters get a little straight before I set an infant-school on foot.

"I have found a religious library of great benefit in this parish. It consists of two departments; one for the children of the Sunday-school, the other for the parish generally.

"With many thanks for the kind assistance I have received from your valuable Society."

"The following letter is from the Incumbent, in whose extensive parish there is a Jesuit College, in the vicinity of which a new church had been built by dint of great exertions; but no means existed of providing for the maintenance of a minister, when the Society made the grant referred to.

"I have to offer my grateful acknowledgments to your Committee for the liberal grant of 100*l.* for one year, received up to the 18th of January last, and also for its continuance for a second year from that date, in aid for the more efficient discharge of my pastoral duties at ———; which portion of my district not only had not been, but could not be, so efficiently watched over by one solitary individual, as the importance of the charge, as well as the circumstances of the place, required. This may easily be conceived, when I state to your Committee that I had to visit, in a population of upwards of 3,000 souls, a flock scattered over a space of many square miles; and that it has occasionally happened, that I have had to ride upwards of sixteen miles in a direct line from my residence to and from, for the express purpose of visiting two only of my dying parishioners. To be supplied, then, with one efficient fellow-labourer by the aid of your Society, must be felt as a great personal relief, especially as declining years and past labour, (having been here and in our adjoining parish nearly 32 years,) must decrease the power for a like discharge of that labour, even defective as it has been (means also within my own reach being wanting as a remedy). But a higher relief than this is administered to the mind of an anxious pastor under such circumstances, when, instead of his occasional visits only, some hundreds of souls in a distant hamlet, who, I trust, are anxious to be fed, have now regularly administered to them the bread of life twice every Sabbath, and at different places amongst them, by week-day lectures; their children assemble for Sabbath-duty also, and now partially for week-day instruction. I therefore, in thankfulness, not only feel constrained myself to supplicate the blessing of God to rest upon and prosper your Society, but also, in the language of the sweet singer of Israel, would I praise my God for it, and say, 'Let the people praise thee, O God: yea, let all the people praise thee,' and cry aloud for the enlargement of such mercies.'

Contributions will be thankfully received at the Society's Office, Temple Chambers, Falcon-court, Fleet-street; at Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., Birch-lane; at Herries, Farquhar, and Co., St. James's-street. Also, at Messrs. Hatchard's, Piccadilly; Seeley's, Fleet-street; and Nisbet's, Berners-street.

Also, any sum may be safely, and free of expense, remitted through Country Bankers, who will desire their London correspondents to credit the same to "Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., Bankers, for the CHURCH PASTORAL AID SOCIETY." In either case, the Contributors are requested to write to the Secretaries, advising payment.

AN ACT TO MAKE BETTER PROVISION FOR THE ASSIGNMENT OF ECCLESIASTICAL DISTRICTS TO CHURCHES OR CHAPELS AUGMENTED BY THE GOVERNORS OF THE BOUNTY OF QUEEN ANNE; AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

[17th August, 1839.]

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:" and whereas another Act was passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to amend and render more effectual an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:" and whereas another Act was passed in the third year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend and render more effectual two Acts passed in the Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Years of his late Majesty, for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:" and whereas another Act was passed in the fifth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to make further Provision, and to amend and render more effectual Three Acts passed in the Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Years of his late Majesty, and in the Third Year of the reign of his present Majesty, for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:" and whereas another Act was passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend the Acts for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:" and whereas another Act was passed in the first and second years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend and render more effectual an Act passed in the Seventh and Eighth Years of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled 'An Act to amend the Acts for Building and promoting the Building of additional Churches in populous Parishes:'" and whereas another Act was passed in the second and third years of the reign of his said late Majesty, to render more effectual the aforesaid Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third: and whereas another Act was passed in the first year of the reign of her present Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to prolong for Ten Years her Majesty's Commission for building new Churches:" and whereas another Act was passed in the first and second years of the reign of her said Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to amend and render more effectual the Church Building Acts:" and whereas another Act was passed in the first year of the reign of his Majesty King George the First, intituled "An Act for making more effectual her late Majesty's gracious intention for augmenting the Maintenance of the poor Clergy:" and whereas another Act was passed in the first and second years of the reign of her said Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to abridge the holding of Benefices in Plurality, and to make better Provision for the Residence of the Clergy:" and whereas it is expedient to explain and amend some of the provisions of the said several recited Acts: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much of the said recited Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Third, as provides that no district chapelry assigned to any chapel of ease or parochial chapel then already existing, or to any chapel built or which might thereafter be built or acquired under the powers of the said recited Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Third, or the hereinbefore recited Act passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Third, should become a benefice by reason of any augmentation of the maintenance of the curate, by any grant or bounty under the provisions of any Act or Acts of Parliament, or law or laws, for augmenting small livings, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that so much of the said recited Act passed in the first year of the reign of his Majesty King George the First as provides that no rector or vicar of any mother church, or any other ecclesiastical person or persons having cure of souls within the parish or place where a church or chapel augmented by the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy shall be situate, or his or their successors, should by virtue of that Act be divested or discharged from the same, but that the cure of souls, with all other parochial rights and duties (such augmentation and allowance to the augmented church or chapel as aforesaid only excepted), should thereafter be and remain in the same state, plight, and manner as before the making of that Act, shall be and the same is hereby repealed, with respect only to those churches or chapels which have been already or hereafter may be augmented, and for or to which district chapelries may have already been or may hereafter be assigned, under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said Majesty George the Third: provided always, that unless and until such district chapelry be assigned, the said provision shall remain in full force and effect as if this Act had not been passed.

II. Any augmented church or chapel having a district to be a perpetual curacy, and the minister to be an incumbent, with perpetual succession, &c., and to have exclusive cure of souls within the district. And be it further enacted, that in the case of any church or chapel which has already been or hereafter may be augmented by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, and for or to which any district chapelry has already been or hereafter may be assigned, whether before or after such augmentation under the provisions of the said recited Acts or some of them, such church or chapel, from and after such augmentation, and the assignment of such district chapelry, shall be and is hereby declared to be a perpetual curacy and benefice, and the minister duly nominated and licensed thereto, and his successors, shall not be a stipendiary curate, but shall be and be esteemed in law to be a perpetual curate, and a body politic and corporate, with perpetual succession, and may receive and take to himself and his successors all such lands, tenements, tithes, rent-charges, and hereditaments as shall be granted unto or purchased for him or them by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, or otherwise; and such perpetual curate shall thenceforth have within the district chapelry so assigned as aforesaid sole and exclusive cure of souls, and shall not be in anywise subject to the control or interference of the rector, vicar, or minister of the parish or place from which such district chapelry shall have been taken, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

III. And be it further declared and enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said commissioners for building new churches to assign a district chapelry to any church or chapel, with such consent as is required by the Acts of the fifty-eighth and fifty-ninth years of his said Majesty King George the Third, respectively hereinbefore recited, or one of them, in the manner specified and directed in and by such several Acts; and it shall be lawful for the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne to augment such church or chapel, either before or after such district chapelry has been formed or assigned, on the same terms, conditions, and regulations as are or may be in force concerning such augmentation.

IV. And be it further enacted, That every such church or chapel so augmented, to which a district chapelry shall have been assigned as aforesaid, shall be subject to the provisions and regulations contained in the hereinbefore recited Act of the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said Majesty King George the Third, touching the assignment of district chapelries, except so far as is by this Act otherwise provided.

V. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the provisions of the hereinbefore recited Act, passed in the first year of the reign of his Majesty King George the First, which enact that all churches, curacies, or chapels which should at any time thereafter be augmented by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne should be perpetual cures and benefices, and that the ministers duly nominated and licensed thereto, and their successors respectively, should be bodies politic and corporate, with perpetual succession, and other privileges and capacities in the said Act mentioned, but that the same shall remain in full force and effect as if this Act had not been passed.

VI. And whereas by virtue of the said Act passed in the first and second years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to abridge the holding of Benefices in Plurality, and to make better Provision for the Residence of the Clergy," it is amongst other things enacted, that when with respect to his own diocese it should appear to the archbishop of the province, or when the bishop of any diocese should represent to the said archbishop, that any tithing, hamlet, chapelry, place, or district within the diocese of such archbishop, or the diocese of such bishop (as the case might be), might be advantageously separated from any parish or mother church, and either be constituted a separate benefice by itself or be united to any other parish to which it might be more conveniently annexed, or to any other adjoining tithing, hamlet, chapelry, place, or district, parochial or extra-parochial, so as to form a separate parish or benefice, or that any extra-parochial place might with advantage be annexed to any parish to which it is contiguous, or be constituted a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes; and the said archbishop or bishop should draw up a scheme in writing (the scheme of such bishop to be transmitted to the said archbishop for his consideration) describing the mode in which it appeared to him that the alteration might best be effected, and how the changes consequent on such alteration in respect to ecclesiastical jurisdiction, glebe lands, tithes, rent-charges, and other ecclesiastical dues, rates, and payments, and in respect to patronage and rights to pews, might be made, with justice to all parties interested; and if the patron or patrons of the benefice or benefices to be affected by such alteration should consent, in writing under his or their hands, to such scheme, or to such modification thereof as the said archbishop might approve, and the said archbishop should, on full consideration and inquiry, be satisfied with any such scheme or modification thereof, and should certify the same and such consent as aforesaid by his report to her Majesty in council, it should be lawful for her Majesty in council to make an order for carrying such scheme, or modification thereof, as the case might be, into effect; and such order, being registered in the registry of the diocese, which the registrar was thereby required to do, should be forthwith binding on all persons whatsoever, including the incumbent or incumbents of the benefice or benefices to be affected thereby, if he or they should have consented thereto in writing under his or their hands; but if such incumbent or incumbents should not have so consented thereto, the order should not come into operation until the next avoidance of the benefice by the incumbent objecting to the alteration, or by the surviving incumbent objecting, if more than one should object thereto, and in such case the order should forthwith after such avoidance become binding on all persons whatsoever: and whereas it is expedient that the said provisions should be extended to cases notwithstanding the vacancy or vacancies of the benefice or benefices thereby to be affected; and also that when by such order a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes is constituted, the same should become a perpetual curacy and benefice, with cure of souls; be it therefore enacted, that any such scheme or modification may be drawn up according to the regulations and directions in such Act contained, subject to the consent in writing of the patron or patrons of the benefice or benefices to be affected thereby, under his or their hands, notwithstanding the vacancy of such benefice or benefices; and it shall be lawful for her Majesty in council thereupon to make an order for carrying such scheme, or modification thereof, as the case may be, into effect; and such order, being registered in the registry of the diocese as directed by the said Act, shall come into operation and shall be forthwith binding on all persons whatsoever, notwithstanding such vacancy or vacancies.

VII. And be it further enacted, That the provisions contained in the said last-recited Act, touching the party or parties who shall be considered patron or patrons, and the manner in which the consent of the patrons shall in certain cases be given, for the purposes of such Act, shall apply to the consent of the patron or patrons hereinbefore last required to be given.

VIII. And be it further enacted, That when by any order of her Majesty in council as aforesaid, a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes is constituted, the same shall, on registration thereof, and with the consent in writing of the incumbent or incumbents of the benefice or benefices to be thereby affected, become a perpetual curacy and benefice, and the minister thereof, duly nominated and licensed thereto, and his successors, shall be a body politic and corporate, with perpetual succession, and may receive and take to himself and his successors all such lands, tenements, tithes, rent charges, and hereditaments as shall be granted unto him or them, and such perpetual curate shall thenceforth have, within the limits of the district parish formed under the Church Building Acts for the church of such perpetual curacy, sole and exclusive cure of souls, and shall not in anywise be subject to the control or interference of the incumbent or incumbents of the benefice or benefices to be affected by such order, if he or they shall have consented to such order as aforesaid; but if such incumbent or incumbents shall not have so consented thereto, this last-mentioned provision shall not come into operation until the next avoidance of the benefice by the incumbent objecting thereto, or by the surviving incumbent objecting, if more than one shall object thereto, and in such case the last-mentioned provision shall forthwith after such avoidance come into operation, and shall be binding on all persons whatsoever.

IX. And be it further enacted, That the powers granted by the hereinbefore recited Act passed in the first and second years of the reign of her present Majesty (chapter one hundred and seven) to her Majesty's commissioners for building new churches, of making, with certain consents, any church or chapel the parish church of the parish within which the same is situate, instead of the ancient parish church, and of making such ancient parish church a district church or chapel, with or without a district, as the said commissioners shall in such case direct, shall not extend or be construed to extend to making any church or chapel now or hereafter to be built and endowed under the powers of the last-mentioned Act, or the hereinbefore recited Act passed in the first and second years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, the parish church, nor to the making any church or chapel the parish church as aforesaid, the advowson, right of presentation, or nomination of or to which shall belong to any other person or persons than to the patron of such ancient parish church, without the consent in writing under the hands of the patron or patrons, and of the incumbent or minister of any such church or chapel herein mentioned.

X. And be it further enacted, That where a church or chapel has been built or purchased and endowed and the patronage thereof granted under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited Acts of the first and second years of the reign of his said Majesty King William the Fourth, and of the first and second years of the reign of her present Majesty (chapter one hundred and seven), or either of them, and where a particular district has been assigned to such church or chapel under the provisions of such first-named Act, the minister or perpetual curate of such church or chapel shall have exclusive cure of souls within such district, and shall not be in anywise subject to the control or interference of the rector, vicar, or minister of the mother church of the parish or place out of which such district shall have been taken, any statute or law to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

XI. And whereas it is by the said recited Act passed in the first and second years of the reign of her present Majesty (chapter one hundred and seven), enacted, that in all district churches and district chapels, the licence of the stipendiary curate appointed to serve the chapel of such chapelry, shall not be rendered void by the avoidance of the church of the parish or district parish in which such chapel is situate, unless the same shall be revoked by the bishop of the diocese under his hand and seal: and whereas doubts exist as to the extent and meaning of such provision; be it therefore enacted and declared, that the same shall apply to the licence of the stipendiary curate of a district chapelry and to the licence of the stipendiary curate of a district parish church.

XII. And whereas it is expedient to make provision for the more permanent security of the endowments and emoluments which shall have been or may hereafter be provided, for the use or benefit of any church or chapel, whether built, acquired, or appropriated, or to be built, acquired, or appropriated under the authority of the said recited Acts, or of any of them, or under any other authority, or for the use or benefit of the incumbent of any such church or chapel, or of the spiritual person serving the same; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne to accept, take, and hold any such endowments and emoluments upon the trusts and for the intents and purposes for which the same shall have been or may hereafter be given or granted by the person or persons providing the same, in like manner as any such endowments or emoluments may now be taken or held by any private trustees or trustee; and it shall and may be lawful for any trustees or trustee of any such endowments or emoluments to assign and transfer the same to the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, to be held and applied by them upon the same trusts and for the same intents and purposes as the same previously to such assignment and transfer were held by such trustees or trustee: Provided always, that no such gift, grant, assignment, or transfer shall be made to the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, until by an instrument in writing under their common seal they shall have signified their consent to accept the same.

XIII. And be it further enacted, That in all cases in which such consent of the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne shall have been so given, the money provided for such endowments shall be paid to the treasurer for the time being of the said governors; and the receipt or receipts of such treasurer shall be effectual discharges or an effectual discharge for so much money as in such receipts or receipt shall be expressed, to the person or persons paying the same, and after obtaining such receipts or receipt the person or persons paying such money shall be absolutely discharged from all liability touching such money, and from all trusts relating thereto.

XIV. And whereas by an Act passed in the first year of the reign of her present Majesty (chapter twenty-three), intituled "An Act to amend the Law for providing fit Houses for the Beneficed Clergy" (an omission in which was supplied by another Act passed in the same Session of Parliament, chapter twenty-nine), it was enacted, that the monies to arise from the sale or sales of the residence house, gardens, orchards, and appurtenances, and lands, belonging to any benefice by the said Act, under certain circumstances authorised to be sold, should be paid to the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, to be by them, with the consent of the ordinary and patron, applied and disposed of in or towards the erection or purchase of some other house and offices, or the purchase of an orchard, garden, and appurtenances, or land for the site of a house, any or either of them, together with land contiguous thereto, and not exceeding twelve acres, suitable for the residence and occupation of the incumbent of such benefice: and whereas the said Act makes no provision for authorizing the said governors to lay out at interest the purchase monies which in any case shall be paid to them under the authority thereof, in the mean time and until such monies shall be applied and disposed of according to the directions of the said Act, nor for the application of the surplus of such monies in case the same monies shall not be wholly applied and disposed of to the purposes contemplated by the said Act; be it therefore enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said governors and they are hereby required to lay out and invest the said purchase monies which shall from time to time come into their hands under and by virtue of the said Act in the purchase of such stocks, funds, and securities, and at such rate of interest, as they shall think proper, and shall from time to time receive the dividends and interest which shall become payable in respect thereof, and add the same by way of accumulation to the principal, and so from time to time so long as the same shall remain in their hands, or until the same, or so much thereof as shall be required, shall have been applied and disposed of by the said governors in the manner and for the purposes in the said Act mentioned; and further, that in case, after the complete execution of the duty or trust imposed on the said governors by the said Act of Parliament, or of so much thereof as shall be in their power, any sum of money shall remain in their hands undisposed of, such surplus shall be appropriated by the said governors to the particular benefice on account of which the same shall have been received, and shall be applicable and disposable by them for the benefit of such benefice, in such and the same manner, and with such and the same powers of investment, and other powers and authorities in all respects, according to the rules and regulations of the said governors for the time being, as if the said monies, or the stocks or funds which might be purchased therewith, had been appropriated by the said governors to such benefice out of the general funds and profits of the said governors, or otherwise, for the benefit and augmentation thereof.

XV. And whereas some of the lands and hereditaments which were formerly purchased by the governors of the said bounty, or were otherwise appropriated or annexed, by or with the consent or concurrence of the said governors, to particular benefices, for the augmentation thereof, are situate at an inconvenient distance from the benefices to which they respectively belong, and in such and some other special cases a sale of the lands and hereditaments which have been or may hereafter be so appropriated or annexed may be deemed advantageous; be it therefore enacted, That in every case where any lands or hereditaments which, in consequence of any purchase, allotment, benefaction, donation, or exchange, or otherwise howsoever, shall have been appropriated or annexed to any benefice, for the augmentation thereof, by or with the concurrence of the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, are situate elsewhere than within the parish or parishes of such benefice, or some adjoining parish or parishes, it shall be lawful for the incumbent of such benefice (with the consent of the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, and of the ordinary and patron of such benefice, to be testified as hereinafter mentioned), absolutely to sell and dispose of the said lands or hereditaments, or any part thereof, to any person or persons whomsoever either together or in parcels, and either by public sale or by private contract, for such sum or sums of money as to the said governors, ordinary, and patron shall seem fair and reasonable; and upon payment of the purchase money for the same, as hereinafter directed, by deed indented, or, in the case of any lands or hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure, by surrender or other customary mode of assurance, to convey and assure the lands or hereditaments comprised in such sale unto and to the use of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, his, her, or their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns respectively, or as he, she, or they shall direct or appoint: Provided always, that the consent of the said governors, patron, and ordinary to every such sale shall be testified by their respectively executing the deed or other assurance by which the lands or hereditaments comprised in such sale shall be conveyed or assured; except that in the case of any lands or hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure which shall be conveyed or assured by surrender, such consent may be testified by any writing under the corporate seal, or the hand and seal, as the case may be, of each of the consenting parties, which writing shall be produced to the lord or steward of the manor of which the said premises shall be holden, and shall be a sufficient authority to him for accepting from the incumbent and other necessary parties a surrender of the same premises, and such writing shall be entered with the surrender upon the court rolls of the said manor.

XVI. And be it further enacted, That in every case where any lands or hereditaments which shall have been so appropriated or annexed to any benefice as aforesaid shall be situate within the parish or parishes of such benefice, or some adjoining parish or parishes, but on account of any special circumstance or circumstances a sale of the said lands or hereditaments, or any part thereof, shall be deemed advantageous, it shall be lawful for the incumbent of such benefice, with the consent of the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, and of the ordinary and patron of such benefice, to be testified as aforesaid, and with the further consent of the archbishop for the time being of the province in which such benefice is situated, to be testified in like manner, to sell and dispose of and convey and assure the said lands or hereditaments, or any part thereof, in such manner as is hereinbefore directed or authorized with respect to any such lands or hereditaments where the same shall not be situate within any such parish or parishes as aforesaid.

XVII. And whereas it is expedient that the power which, by the said Act of the first and second years of the reign of Her present Majesty, is given to the incumbent of a benefice, with the consent and approbation of the ordinary and patron thereof, and of the archbishop of the province, to sell the residence-house, gardens, orchard, and appurtenances belonging to his benefice, with land contiguous thereto not exceeding twelve acres, should be extended and made applicable to other houses and buildings belonging to any benefice, under the circumstances hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted, That in any case in which any dwelling-house, shop, warehouse, or other erection or building (other than the house of residence) belonging to any benefice shall be so old and ruinous as that it would be useless or inexpedient to expend money in repairing and maintaining the same, or for other good and sufficient reasons it shall be thought advisable to sell and dispose of the same, it shall and may be lawful for the incumbent of such benefice, and he is hereby authorized and empowered, with the consent and approbation of the ordinary and patron thereof, and of the archbishop of the province, to be signified in the manner prescribed by the last-mentioned Act, absolutely to sell and dispose of such dwelling-house, shop, warehouse, or other erection or building, with the yards, gardens, orchard, croft, and appurtenances thereto belonging, or any of them, to any person or persons whomsoever, either altogether or in parcels, and for such sum or sums of money as to such ordinary, patron, and archbishop shall appear fair and reasonable, and upon payment of the purchase-money for the same as hereinafter mentioned, by deed indented, or in the case of copyhold or customary hereditaments by surrender or other customary mode of assurance, to convey and assure the hereditaments which shall be so sold unto and to the use of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, his or their heirs or assigns, or as he or they shall direct or appoint.

XVIII. And be it further enacted, That the monies to arise from any sale or sales which shall be made under any of the provisions of this Act shall be paid to the said governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, and that the receipts of the treasurer for the time being of the said governors shall be sufficient discharges for the said monies, or for so much thereof as in such receipts respectively shall be expressed to be received, and shall effectually release and exonerate the person or persons paying the same from all responsibility in respect of the application thereof; and further, that no purchaser or purchasers shall be in anywise bound or concerned to ascertain or inquire whether any special circumstance or circumstances, or reason or reasons, shall exist on account of which any such sale or sales as aforesaid may be deemed advantageous or advisable, or whether such circumstance or circumstances, or reason or reasons, shall be sufficient to authorize such sale or sales.

XIX. And be it enacted, That all the monies to arise from any such sale or sales as aforesaid (subject nevertheless, in the case of any lands or hereditaments which shall have been appropriated or annexed to any benefice by or with the concurrence of the said governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, to any stipulation or agreement which the said governors in their discretion may think proper to make for payment thereof of the costs and expenses of such sale or sales or any part thereof) shall be appropriated by the said governors to the particular benefice to which the hereditaments comprised in such sale shall have previously belonged, and shall be applicable and disposable by them for the benefit and augmentation of such benefice in such and the same manner, and with such and the same powers of investment, and other powers and authorities, in all respects, according to the rules and regulations of the said governors for the time being, as if the said monies, or the stocks or funds which might be purchased therewith, were then originally appropriated by the said governors to such benefice out of the general funds and profits of the said governors, or otherwise, for the benefit and augmentation thereof.

XX. And be it enacted, That in any case in which upon the sale of any such lands or hereditaments as aforesaid the patronage of the benefice to which the same shall belong shall be in the crown, or the advowson and right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, or the patron of such benefice shall be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, then and in every such case the consent required by this Act on the part of the patron of such benefice shall and may be testified by the execution of such deed or assurance or other writing as aforesaid by such and the same persons as by the said Act of the first and second years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter twenty-three, are in like cases directed or authorized to testify the consent of the patron to the exercise of the several powers given by the said Act, or by certain other Acts therein mentioned or referred to; and that in all other cases the consent required by this Act on the part of the patron of any benefice shall be given by the person or persons who would be entitled to present or nominate or to collate to such benefice in case the same were actually vacant at the time of giving such consent.

XXI. And be it further enacted, That in the construction of so much of the Act as relates to the sales of land and other hereditaments, and the application of the monies to arise therefrom, the word "benefice" shall be taken to extend to and comprise all rectories with cure of souls, vicarages, perpetual curacies, and chapelries, the incumbents of which respectively shall, in right thereof, be corporations sole.

XXII. And be it further enacted, That in any case under the hereinbefore recited Acts (except the Act passed in the first and second years of her present Majesty's reign, chapter one hundred and six) or of this Act, where the patronage of any rectory, vicarage, perpetual curacy, district parish chapelry, district chapelry, or place shall be in the crown, or the advowson and right of patronage thereof shall be part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, or where the patron thereof shall be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, then and in every such case the consent required by such Acts on the part of the patron of any such rectory, vicarage, perpetual curacy, district parish chapelry, district chapelry, or place, shall and may be testified in writing under the hands of such and the same persons as by the said Act passed in the first and second years of the reign of her present Majesty, chapter twenty-three, are in like cases directed or authorized to testify the consent of the patron to the exercise of the several powers given by the said Act, or by certain other Acts therein mentioned or referred to; and that in all other cases the consent required by the said recited Acts (except as aforesaid) and this Act on the part of the patron of any rectory, vicarage, perpetual curacy, district parish chapelry, district chapelry, or place, shall be given by the person or persons who would be entitled to present or nominate or to collate thereto in case the same were actually vacant at the time of giving such consent, except so far as it is by any of such recited Acts or this Act otherwise expressly provided for.

XXIII. And be it further enacted, That this Act shall extend only to that part of the united kingdom called England and Wales, and to the Isle of Man, and to the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark.

LAW. CONSISTORY COURT.

STEEBING CHURCH-RATE.—SMITH AND WILLIS
v. DIXON.

This case came again before the Consistory Court on the 14th of August. On a former court day an allegation was admitted on behalf of Mr. Dixon, who opposed the validity of the rate on the ground that it was excessive (the churchwardens having in vestry, proposed a rate of 6d. in the pound, whereas a vote in favour of a rate of 9d. in the pound was carried), and also on the plea that there was no specification of the properties liable to be rated, appended, and prepared for examination of the parishioners. It appeared from the proceedings, that there has not been a church-rate granted in this parish from 1832 to 1839, and that the increase in the rate on the present occasion was to repair two of the bells which had become, from age, entirely useless. The learned judge having heard counsel in opposition to the admissibility of the responsive plea now offered on behalf of the churchwardens, considered it unnecessary to trouble the learned civilian engaged on the other side. The vestry was clearly entitled to increase the rate for the repair of the bells, it being the duty of the churchwardens only to propose a rate for the sustentation of the church, and the decent observance of divine service. The point of law which had been raised against the validity of the rate could not stand. It would be contrary to justice to put the inhabitants of the parish to the expense of a specification of the property liable to the church-rate, when such rate was made on the basis of the specification for the poor-rate. The responsive allegation now offered on behalf of the churchwardens must therefore be admitted.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

AUGUST 14.

Lord J. RUSSELL, on the motion that the order of the day be read, for going into committee on the "Church Discipline Bill," said that he did not intend to press this bill during the present session, and he therefore moved, that it be committed "this day three months," a proposition that was agreed to without opposition.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

AUGUST 27, 1839.

THE Parliament was this day prorogued, when Her Majesty in person delivered the following speech:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The public business having been brought to a close, I have now to perform the satisfactory duty of releasing you from your long and laborious attendance in Parliament.

"I rejoice that a definitive treaty between Holland and Belgium, negotiated by the mediation of the Five Powers, has settled the differences between these two countries, and has secured the peace of Europe from dangers to which it had so long been exposed. The same concord which brought these intricate questions to a peaceful termination prevails with regard to the affairs of the Levant. The Five Powers are alike determined to uphold the independence and integrity of the Ottoman empire; and I trust that this union will ensure a satisfactory settlement of matters which are of the deepest importance to the whole of Europe.

"It has afforded me the sincerest pleasure to have been able to assist in effecting a reconciliation between France and Mexico. Intent upon preserving for my subjects the blessings of peace, I am highly gratified where I can avail myself of an opportunity of removing misunderstandings between other Powers

"I have recently concluded with the King of the French a convention, calculated to put an end to differences which have arisen of late years between the fishermen of Great Britain and of France. This convention, by removing causes of dispute, will tend to cement that union between the two countries which is so advantageous to both, and so conducive to the general interests of Europe.

"I shall continue to pursue with perseverance the negotiations in which I am engaged to persuade all the powers of Christendom to unite in a general league for the entire extinction of the slave-trade; and I trust, that, with the blessing of Providence, my efforts in so righteous a cause will be rewarded with success.

"I regret that the differences which led to the withdrawal of my minister from the court of Teheran have not yet been satisfactorily adjusted by the government of Persia.

"In order to fulfil the engagements announced to you at the opening of the present session, the Governor General of India has moved an army across the Indus; and I have much satisfaction in being able to inform you, that the advance of that expedition has been hitherto unopposed; and there is every reason to hope that the important objects for which these military operations have been undertaken will finally be obtained.

"I have observed, with much approbation, the attention which you have bestowed upon the internal state and condition of the country. I entirely concur in the measures which you have framed for the preservation of order, the repression of crime, and the better administration of justice in this metropolis; and I have given a cordial assent to the bills which you have presented to me for the establishment of a more efficient constabulary force in those towns which peculiarly required it, and for effecting the important object of generally extending and invigorating the civil power throughout the country.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"I thank you for the zeal and readiness with which you have voted the supplies for the service of the year.

"It has been with satisfaction that I have given my consent to a reduction of the postage duties. I trust that the act which has passed on this subject will be a relief and encouragement to trade, and that by facilitating intercourse and correspondence, it will be productive of much social advantage and improvement. I have given directions that the preliminary step should be taken to give effect to the intention of Parliament, as soon as the inquiries and arrangements required for this purpose shall have been completed.

"The advantageous terms upon which a considerable amount of the unfunded debt has been converted into Stock, afford a satisfactory proof of the reliance placed on the credit and resources of the country, as well as on your determination to preserve inviolate the national faith.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"It is with great pain that I have found myself compelled to enforce the law against those who no longer concealed their design of resisting by force the lawful authorities, and of subverting the institutions of the country. The solemn proceedings of courts of justice, and the fearless administration of the law by all who are engaged in that duty, have checked the first attempts at insubordination; and I securely rely upon the good sense of my people, and upon their attachment to the constitution, for the maintenance of law and order, which are as necessary for the protection of the poor as for the welfare of the wealthier classes of the community."

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

BISHOP HEBER.

The following epitaph has just been inscribed on the pedestal of Chantry's fine monument of Bishop Heber in St. Paul's Cathedral:

"To the Memory of REGINALD HEBER, D.D., Lord Bishop of Calcutta,

This Monument was erected by those who loved and admired him.

His character exhibited a rare union
Of fervent zeal with universal tolerance,
Of brilliant talent with sober judgment;
And was especially distinguished by Christian humility,
Which no applause could disturb, no success abate.
He cheerfully resigned prospects of eminence at home,

In order to become
The chief Missionary of Christianity in the East;
And having, in the short space of three years,
visited the greater part of India,
And conciliated the affection and veneration
Of men of every class of Religion,
He was then summoned to receive the reward of his labours,
In the XLIII^d. Year of his age, MDCCCXXVI.

Thou art gone to the grave; but we will not deplore thee,
Though sorrow and darkness encompass the tomb;
The Saviour has past through its portals before thee,
And the lamp of His love is thy guide through the gloom.

Thou art gone to the grave; but 'twere vain to deplore thee,
When God was thy Ransom, thy Guardian, thy Guide;
He gave thee, He took thee, and He shall restore
thee;
And Death hath no sting since the Saviour hath died.

Petitions on the Educational Question.—A foolish paragraph has been going the round of the papers, professing to give the number of petitions and of signatures, and asserting the greatest number to have been on the subject of the corn-laws and of the penny postage. The fabricator doubtless had his own reasons for omitting all mention of the education-question, which, in fact, takes quite the lead of all other subjects in the reports on public petitions. The number of petitions and of signatures on this subject during the present session have been as follows:—

	Petitions.	Sigs.
For a national system	2	3,315
In favour of proposed scheme ..	103	53,331
Total	105	56,646
	Petitions.	Sigs.
Against any system not founded on the principles of the established Church	242	26,603
Against proposed scheme	3,138	387,480
Against the altered plan	25	2,954
For revoking the order in council	82	10,009
Total	3,487	427,046

The latter total exceeds every other of the session, and the more decidedly so, because this class of petitions have been almost entirely confined to Eng-land, while on other topics the petitions have come from every part of the three kingdoms.—Times.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, and the Bishop of Hereford, are among the recent arrivals at Great Malvern, which is becoming very full of fashionable company.—Worcester Journal.

METROPOLIS.

The arms of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury have lately been placed in one of the windows of Hornsey church. The artist is Mr. Evans, of Shrewsbury, who executed the very handsome painted window which is at the eastern end of the church, and also the arms of the Bishop of London, Lord Mansfield, and several gentlemen, which were placed some years since in the windows of the nave.

A new church in Soho, the first stone of which was laid about eighteen months ago by the Earl de Grey, underwent the ceremony of consecration by the Bishop of London, on the 23d of July last. This church is the largest that has been erected for several years in the metropolis, and cost altogether about 14,000*l*, 2,500*l*. of which was supplied by the commissioners for building churches, and upwards of 10,000*l*. was raised by voluntary subscriptions amongst the inhabitants of St. James's parish, and by others anxious for the dissemination of religious instruction. The building is in the Gothic style of architecture. The church contains ample accommodation for about 1,600 persons, from two to three hundred sittings being free. A great number of the nobility were present, amongst whom were the Archbishop of Armagh and family, Earl de Grey, the Countess of Lichfield, Lady Louisa Lincoln, &c.—Morning Herald.

PROVINCIAL.

The new chapel of ease at Noss Mayo, parish of Revelstoke, Devon, was consecrated by the Bishop of Exeter on the 8th ult.

A meeting of the archdeacon and clergy of Rochester took place lately, to carry into effect a scheme for the extension of education. This plan was to establish a school in the most convenient part of every parish, under the superintendence of the clergyman, and in which the doctrines of the Church of England only were to be taught—the funds for this purpose to be raised by subscription.

The ceremony of consecrating St. Peter's chapel, Maidstone, was performed on Thursday se'nnight, by his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury. This building, says the Maidstone Journal, was formerly the chapel of an hospitium for pilgrims and poor travellers, built by Boniface, Archbishop of Canterbury, about the year 1260, and dedicated to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Thomas a Beckett. The revenues of the institution were subsequently transferred to the college founded by Archbishop Courtenay, the hospitium disappeared, the chapel, the interior of which is a beautiful specimen of the early Gothic style of architecture, although disused for centuries for religious purposes, remained in a remarkable state of preservation, and by the exertions of the Rev. F. F. Haslewood and the liberality of the public, was, about two years since, restored, enlarged, the old part being preserved in its original state, and opened for the celebration of divine worship in the Established Church.

St. John's Chapel, Polperro, Cornwall.—On Tuesday, the 30th ult., this chapel was open for divine service, according to the rites of the Church of England. The chapel is intended to hold about 300 persons, besides 100 Sunday scholars, who have a gallery to themselves. The town of Polperro is between two or three miles from the parish church, and contains 800 inhabitants. The cost of the ground and every other expense, to the amount of about 1,000*l*. has been defrayed by the munificence of the rector of Lansallos, the Rev. W. Rawlings.

Ketley Church.—The consecration of this edifice was performed by the Bishop of Hereford on the 27th ult. The venerable Archdeacon Musgrave preached an eloquent and impressive sermon from St. John, iv. 24. The collection amounted to 30*l*. 0*s*. 10*d*. This chaste and beautiful structure has been erected and endowed at the sole expense of his Grace the Duke of Sutherland, the Lord-Lieut. of the county. The style of architecture is Gothic; the situation judicious and beautiful.

A new district church and burial-ground, dedicated to St. Augustine, near Flimwell, in the parish of Ticehurst, Sussex, was recently consecrated by the Bishop of Chichester.

The new church at Bickleigh, Devon, built on the site of the old church, at the sole cost of Sir Ralph Lopez, the lord of the manor, was consecrated by the Bishop of Exeter on the 15th ult.

Through the liberality of Miss Woods, of Shopwyke, the parish church of Oving is undergoing extensive repairs, and a new window is to be inserted at the eastern end. She has also caused a new rectory-house to be built, an excellent national school, and six neat almshouses, which have added much to the appearance of the village, and to the useful labours of the minister.—Sussex Express.

The Bishop of Exeter has received a letter from Lord John Russell, protesting against the interference of the Chapter or the Bishop with the rights of the Crown to nominate a dean, and giving his lordship notice that the Crown will take early legal proceedings to vindicate its rights and dignity.—Woolmer's Gazette.

Raumarsh Church.—This church, which has been rebuilt on a greatly enlarged scale, was opened for divine worship on the 8th instant. The Rev. J. James, the rector, read prayers, and a sermon was preached by Dr. Hook, vicar of Leeds, from the 12th ch. of Isaiah, 6th verse. In the course of his sermon, the rev. gentleman took occasion to eulogise the form and ceremonies observed by the Church, and quoted several authorities to prove the necessity of continuing the same. He also argued at some length on the propriety of having a prescribed form of prayer, which, he observed, could be corrected and justified by Scripture, when committed to paper, and that could not be done in extemporaneous prayer, where improper expressions and indecent familiarity were often used. The discourse was listened to with great attention, and such was the impression produced, that many were known to contribute that day towards the building who had previously been opposed to its erection. One gentleman gave 50*l.* in this manner. After the service the first stone of an infant school was laid by Miss James, assisted by the Rev. Wm. Bagshawe, of Banner Cross.—Leeds Intelligencer.

New Chapel at Hanham.—The liberal and munificent Dr. Warneford has given 400*l.* towards the building and endowing of a chapel at Hanham, near this city, and for providing a glebe-house for the incumbent serving the new church, on the express condition that at the nomination of the minister for the time being shall be in the bishop of the diocese. Subscriptions are received by Hatchard and Nesbitt.—Bristol Journal.

Peterborough Church-Rate.—A strong contest has been going on here for the last day or two, with respect to a church-rate. The poll, however, concluded on Tuesday, August 13, when the numbers were—

For the rate	403
Against it.. .. .	196

Majority in favour of the rate .. 207

The Rev. F. B. Gourrier, B.C.L., has been raising subscriptions in Cheltenham for the purpose of building an Episcopal Protestant church in Paris, where the Government does not uphold religion, and where the Sabbath is universally desecrated. A considerable number of gentlemen have subscribed to the fund.—Cheltenham Chronicle.

IRELAND.

The first stone of the new church at Portrush, near Coleraine, Ireland, was laid on the 5th instant, by the Bishop of the diocese.

The clergy of the diocese of Kildare, almost without a dissentient voice, have protested against the establishment of a college for the education of candidates for Holy Orders in the city of Dublin, unconnected with and not dependent on the university.

GRAY'S IMPROVED CHURCH BARREL ORGANS, in which all the defects of the ordinary instruments are entirely removed, and no bolt-work or shifting of the Barrels necessary.

DIRECTIONS.

Lift the worm A, which will raise the key frame, and at the same time relieve the worm from the teeth on the barrel.

Draw the pin B, and then turn the spindle C of the iron frame D, either way, as may be required for the change of tune.

When the tune is fixed upon, insert the pin B, and upon dropping the worm A, the barrel will be ready to perform.

The Clergy are respectfully invited to an inspection of these instruments, which will be found the best and cheapest of the kind yet manufactured. The main defects in the old instruments are, the uncertainty of the keys passing correctly over the pins arising from the brass bolt-work, which, however well manufactured, soon becomes rickety and imperfect in its action; the unavoidable damage to the clogged heads of the barrels in passing them under the brass worm every time they are changed (from these causes alone the hobbling performance of the tune, so frequent in the ordinary barrel-organ, arises), the liability of damage to the pins on a barrel when changed; the noise occasioned by bolt-work at every change of tune, and the inconvenience and in some instances the impossibility of changing the barrels during divine service, in which case the range of tunes under command is so limited that, with the greatest care in the selection and distribution of the various metres to be set on the barrels, a change of them is almost always necessary in each service; for instance, in many churches it is the custom to commence with the Morning Hymn, and when this is the case, the barrels must be frequently changed, or none but the limited collection of tunes on one barrel will ever be heard during the service.

JOHN GRAY & SON have by their invention removed all these defects so long complained of in the ordinary barrel-organs, and the truth of which every possessor of one will readily acknowledge. The annexed section will best explain the improvements.

The spindle of the iron frame D, being cut with an endless screw, a single revolution of it changes the tune on each barrel from the first to the second, and so on in succession, to the whole extent of them (thirty in number), a contrary revolution will, of course, produce a return to the first or any intermediate tune that may be desired, its number being ascertained by reference to an index on each barrel. No bolt-work whatever is necessary; and every change either of tune or barrel is effected with perfect silence and the greatest ease. Upon raising the worm A, it is immediately arrested by a self-acting sling, and there held until relieved by the finger of the barrel-turner after he has changed the tune or barrel, and at no time does any necessity arise for touching any part of the barrels with the hand; the possibility of damage to the pins (unless wilfully done) is therefore wholly removed.

Uniformity of plan enables JOHN GRAY & SON to supply these instruments at even less cost than the ordinary barrel-organ, the whole of the mechanism being comprised in one package, and may be set up without the assistance of an organ builder, a matter of no little consideration when required at a distance from the Metropolis. The instrument is wholly independent of an external case, which may, if preferred, be made in the country.

The same unerring principle is applied to an organ of a higher class, for both Finger and Barrels.

No. 1. In a handsome Gothic case 10 feet high, with gilt pipes, 60 Guineas.

2. Ditto size larger ditto 70 ditto.

3. Ditto ditto 90 ditto.

The instruments may be inspected and every explanation readily afforded, at the Manufactory of the Inventors, 9, New Road, Fitzroy-square.

A CLERGYMAN, possessing a Living, about 400*l.* a year, with a comfortable house, in a healthy village, may EXCHANGE it for one possessing similar advantages on the Suffolk coast, of greater value, as the Advertiser (aged 41) will make a sacrifice, provided he can effect an Exchange suitable to his views. KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL,
PORTUGAL STREET, LINCOLN'S INN.

PATRON.—HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
PRESIDENT.—HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND.

IN establishing a School of Medicine and Surgery in King's College, the Council have been influenced by the belief that many individuals who intend their sons for the Medical Profession, will gladly embrace an opportunity of placing them in connexion with an institution which has for its principal object to educate the rising generation in the doctrines of Christianity, as taught by the Established Church, and to fix in their minds the true principles of morality.

They believe, likewise, that every one who has the welfare of society at heart, and who has considered the most effectual means of promoting it, will feel an especial interest in the success of this part of their undertaking, under the conviction that the duties which devolve upon the Medical Profession are such as to render the religious and moral character of its members not less important than their practical and scientific attainments.

To render the system of Medical Education pursued in the College perfect, the connexion of a Hospital with it is absolutely indispensable.

Hitherto much inconvenience has resulted to the Pupils, and detriment to the College, from the want of a Hospital in the immediate vicinity of, and closely connected with, the College, in which the Students might receive practical instruction from their own Professors.

By the establishment of the proposed Hospital, however, the Medical Students will no longer be required to seek, at other places, that practical instruction which forms the essential part of a complete professional education; they will, on the contrary, be enabled to continue and complete their education at King's College, and they will thus, during the whole period of their residence in town, be placed within the immediate influence of religious instruction and good example.

An additional and a not less strong recommendation of King's College Hospital to the support of a charitable public, arises from the fact, that it is calculated to supply a want which has long been greatly felt by the extremely numerous poor population of a district which is at a considerable distance from the already overburdened institutions of the same class.

The Council of King's College therefore earnestly entreat the Public and the Friends of the College to come forward liberally, and to enable them speedily to carry into effect this benevolent and useful design; benevolent, as it is calculated to relieve the wants of the sick poor of a densely-populated district of the metropolis; and useful to the public at large, as affording the means of effectually extending, to a large number of Medical Students annually, the moral and religious advantages which a King's College education affords.

Donations and Annual Subscriptions will be received by Mr. Alderman Copeland, M.P. Treasurer; by the Rev. J. Lonsdale, B.D., Principal; by Dr. Todd, Hon. Secretary; at the Secretary's Office in the College; and by the principal Bankers in London.

N.B. A Donation of Thirty Guineas, or an Annual Subscription of Three Guineas, constitutes a Governor, with the privilege of a Vote and of recommending Patients.

GREAT ADVANTAGES OFFERED by the UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 8, WATERLOO-PLACE, Pall-Mall, and 2, CHARLOTTE-Road, Mansion-House, London.—This Company, established by Act of Parliament, affords the most perfect security from an ample capital, and only requires, when an insurance is for the whole period of life, one half of the very moderate premiums to be paid for the first five years after the date of the policy; the other half may remain, subject to the payment of interest at five per cent. annually, to be deducted at death, or may previously be paid off at convenience.

It obviously becomes easy for a person of very moderate income to secure by this arrangement a provision for his family; and should he at any time after effecting the insurance succeed to, or acquire, a fortune, he may relinquish his policy, having only paid one-half the premiums for the first five years, instead of the whole, as in all other Companies.

Thus a man of 25 years old may, by an annual payment of 28*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* for the first five years, and afterwards by paying yearly the full premium of 57*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* secure to his widow and children at his death payment of no less than 3,000*l.* subject only to the deduction of 144*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* with interest, being the amount of premium unpaid.

This Company holds out, in various other respects, great inducements to the public. When such facilities are afforded it is clearly a moral duty in every parent who is not possessed of a fortune, but of an income, however moderate, to insure his life for a sum which may yield a comfortable provision for his family.

"Most worthy of the pulpit where they were preached, and of the well-known reputation of the author. They are composed evidently with that care and research which proves the author's respect to the learned congregation to whom they were addressed. To the clergy we should say that they will find some of the most important subjects connected with our religious faith treated of in this volume, with such discretion, and sobriety, and soundness, that it will be hardly a matter of choice, whether it would not be advisable to adopt the line of argument pointed out by the author, and accommodate it by more familiar illustration, and more common usage of speech to their own less enlightened congregations."—Christianity's Magazine, Sept., 1839.

THE CHURCHES of LONDON: a History and Description of the Seventy-Five Parochial Ecclesiastical Edifices of the Metropolis. By GEORGE GODWIN, Jun., Architect, F.R.S. and F.S.A., and JOHN BRITTON, Esq., F.R.S.A. Illustrated by 116 Views, engraved on Steel and Wood. From Drawings by MACKENZIE and BILLINGS.

"The publishers of this interesting and elegant series have brought their work to a close. It is appropriately dedicated to the Bishop of London, who has done so much in preserving some of the City's most ancient ecclesiastical structures from destruction, in the various improvements that have been made in the different streets, as well as for his Lordship's exertions to increase the number of places of worship. As an instance of the care with which this publication has been conducted, it ought to be mentioned that in the concluding number the proprietor has presented other impressions where the former plates had been accidentally issued in a style inferior to the best of the series. The publishers promise a continuation of the series, to consist of the churches of Westminster, Southwark, and the suburbs; should the work now concluded meet with the favour which it fully merits."—Records, August 5, 1839.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. HODGSON, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. Members are secured from personal liability by the special provisions of an Act of Parliament.

Attention has been gradually awakened amongst all orders of the Clergy, to the important uses of this SOCIETY, and the business of it has very considerably increased within the last year, and is increasing every week. If it should be found, as by many it is supposed it will be, that life is of longer duration on an average amongst the Clergy than amongst the community at large, Profits upon Life Assurance in this SOCIETY will result in a corresponding ratio. The whole of these Profits will be returned. A Life Assurance Policy is entitled to its full share of profit from the day of its date. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below; and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841.

DURING the last month we have had several communications from correspondents, which we should have been glad to have acknowledged and answered in detail, but our contracted space will not allow us to do so. As some of these have been inquiries involving points of Ecclesiastical Law, we think it right to state, that we must always decline giving opinions upon such points, but we will do our best to afford information. One of our correspondents justly observes, that a new digest of Ecclesiastical and Parochial Law is a great desideratum, on account of the many new laws which have been made. We are unable to furnish another correspondent with "the number of Deacons ordained by Bishops of the Anglican Church, in each of the years from 1829 to 1838 inclusive; and the number of recorded deaths among the Clergy during the same period."

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

OCTOBER, 1839.

The Rev. WILLIAM SHORT in the Chair.

At the General Meeting of the Society, held on Tuesday, the 1st of October, 1839, a letter was read from the Rev. W. Dodsworth, requesting that the notice of motion, given by him on the 2nd of July last, should be renewed.

The Rev. T. M. Fallow, in behalf of Mr. Dodsworth, accordingly renewed the notice, which is as follows:—

"That, at the November meeting, an additional sum of five thousand pounds be granted by the Board in furtherance of the objects of the National Society, as set forth in the Resolutions contained in the Monthly Report of this Society for June, 1839."

A letter of acknowledgment from the General Committee of the National Society, for the grant of five thousand pounds, made in July last, was read to the Board.

Mr. Hull renewed his notice of motion for the General Meeting in November next; namely,

"That his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury be requested to appoint responsible editors to prepare Commentaries on the Old Testament, the Epistles, and the Revelation, in order to complete the Society's new edition of the Bible, so that the whole Bible may be ready for publication at the same time at which Mr. Lonsdale and Mr. Hale may publish their Commentary on the Four Gospels and the Acts."

The following Report from the Standing Committee, which was read to the Board at the General Meeting in July, was taken into consideration:—

The Standing Committee beg to report to the Board, that having taken into consideration the prices at which books are at present supplied to District Committees, and having also referred the subject to the consideration of the Sub-Committee for Finance, they are of opinion that it is expedient to relinquish the claim of the Society upon the District Committees, for the differences between cost price and members' price upon all books sold by them to non-members, or for the payment of 10 per cent, which has been paid by many of those Committees in lieu of those differences; and that in future District Committees should be supplied with the books at Members' prices.

They therefore beg to recommend, that certain of the Rules for District Committees should be altered in the following manner; namely,

That in the 8th Rule, the words, "Provided they account to the Parent Society for the difference between the Members' price and the cost price of the books so disposed of," be omitted.

That the 11th Rule stand thus: "That Parochial Clergymen, making pecuniary collections for the use of their respective parishes, may obtain books at Members' prices, to the whole amount of such collection, either from the Parent Society, or from the District Committees."

That in the 3rd and 4th Rules for Foreign District Committees, the words "Members' prices" be substituted for "Cost prices."

The Standing Committee beg at the same time to recommend, that the 9th Rule for District Committees be strictly enforced, so as to prevent them, as far as possible, from falling into arrears with the Society.

With reference to the alteration of the 23d Rule of the Society, which was referred to their consideration at the General Meeting in March, the Standing Committee recommend that it stand as follows:

"That members be at liberty to apply for books at non-members' price for any purpose; but that no member be at liberty to apply for books on the terms of the Society, except for his own use and distribution, or for sale to the poor, or for the use of charitable institutions with which he is locally or parochially connected: and that a copy of this rule be annexed to the printed form of application for books."

It was agreed, that this report be adopted.

A memorial was laid before the meeting, signed by the Rev. Hastings Robinson, D.D., the Rev. Henry Budd, the Rev. Guy Bryan, the Rev. C. J. Yorke, and the Rev. H. B. S. Harris, respecting the proceedings of the Board in directing that certain memorials which they had forwarded, respecting the tracts of the Society, and which had been read at former meetings (May and July), should lie on the table.

This memorial having been read, it was moved by Mr. Alexander Gordon,

"That the Standing Committee be requested to take into further consideration the several memorials presented to the Society by five clergymen in Essex, and to report their opinion, whether any and what steps should be taken in reference thereto."

This was seconded by Mr. JOHN POYNTER, and, having been put from the chair, was negatived.

A letter was read from the Rev. E. B. Ramsey, Edinburgh, forwarding a request from the "Scottish Episcopal Church Society," for a grant of Bibles and Common Prayer-Books, for the purposes of the Schools connected with that Society, and for the use of poor persons.

By the fortieth Canon of the Scottish Episcopal Church, a copy of which was contained in this letter, and under which the Church Society was constituted, it appeared that the object stated in Mr. Ramsey's letter was among the designs contemplated by the Ecclesiastical Synod of August, 1838.

It was agreed to grant Bibles and Common Prayer-Books to the amount of 100l.

The Rev. R. Stainforth, Secretary to the Pontefract Board of Education, informed the Society, by letter, that that Institution had formed a plan for advancing the cause of Scriptural education throughout the twenty-three parishes in the Pontefract Call of the Archdeaconry of York, comprising a population of 23,000 persons, by establishing School Libraries in each of the parishes. For the purpose of aiding the efforts now making by many excellent friends of religion and of the Church in that district, he requested a grant of Books from the Society to the value of 30l.

The Board, which is under the patronage of the Lord Archbishop of York, and the Presidency of the Archdeacon of York, comprises a large district. The Board agreed to grant the Books required.

A letter was read from the Rev. Haviland Durand, requesting the renewal of a grant of French Bibles, New Testaments, and Common Prayer-Books, for the use of the Sunday Schools in the island of Guernsey; a large gratuitous supply having been made for this purpose about four years since.

It was agreed that Books, amounting to Fifty Pounds, be granted accordingly.

A letter was read from Rear-Admiral Hawker, calling the attention of the Board to the present state of South Australia, and especially to the town of Adelaide, in that colony, the increase in the population of which is stated to be very great. The following is an extract from this letter:—"Thousands of settlers, chiefly labourers, are going out yearly, and the desire to emigrate rather increases than diminishes. A second church is building at Adelaide, and another at Port Lincoln. It is of great consequence that the members of the Church of England should be amply supplied with the means of religious instruction, and for the public services of religion. I have, therefore, to request you will be so kind as to apply for as large a supply of Common Prayer-Books for this colony as the Society may be so good as to grant, together with some Bibles, New Testaments, &c., for which I am sure Governor Gawler will be very thankful."

The Board granted Books amounting to Fifty Pounds for this purpose.

A letter was read from H. B. Tymbs, Esq., stating that the Directors of the Birmingham and Gloucester Railway had assigned an annual sum for the purpose of supplying some means of religious instruction to the workmen employed on the line, and that Captain W. S. Moorson (the engineer) and himself had been commissioned to make the requisite arrangements. He therefore requested a gratuitous grant of Books for schools for "the driving boys," and a selection of Bibles, New Testaments, and Tracts for a Lending Library for the men.

Mr. Tymbs not having furnished a list, it was agreed, that the requisite Books be granted at the discretion of the Secretaries.

Colonel Wingrove, of the Royal Marines, Woolwich, applied for 534 Common Prayer-Books, for the use of the non-commissioned officers and privates of the Woolwich division.

These were granted by the Board.

A letter was read from the Chaplain-general, requesting a supply of tracts for the sick in hospital at Glasgow.

No list having been sent, the books were granted at the discretion of the Secretaries.

The Rev. J. Buchanan, Secretary to the Gibraltar District Committee, having applied for some Spanish books for the use of the Rev. L. Lucena's schools, they were granted by the Board.

The Rev. Dr. Burrow stated in a letter from Gibraltar, that Mr. Lucena's schools there had increased so considerably as to render it absolutely necessary, at the commencement of the hot weather, either to reduce and limit the number of scholars, or to find adequate accommodation for the newcomers. The Gibraltar Committee, preferring the latter alternative, and presuming on the approval and assistance of the Society, had added to the space and thereby incurred an additional charge of 38l., which they hoped would be allowed by the Board.

This was at once acceded to by the Meeting.

An interesting communication was made by the Rev. W. Morgan, of Bradford, Yorkshire, by which it appeared, that notwithstanding the efforts of ill-disposed persons towards drawing away the children of the poor from religion and the church, and inducing them to profane the Lord's day, much good was being done by means of scriptural instruction in that populous town. The Christ Church National Week-day School, superintended by Mr. Morgan, contains about 200 boys and 200 girls, and is greatly in need of books. The Christ Church Sunday School, which is not connected with the Day School, numbers 800 scholars.

The Board granted books amounting to 10l.

A letter was received from the Rev. N. Garstin, Secretary to the newly-formed District Committee at Kandy, Ceylon, acknowledging the Society's former grant of books, and soliciting further aid.

Books from both catalogues, amounting to 25l., were granted.

Books were then granted, to the amount of 10l., for the use of the schools at Wynberg, Cape of Good Hope, on the application of Miss Lloyd.

A letter was read from the Rev. John Davies, of Runcorn, he having removed from Worcester, where he had kindly exerted himself for the religious welfare of the boatmen and bargemen belonging to the river Severn, and the Worcester and Birmingham canal.

Mr. Davies having alluded to the benefits which had resulted from Mr. Lingard's labours in behalf of the persons employed on the Mersey and Irwell navigation, near Runcorn, informed the Society that there are two other navigations in that district, namely, the Bridgewater canal and the river Weaver; the men employed upon which have been an improving class since they have been allowed to rest on the Lord's day. He says, "It gives me much pleasure to be able to state that drunkenness, swearing, and other vices to which bargemen and boatmen are so generally addicted, are evidently fast diminishing in this vicinity; pains having been taken by benevolent individuals to instruct them, and the privilege of the Sabbath being to a considerable extent granted them."

The Board agreed to grant the books required for this good object.

The Ven. J. O. Oldfield, Archdeacon of Elphin, applied for a gratuitous grant of New Testaments and Common Prayer-Books, for the use of poor Protestants in that diocese, who are unable to purchase them for themselves, even at a low price. The incomes of the clergy in many parts of Ireland have been so much reduced of late years, and the general difficulty of their circumstances has been so pressing, as to prevent them from supplying books at their own cost.

The Bishop of Elphin strongly recommended this application to the notice of the Board.

Five hundred New Testaments and one thousand Common Prayer-Books were granted accordingly.

A letter was read from the Rev. R. Spencer, thankfully acknowledging the Society's grant of 200l. towards the erection of a Church at Albany, Western Australia.

Several other letters of acknowledgment were laid before the meeting.

Eighteen sets of books, for the performance of Divine service in new Churches and Chapels were granted. Besides these, forty-two grants of books were made for various objects.

Fifty-six new members were admitted at this meeting.

The following donations to the Foreign Translation Fund were announced:—

Dover and Sandwich Committee .. £20
Crewkerne Committee 10

Four legacies were reported.

The annual report of the Society for 1839 was laid before the meeting.

Copies of the "Account of the Origin, Objects, and General Proceedings of the Society," were distributed among the members present.

Tuesday, the 5th of November next, being the anniversary of the Gunpowder Treason, for which an Epistle and Gospel are appointed in the book of Common Prayer, the Monthly Meeting of the Society will, in pursuance of the 14th rule, be held on Tuesday, the 12th.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

Oct. 1839.

ORDINATION OF MISSIONARIES.

ON Sunday, 22d Sept, Mr. Thomas Boone, Mr. J. Vicars, and Mr. G. A. Addison, nominated to missions in Newfoundland, by the bishop of that diocese, were ordained Deacons by the Archbishop of Canterbury, at Lambeth. These gentlemen, together with the Rev. W. Bowman, have already sailed. The Bishop of Newfoundland set sail on the 1st inst., on his way back to Bermuda.

FROM THE FORTHCOMING REPORT OF THE SOCIETY.

"It is computed that 300 additional clergymen might be advantageously employed at the present time in the British colonies; and supposing that the Society allowed stipends, amounting on the average to 100*l.* a-year, to each of these clergymen, the increased expenditure for the colonies alone would be 30,000*l.* a-year. The demand for new missions and additional missionaries to the heathen must also be taken into consideration, and on the whole it may be said that three times the amount of the present annual subscriptions, or 60,000*l.* a-year, are required in order to place the operations of the Society on an adequate scale.

"That the whole of this very large sum can be raised at once, it would be rash to assert. But looking at what is done by other institutions, both among Churchmen and Dissenters, there seems no reason to despair of obtaining it at no very distant time. It cannot be admitted that the claims of the Society are less urgent, the field of their labours less extensive, or the number of their friends less considerable than those of any other missionary establishment. The division of the whole land into dioceses, archdeaconries, rural deaneries and parishes, may supply an organisation as complete as can be desired for the establishment of committees and associations, and nothing more is necessary than to bring this machinery to bear upon the great body of the English nation. There are still many of our great towns, and many of our richest agricultural districts where the religious destitution of the colonies, and the efforts of the Society to relieve it, are equally unknown. And they can only pray fervently to the Giver of all Good to put an end to this ignorance, and to stir up the minds of his faithful people, and strengthen them for the discharge of their duty.

"The intelligence received from India during the past year is on the whole of a gratifying character. The Bishop of Calcutta prefaces his charge to his clergy, delivered in the year 1838, with an address to the Bishops of Madras and Bombay, congratulating them on their happy arrival in their dioceses. By that event the framework of the Protestant church in India, as his Lordship observes, is completed, after a lapse of more than twenty-four years from the erection of the see of Calcutta; and every friend to the propagation of the Gospel will rejoice at this blessed consummation. The prospects which it opens before us, need not be pointed out to any one who takes an interest in the cause of missions. But it also affords a strong argument for renewed and increasing efforts to avail ourselves of the opportunities which are offered for spreading the name of Christ over the whole peninsula of India, after the urgent and repeated applications which the Society and other religious bodies have made to the British government for an increase in the Indian Episcopate, it would argue a great want of zeal, and a still greater want of gratitude, and of faith, were the members of the Church of England to shrink from the burden now at length imposed upon them. Each of the new dioceses erected in British India must become a centre of new missionary operations, new at least in the extent to which they are carried, as in the superintendence they will enjoy. And where ten or twenty European clergymen have hitherto been considered as the greatest number the Society were required or enabled to maintain, there will be an irresistible demand upon them for three times that amount, as well as for a still larger addition to the number of native priests, catechists, and schoolmasters, and means must be provided for meeting the additional cost of a largely increased establishment."

The Bishop of Calcutta speaks in the following terms of the Society's principal missions in Bengal:—

"India seems to me given to us as the field of missions. Palestine in the heart of Western Asia was scarcely more calculated for a centre for the diffusion of the Gospel in the time of the Apostles, than Hindostan in the heart of Eastern is now.

"In the revolution of ages," observed Bishop Middleton, "no event has apparently been more propitious to the interests of the Gospel than the acquisition by a Christian state of Hindostan. I do not except the discovery of America."

MADRAS.

The Bishop in a letter, dated June 4, 1839, informs the Society that he has admitted Mr. Von Dadelson and Mr. Schmitz into Deacon's orders, and expresses a conviction that they will prove a valuable acquisition to the Society's missionaries in his diocese. The Bishop concludes his letter thus:—"We have still many important stations unoccupied, and I cannot too earnestly impress upon the Society the claims and necessities of Southern India. Continue to send us labourers fit for the work, and I humbly hope our labour will not be in vain in the Lord."

BOMBAY.

The report contains an urgent application from the Bishop for missionaries from England. Especially for the province of Goojurat, where there are a considerable number of Indo-British. The following is the concluding paragraph of the Bishop's letter:—"Let me, dear Sir, plead for Goojurat, if you cannot send two missionaries, could you not send out one missionary and a schoolmaster? I pray that it may please God to direct the heart of some one toward us."

During the last month the Rev. A. M. Campbell, the secretary, has been attending several meetings in North and South Wales, at which great interest in the proceedings of the Society has been excited. Much of the effect produced in the principality is due to the active support given to the Society by the Lord Bishop of Bangor, who himself presided at the meetings held at Caernarvon, Beaumaris, Amlwch, and Bangor.

Extract from a speech of the Rev. Edward Bickersteth, at a public meeting held at Hertford on the 17th Sept.

"To revert to the Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, especially in connexion with our colonies. Let us look for a moment at our possessions in the colonies. There are seventy distinct possessions in different parts of the world, scattered over the whole earth. In them there are one hundred and one millions of fellow-subjects, (I speak from official returns,) and probably another 100 millions under our influence. These possessions are so situated as to surround every quarter of the globe;—all round Africa, going largely into Asia, covering North America, with the West India Islands in the centre, &c. The colonies of the British empire are contact with and spread over the whole earth. God raised us up from among the Reforming Churches with the purest faith, and blessed us with extent of dominion, and commerce, and influence. Can it be for a small purpose, or of little moment, that God has given to Great Britain a talent of greater weight and responsibility than tongue can utter? I feel that it rests upon us in the ministry and in the Church of England, and on all who value our national institutions, our beloved Established Church, to make it the blessing of the whole earth. The Society for Propagating the Gospel gives us great advantage. I rejoice in its mitred prelates, seeing that they give this Society such enlarged access for doing good through our colonies. I pray that all who see the benefits already conferred, will, with one heart and mind, facilitate its exertions in all parts of the world. I do feel that the Church of England, by this Society, will be an amazing blessing throughout the world. But a solemn responsibility lies upon us. The more attacked and the more scorned is that Church, the more determined ought to be our adherence to it. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel has taken a most noble position. When the government withdrew the grant, weaker societies would have contracted their issues; but this society did not. It said, 'We will increase our exertions;' and let us show that we accord and agree with them. I felt it an important duty notwithstanding I have other societies, to have in my parish a district association in aid of this society; and although but of a very recent date, I am happy to say that a sum of 28*l.* has been realised. I cannot but feel with my friend Mr. Faithfull, that we have not done enough to make this Society known."

Extract from a letter of the Hon. and Rev. S. Best.

"I have just returned from Portsmouth, and from attending a succession of meetings in the deanery of Droxford, which conclude, at least for a time, my labours on behalf of our Society; and I am now better able to render you an account of them. I have attended in all twenty-eight, commencing with Southampton and different isolated meetings in Wiltshire, going regularly through the principal towns of Dorset, and ending with those in North Hants, within the deanery of Droxford. I earnestly hope, and have every reason to believe, that, under God's blessing, the public explanation of the objects and labours of the Society that these meetings have elicited, will tend materially to the increase of its funds, and to what is far more valuable, to increased co-operation on the part of all classes in the good and holy work to which it invites us. I have, in several instances, witnessed its practical good result on its promoters, who, in coming forward to further the knowledge of God abroad, have induced on themselves His blessing in promoting their own at home. Those dissenting from our Church have come forward and joined in the cause of missionary exertions,—perhaps the best neutral ground on which we can meet; while, in other cases, the districts that have been established in large populations for the purposes of collecting funds and of circulating the reports, have, with the greatest advantage to the places so exerting themselves, been turned into district visiting societies for general purposes. I mention these as important practical results from reverting, as this Society calls us to do, to principles; and I cannot help (I hope in no Utopian mood) believing, that were it carried out in every parish of the kingdom, union and strength would be the result to the Church at home, as well as its establishment on a safe and scriptural basis abroad. These reflections have led me from the details that I had proposed to have laid before you; but I doubt whether I should not more profitably occupy my time in submitting to you some observations that I have made in the course of my tour, than in merely detailing the results at particular places, which will, doubtless, be made known to you through the different local secretaries. By them I have in all cases been most kindly received, met, and seconded in carrying out the views and wishes of the Society. Parochial associations have been in most cases formed at the meetings, and many others are promised as the result of the manner in which the Society has taken up the cause. I was very generally applied to by the clergy for the books and 'Suggestions for the Formation of Parochial Associations' with which you furnished me; and I doubt not, ere another annual meeting is held, the number of these will have very generally increased. With this increase a question will immediately suggest itself as to meeting the call that may, in consequence, be expected on the Society for the attendance of a deputation. Arrangement and organization will, for the future, have much to do with the success that may be expected, and attention should be immediately directed to this, that there may be both economy of time and labour, without which the work cannot be done. When the decanal system is adopted it is impossible to find any organization so efficient or so consistent with Church principles; and if in every diocese a diocesan board could be established, consisting of the rural deans and secretaries, with certain of whom as diocesan secretaries the arrangement and succession of the meetings should lie, and who should then call in such assistance,—as a deputation,—as may be locally most convenient, much time and unnecessary exertion might be spared. Among the parishes I would suggest unions of two or three, holding an annual evening meeting in each parish in succession; so that by a triennial meeting at least the interest might be kept up. This must principally be effected by the circulation of the reports and papers; and as it would be too great an expense to the Society to furnish to all its subscribers its reports, I would suggest that cartridge paper covers for the reports, ruled like those used in book-clubs should be furnished, and the reports in this manner circulated among all the annual subscribers to whatever amount. The financial result of the twenty-eight meetings I have attended I should have some difficulty in giving you accurately; but I do not think it will be found to be less than 650*l.*, independent of what we may anticipate from parochial associations formed in consequence of them, which will not now appear. I have still before me a meeting at Devizes, and others at smaller places, the times of which are not yet appointed."

Letter from the Rev. S. Wilberforce to the Rev. the Secretary of the Society.

Ilfracombe, Oct. 2, 1839.

REV. SIR,—As a month has passed since I sent you a report of my proceedings in these parts on behalf of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, I think you will expect another communication from me. I thank God that I am again able to report to you that it has pleased Him visibly to bless and prosper this great cause. The hopes that I ventured to indulge when I last wrote to you, have been, and are being realized around me; and these two great counties are rousing themselves to a becoming interest in the great missionary work of our national Church. When I last wrote I was just entering on the mining district, and, consequently, on the stronghold of Methodism in Cornwall; and I was prepared to look for little success in that district for a cause so closely connected with our Church. These anticipations, however, I am thankful to say, were not borne out by the event. Our meetings were attended by large numbers of all classes. The habits of the miners make them a remarkably intelligent race; and their interest in the facts detailed to them was marked and encouraging. Our collections will prove that we met with cordial support. Repeatedly it happened that those who came into the room with an evident expression of unconcerned curiosity, became deeply interested as the meeting proceeded; frequently, I have reason to believe, not only in the actual details, but in the new view presented to them of the living energy of what they still remember as their fathers' Church. The presence and active cooperation of the Bishop has been throughout of the utmost importance, not only for our present success, but in creating this salutary impression. His zealous interest in our cause, and his willingness to add to all his other labours, the task of presiding at our meetings, placed the episcopal office before all the people in its true character, as the spring and director of Christian exertion. The happiest results have been the consequence in many instances. But it is time I gave you a detailed list of our proceedings.

On Monday, September 2, two meetings were held at Truro; that in the morning with the Bishop in the chair, was attended by many of the surrounding gentry and clergy, as well as the townsmen of Truro. The beautiful school-room overflowed with a most attentive audience: and the evening meeting, held for the working classes, who could not be present in the morning, was no less crowded and attentive. Additional annual subscriptions to the amount of almost 20*l.* were given in the room, and the whole sum raised at the meetings (including new subscriptions) amounted to 49*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*, making, with the collection at the church the day before, a total from Truro alone, in two days, of 81*l.* 5*s.* Nothing can more clearly show, that all which is needed to place our funds in their proper condition is to let our case be known; for it was stated by the district secretary, that the whole of Cornwall in the year preceding had only contributed about 10*l.* more than this very sum. On the following day the Bishop presided at a meeting at Redruth, at which 7*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* was collected, and an association formed. Upon the 5th he again took the chair at Falmouth, when, in spite of a most unpropitious day, we held a successful meeting, obtained many new subscribers, and collected at the door 14*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* The following day I preached at St. Ives, and collected 32*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* On Sunday, May 8, having been joined by my brother, the Rev. Henry W. Wilberforce, I preached in the morning at Penzance (collection, 27*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*), and in the evening at Hellston (collection 15*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*), he in the morning at St. Hilary (collection, 4*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*), and in the evening at Penzance (collection 14*l.*). On the next day I met the Bishop at a meeting at Hellston, at which, with 16*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* contributed by new subscribers, a donation of 25*l.* from the Rev. Canon Rogers, and 15*l.* sent in after the close of the meeting, we received 76*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* On Tuesday evening, the 10th, I preached at Mawgan church, where, in spite of the pressing labour of the harvest, followed by a stormy evening, 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* were given to the work. On the 11th I attended at Penzance, where the Bishop took the chair at a most efficient meeting, at which, with many new subscriptions, 39*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* was added to the 41*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* given on the Sunday. Of the good effects of this meeting, especially amongst the middle classes, I have since received the happiest assurances. On the 13th I attended an evening meeting at Hayle, which, in spite of pouring rain, was crowded with a most attentive audience. In this work the Rev. J. Punnett, and my brother, gave me most effectual aid, and 7*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* was collected at the door. The next day I was present at two meetings; one in the morning with the Bishop in the chair, and Mr. Pendarves (a county member) moving the first resolution, seconded by the Archdeacon of Cornwall, at Camborne, where we formed an association, and with many new subscribers, collected 14*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*: the other in the afternoon, at Illogan, the Rev. G. Treweeke, the rector, presiding, where 11*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* was subscribed annually in the room, making, with the collection, a total of 20*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* On Sunday the 15th three sermons were preached for the Society, both by my brother and myself: I preaching in the morning at Falmouth (collection, 21*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*), in the afternoon at Penryn (collection, 14*l.* 10*s.* 11*d.*) in the evening, at Gwennap (collection, 6*l.* 1*s.* 0*d.*); my brother in the morning at Mylor (collection, 4*l.* 10*s.*), in the afternoon at Pendweir chapel (collection, 4*l.* 12*s.* 7*d.*), and in the evening at Falmouth (collection, 6*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*). On the day following, Monday, Sept. 16, I attended a meeting at Gwennap, where 18*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.* was contributed, of which, 11*l.* 4*s.* was pledged as annual subscriptions, and 5*l.* was a donation from the Rev. F. Flamank.

Having now visited all the leading places in this part of Cornwall, I set out to join the Archdeacon of Totness, and visit with him several towns in his own neighbourhood, whilst the Bishop was continuing his confirmations along the northern part of the county. On Tuesday the 17th, on our way to Dartington, I attended two meetings at Plympton and Toybridge, and my brother two with the Rev. R. Luney, (your Plymouth district secretary) at Yealmpton, where about 8*l.* was collected; and at Modbury. Both at Plympton and Toybridge the greatest interest was shown in our cause; 12*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* was collected and subscribed at the former place, (and through the zeal of the Rev. Mr. Coppard, a large number of subscribers have since put down their names), 6*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* at the latter. The next morning the archdeacon took me to a meeting at Paignton, where Mr. Gee, the vicar, presided, and 17*l.* 2*s.*, with many subscribers, was the beginning of a new association. In the evening the archdeacon again took me to a meeting held at Totness, where my brother assisted me in making known our case, and 28*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* in donations and subscriptions were contributed. The next day, Thursday the 19th, we went, under the archdeacon's guidance, to the town of Dartmouth, where an association was formed, annual subscriptions amounting to 11*l.* 6*s.* contributed, and 9*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* collected in the room. Hence we went on to Brixham, where, with Governor Holdsworth in the chair, and the Archdeacon present, an association was established. The Rev. F. Lyte, and my brother, helping on our cause by excellent addresses: 9*l.* 10*s.* was given in the room as annual subscriptions; 9*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.* as donations. The day following my brother left me, and I set out with the archdeacon to meet the Bishop at Launceston. At Ashburton, on our road, we held a meeting, at which (with a donation from the Dean of Westminster of 25*l.*) 59*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* was added to our funds. On Sunday the 22nd I preached at Launceston in the morning, collecting 11*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*, and at North Hill in the afternoon, collection, 8*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.* On the 23rd I visited Camelford, where the Rev. T. Grylls, your district secretary, kindly met me from Cardynham, and at an evening meeting an association was set up, and 13*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.* contributed. The next day the Bishop took the chair at Launceston, where, after an admirable meeting, 37*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* was received in new annual subscriptions and donations. On the 25th, at a meeting which I next attended at Stratton, 33*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* (including 14*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.* from new annual subscribers,) was received. With this place closed my journey in Cornwall, which had been cheered everywhere by a hospitality and universal kindness, which showed both the ordinary character of its inhabitants, and also their cordial sympathy with my endeavours.

On the 26th the Bishop visited at Oakhampton, and the next day presided at a meeting at which 18*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* was given and subscribed. On the 28th after the visitation at Torrington, a meeting was held, Lord Clinton in the chair, at which 17*l.* 14*s.* 0*d.* was collected. On Sunday the 29th I preached for the Society at Ilfracombe (collection, 20*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*), in the morning, and to a magnificent congregation at Barnstaple at night (collection, 26*l.*). At Linton, which I could not reach, a sermon was preached for us by the Rev. Mr. Hayes, and 12*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.* raised. On Monday the 30th an evening meeting was held at Bideford, where 46*l.* 6*s.* 0*d.* was raised in donations and new annual subscriptions. Mr. Buck, the Member for North Devonshire, opening the meeting under the presidency of the venerable Archdeacon of Barnstaple. On the next morning an excellent meeting was held at Barnstaple, the Bishop in the chair, supported by the Archdeacon Barnes,—the two county Members, Sir T. Acland and Mr. Buck, and Mr. Hodgson, the Member for the city. The Guild Hall was thronged by a most attentive audience, 42*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* given and subscribed on the occasion. To day again two meetings have been held; one at Ilfracombe this morning, where, with the Vicar, Mr. Chanter, in the chair, I stated the case of the Society, and an association was established, and 11*l.* 7*s.* added in Subscriptions and Donations to the Sunday's collection; the other meeting was held this evening at Southmolton, the Archdeacon Barnes presiding. Many neighbouring clergy were with us; and a new district association was begun, as well as the foundation laid for several parochial societies. The Rev. T. Bevan was appointed district secretary; F. Damer, Esq., treasurer: 8*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.* was collected in the room, and 6*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* subscribed. Such is the sketch of my proceedings hitherto. Some very important places remain to be visited. But to this time, thank God, our success has far exceeded all my expectations. Very many parishes are formed into associations; and it is delightful to see how the poor appear to feel the value of their Church when it is thus showed them as a living spreading body, carrying out salvation to the heathen, instead of being deemed of as an empty name. Their contributions also are ready for their means. Both at Barnstaple at Church, and at the meeting held at Bideford, between 20 and 30 shillings were put into the plates in the pence and half pence of the poor. Such offerings, doubtless, are accepted of the Lord. Let me ask for the continuance of your prayers, that He may still be with me, and bless me in the work.

Believe me to remain, most truly yours,
SAMUEL WILBERFORCE.

P. S. I would add that the clergy who have set up parochial associations, have, for the most part, found them readily supported: in the town of Fowey, where but two persons heretofore subscribed, I have just heard that since our meeting seventy-eight names have been given in. The total sum raised since I wrote last to you, and of which I have now given the details, is 875*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* making altogether 1,210*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*

EDUCATION.

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF THE COMMITTEE OF COUNCIL ON EDUCATION, SEPTEMBER 24, 1839.

READ an account of the applications for pecuniary aid to schools in Great Britain, not including applications for endowment, under the 1st and 2nd Victoria, cap. 87.

The Lords of the Committee deliberate as to the best manner of effecting the objects contemplated in the vote of the last session. The sum voted is 30,000*l.*; the number of applications is already 307; the number of scholars to be educated in the proposed schools is 58,302, and the amount applied for is 48,590*l.*

The Lords of the Committee observe that in a large proportion of the applications now before them the memorialists have commenced, or undertaken, the erection of school-houses, in the expectation of receiving pecuniary assistance from Her Majesty's Government upon conditions similar to those which were required by the Lords of the Treasury, and the Lords of the Committee resolve to be guided by the regulations contained in the Treasury minutes, in so far as will be consistent with the terms of Her Majesty's Order in Council of June 3, 1839.

The following regulations will therefore govern the appropriation of the sum intrusted to the superintendence of the Committee for the present year:—

"REGULATIONS.

"1. Every application for a grant is to be made in the form of a memorial, addressed 'To the Right Hon. the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education.'

"2. The Committee will consider the memorials in order, according to the dates at which they have been, or shall be received.

"3. The right of inspection will be required by the Committee in all cases. Inspectors authorized by Her Majesty in Council will be appointed from time to time to visit schools to be henceforth aided by public money. The inspectors will not interfere with the religious instruction, or discipline, or management of the school, it being their object to collect facts and information, and to report the result of their inspections to the Committee of Council.

"4. Before any application for aid shall be entertained, the Committee will require to be satisfied by reference either to the inspectors, or to the National or British and Foreign School Society, or, if the school be in Scotland, to some competent authority there—

"1. That the case is deserving of assistance.

"2. That there are no charitable or other funds or endowments which might supersede the necessity of a grant.

"3. That the site of the school-house has been obtained with a good legal tenure, and that by conveyance to trustees it has been duly secured for the education of the children of the poor.

"4. That it is reasonable to expect that the school will be efficiently and permanently supported.

"5. The Committee will require that every building, on behalf of which any application is entertained shall be of substantial erection, and that in the plans thereof not less than six square feet be provided for each child.

"6. All recipients of grants will be required to bind themselves to submit to any audit of their building account, and to furnish any reports of their schools which the Committee of Council may require.

"7. The Committee will require that the certificate hereto annexed shall be signed by the applicants and presented to the Committee, before their Lordships will authorize the payment of any grant which may be made to a school.

"8. In all ordinary cases the grants will be made in aid of the erection of school-houses (exclusive of residence for master or assistant) upon the following further conditions:—

"1st. That for every 10*s.* to be granted by the Committee, the means of educating one child (at least) shall be provided.

"2d. That the amount of private subscriptions shall be received, expended, and accounted for, before their Lordships will authorize the payment of the grant.

"9. In every application for aid to the erection of a school-house in England or Wales, it must be stated whether the school is in connexion with the National Society, or British and Foreign School Society; and if the said school be not in connexion with either of these societies, the Committee will not entertain the case, unless some special circumstances be exhibited to induce their Lordships to treat the case as special.

"10. Under the head of 'special' the following may be included—

"1st. Cases of peculiar urgency, arising in poor and populous places.

"2nd. Peculiar cases in which sums may be required for the aid and support of existing schools.

"3d. Cases of schools in England and Wales which are not connected with the National or British and Foreign Society.

"CERTIFICATE.

"We, the undersigned, promoters of the school at ———, hereby certify, for the information of the Right Hon. the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education—

"1st. That the new school-house, in aid of which your Lordships were pleased to grant ———, is completed in a satisfactory and workmanlike manner, being built of the proper dimensions, and in all respects according to the plan and specification proposed to and approved by your Lordships.

"2d. That the amount of private subscription specified in our memorials to your Lordships has been received, expended, and accounted for, and that there does not remain any debt, charge, or claim of any kind on account of the building, except what will be liquidated by your Lordships' grant, the payment of which is now prayed for.

"3d. That the site of the school-house has been obtained with a good legal tenure, and has been duly conveyed to trustees, so as to secure the building for the purpose of educating the children of the poor.

"4th. That we are ready to submit to any audit of our accounts for building which your Lordships may direct, to make such periodical reports respecting the state of our schools as your Lordships may call for, and to admit your Lordships' inspectors according to the annexed regulation marked A.

"In testimony whereof we affix our signatures, and request the payment of the sum appropriated to the school at ——— aforesaid.

"Signed and dated ———"

"REGULATION A.

"The right of inspection will be required by the committee in all cases. Inspectors authorized by Her Majesty in Council will be authorized from time to time to visit schools to be henceforth aided by public money. The inspectors will not interfere with the religious instruction, or discipline, or management of the school, it being their object to collect facts and information, and to report the result of their inspections to the Committee of Council."

AN ACT TO EXPLAIN AND AMEND THE ACTS FOR THE COMMUTATION OF TITHES IN ENGLAND AND WALES.

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty, King William the Fourth, intituled, An Act for the Commutation of Tithes in England and Wales: and whereas an Act was passed in the first year of the reign of her present Majesty, to amend the recited Act: and whereas an Act was passed in the second year of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled, An Act to facilitate the Merger of Tithes in Land: and whereas it is expedient to explain and amend the said Acts in certain respects: Be it therefore declared and enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That in every case where any tithes or rent-charge shall have been or shall hereafter be released, assigned, or otherwise conveyed or disposed of under the provisions of the said Acts, or any of them, or of this Act, for merging or extinguishing the same, the lands in which such merger or extinguishment shall take effect shall be subject to any charge, incumbrance, or liability which lawfully existed on such tithes or rent-charge previous to such merger to the extent of the value of such tithes or rent-charge; and any such charge, incumbrance, or liability shall have priority over any charge or incumbrance existing on such lands at the time of such merger taking effect; and such lands, and the owners thereof for the time being, shall be liable to the same remedies for the recovery of any payment and the performance of any duty in respect of such charge, incumbrance, or liability, or of any penalty or damages for non-payment or non-performance thereof respectively, as the said tithes or rent-charge, or the owner thereof for the time being, were or was liable to previous to such merger.

II. Power for special apportionment of such charge on lands being of three times the value of the charge.— And be it enacted, That every person entitled to exercise the powers for merger of tithes or rent-charge in land under the said Acts, or any of them, or of this Act, may, with the consent of the tithe commissioners for the time being under their hands and seal of office, and of the person to whom the lands in which such merger or extinguishment shall take effect shall belong, either by the deed or other instrument or declaration by which such merger shall be effected, or by any separate deed, instrument, or declaration, to be made in such form as the commissioners shall approve, specially apportion the whole or any part of any such charge, incumbrance, or liability affecting the said tithes or rent-charge so merged or extinguished, or proposed to be merged or extinguished in such lands, upon the same or any part thereof, or upon any other lands of such person held under the same title and for the same estate in the same parish, or upon the several closes or portions of such lands, or according to an acreable rate or rates upon lands of different quality, in such manner and proportion, and to the exclusion of such of them, as the person intending to merge the same, with such consent as aforesaid, may by any such deed, instrument, or declaration direct: Provided always, that no land shall be so exclusively charged unless the value thereof shall in the opinion of the said commissioners be at least three times the value of the amount of the charge, incumbrance, or liability charged or intended to be charged thereon, over and above all other charges and incumbrances, if any, affecting the same.

III. Name of each occupier, and sum charged on him, to be specified by Assessor, on notice from owner.—And be it enacted, that the assessor or collector of any rate or tax shall, within forty days after the receipt of a notice in writing signed by any land owner or tithe owner interested therein, specify in his assessment made for the purpose of collecting and levying such rate or tax the names of the several occupiers of tithes, lands, and tenements subject to such rate or tax, as well as the sum assessed on the tithes, lands, or tenements held by each such occupier.

IV. Power of special apportionment on tithes or rent-charge.—And be it enacted, That where the whole of the great tithes or the whole of the small tithes, or the respective rent-charges in lieu thereof, shall be lawfully subject to any such charge, incumbrance, or liability, and the person entitled to such tithes or rent-charge respectively shall be desirous of apportioning such charge, incumbrance, or liability respectively exclusively upon any part of such tithes or rent-charge, although such person has not the power or does not intend to merge the same under the said Acts or this Act, such person may, with the like consent of the said commissioners, and in such manner as they shall see fit and prescribe, and also with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, specially apportion such charge, incumbrance, or liability respectively upon any part or portion of the tithes or rent-charge respectively subject thereto, not being in the opinion of the said commissioners less than three times the value of the said charge, incumbrance, or liability, or of such part thereof as shall be so apportioned thereon, or intended so to be.

V. Expenses of special apportionment to be borne by parties applying for same.—And be it enacted, That in every such case of special apportionment the costs and expenses of or incident thereto shall be borne by the party at whose instance the same shall have been made, and shall be recoverable as other costs of apportionments are recoverable under the provisions of the said recited Acts, or either of them, or of this Act.

VI. Tithes and Rent-charge of Glebe may be merged.—And be it declared and enacted, That the provisions of the said Acts and this Act for merger or extinguishment of tithes or rent-charge instead of tithes in the lands out of which such tithes shall have been issuing, or whereon such rent-charge shall be fixed, do and shall extend to glebe or other land, in all cases where the same and the tithes or rent-charge thereof shall belong to the same person in virtue of his benefice, or of any dignity, office, or appointment held by him.

VII. Provision for deducting value of Tithes and Rent-charge from arbitrary Fines in cases of merger in copyholds.—And be it enacted, That in every case of merger of tithes or rent-charge issuing out of land of copyhold tenure, and subject to arbitrary fine, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, on the application of the owner of such land, to ascertain, by such ways and means as they shall think fit, the annual value of the tithes or rent-charge so merged or intended to be merged: and the said commissioners shall in such case cause to be endorsed on the deed, declaration, or other instrument effecting such merger a certificate under their hands and seal, setting forth such annual value so ascertained; and in every case of future assessment of fine on the lands which before such merger were subject to such tithes or rent-charge, the parties entitled to such fine shall assess the same as if such lands were subject to the tithes or rent-charge of which the annual value shall be so endorsed; and the production of such deed, declaration, or instrument of merger, or of a duplicate thereof, with such certificate endorsed, or of an office-copy of such deed, declaration, or instrument and certificate endorsed thereon, shall be sufficient evidence of the annual value of such tithes or rent-charge.

VIII. Power to make Award by way of supplement to parochial agreement in cases of fraud, &c.—And be it enacted, That, notwithstanding any thing in the said Acts, or any of them, contained, in any case where a parochial agreement for rent-charge or for giving land instead of tithes, or any compulsory award, has been duly confirmed by the said commissioners, and it shall appear to them, at any period before the confirmation of the apportionment of such rent-charge, that by reason of fraud, or by the omission or insertion through error of the tithes or lands of any party thereto, or of the name of any person, whether as tithe-owner or land-owner, who ought, or, as the case may be, who ought not, to have been party thereto, or any other manifest error, that such agreement or award would be unjust, and that if such fraud, omission, insertion, or other manifest error had not occurred the said commissioners would have come to a different conclusion in respect of such agreement or award, and would have declined to confirm or would have varied the same previous to such confirmation, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall see fit, and in their sole discretion, but not otherwise, by a separate award to rectify such agreement or award in any of the matters aforesaid, in such manner as to them shall seem just; and all the provisions and powers of the recited Acts relating to compulsory awards shall be applied in every such case, in respect of the matter so dealt with, in as full a manner as if no such agreement or award had been made, or as if the same were made in respect of a separate district: Provided always, that in every such separate award the matter so dealt with, and the grounds on which the commissioners shall have seen fit to make the same, shall be recited or otherwise set forth in the draft thereof, in addition to the other particulars required by the said Acts, or any of them, to be set forth in compulsory awards; and every such award shall, in the notice of meeting for hearing objections thereto, be called a separate award by way of supplement to the parochial agreement or award in the parish to which such separate award relates.

IX. Power after award to make Parochial Agreement for Easter Offerings, &c.—And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful, at any time before the confirmation of any apportionment under a compulsory award in any parish, for the land-owners and tithe-owners, having such interest in the lands and tithes of such parish as is required for the making a parochial agreement, to enter into a parochial agreement for the commutation of Easter offerings, mortuaries, or surplice fees, or of the tithes of fish or fishing, or mineral tithes; and all the provisions, conditions, limitations, and powers of the said recited Acts, or any of them, relating to parochial agreements, so far as the same shall, in the judgment of the commissioners, be applicable to the subject of the proposed commutation, shall be observed and applied in every such case as if no previous award had been made; and every such agreement may fix the period at which the rent-charge to be paid under such agreement shall commence, but so nevertheless that the same and the subsequent payments thereof shall be made on some day fixed for the payment of the rent-charge awarded in such parish, and shall be recoverable from time to time by the means provided in the said Acts, or either of them, for the recovery of the rent-charges in the said parish.

X. Power to fix Commencement of Rent-charge.—And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the commissioners in any compulsory award, or by any supplementary award, in cases where the parties shall not have fixed the same by parochial agreement, as under the said secondly-recited Act is provided, to fix, or where the commissioners shall not have so fixed for the land-owners and tithe-owners having such an interest in the land and tithes of any parish as is required for making a parochial agreement to enter into a supplementary agreement for fixing, such sum as to them respectively shall seem fit to be paid in consideration of the time (if any) which may intervene between the termination of any previous agreement or composition for the payment of tithe and the time at which the rent-charge shall commence, either under such compulsory award or parochial agreement where the same shall have been previously made, and also for the said commissioners by their said award to fix, or for the land-owners and tithe-owners having such interest in the lands and tithes of any parish as is required for the making a parochial agreement, at any time after such award, and before the confirmation of the apportionment, to enter into a supplementary agreement for fixing the period at which the rent-charge to be paid under such award shall commence, in like manner and subject in both cases to the like conditions as are provided in the secondly-recited Act, enabling parties to agree to pay any such sum, or to fix the period at which any rent-charge shall commence.

XI. Fixed Rent-charge may be substituted for contingent Rent-charge on lands partially exempt.—And be it enacted, That where lands are exempted from the payment of tithes, or of rent-charge instead of tithes, whilst in the occupation of the owner of such lands, by reason of having been parcel of the possessions of any privileged order, it shall be lawful for the respective owners of the said lands and tithes or rent-charge, by the parochial agreement for the rent-charge, or by a supplemental agreement in cases where the parochial agreements or any award shall have been confirmed by the said commissioners, to be made in such form as the commissioners shall direct or approve, to agree to the payment, or for the commissioners in the case of a compulsory award, with the consent of the respective owners of the said lands and tithes, to award the payment of a fixed and continuing rent-charge, without regard to the change of occupation or manurance of such lands, equivalent in value, according to the judgment of the commissioners, to such contingent rent-charge; and such lands shall, from the date of the confirmation by the commissioners of such parochial agreement or supplemental agreement or award, as the case may be, or from such date as shall be fixed by the parties, with the approval of the said commissioners, in any such agreement or supplemental agreement, be subject to such fixed rent-charge instead of the contingent tithes or rent-charge to which such lands were subject previous to such agreement or supplemental agreement or award being made; and every such fixed rent-charge shall from such period respectively be paid and recoverable by the means provided in the said Acts, in like manner as if the same had been the rent-charge originally fixed in any parochial agreement or award in respect of the said tithes.

XII. Provisions of 6 and 7 W. 4. c. 71. ss. 43 and 71, for substituting fixed Rent-charge extended to Crown lands.—And whereas certain crown lands, by reason of their being of the tenure of ancient demesne or otherwise, are exempted from payment of tithes whilst in the tenure, occupation, or manurance of her Majesty, her tenants, farmers, or lessees, or their under-tenants, as the case may be, but become subject to tithes when aliened or occupied by subjects not being tenants, farmers, or lessees of the crown, and doubts have arisen how far the provisions of the said first-recited Act relating to lands heretofore parcel of the possessions of any privileged order, or in the nature of glebe, or otherwise in like manner privileged and partially exempt, are applicable to such crown lands; be it declared and enacted, That all and every the said provisions of the said first-recited Act do extend to such crown lands, and that the provision lastly in this Act contained for substituting a fixed rent-charge instead of a contingent rent-charge on lands partially exempt from tithes shall extend and be applicable to such crown lands as aforesaid: Provided always, that no such fixed rent-charge shall be substituted instead of such contingent rent-charge on such crown lands without the consent of the persons or officers who are by the said first-recited Act respectively required to be substituted in cases of commutation of tithes where the ownership of lands or tithes is vested in her Majesty.

XIII. Provision for tithes of Lammas lands, &c.—And whereas large tracts of lands, called Lammas lands, are in the occupation of certain persons during a portion of the year only, and are liable to the tithes of the produce of the said lands increasing and growing thereon during such occupation, and at other portions of the year are in the occupation of other persons, and in their hands liable to different kinds of tithes arising from the agistment, produce, or increase of cattle or stock thereon; and by reason of such change of occupation such last-mentioned tithes cannot be commuted for a rent-charge issuing out of or fixed upon the said lands, and the said recited Acts are thereby rendered inoperative in several parishes where such Lammas lands lie: And whereas the said Acts are in like manner inoperative in certain cases where a personal right of commonage, or a right of common in gross, is vested in certain persons by reason of inhabitation or occupation in the parish where any common may lie, or by custom or vicinage, but without having such right of common so annexed or appurtenant to or arising out of or in respect of any lands on which any rent-charge could be fixed instead of the tithes of the cattle or stock, or their produce, increase, or agistment, on such common, annexed to such personal right; for remedy thereof be it enacted, That in every case where by reason of the peculiar tenure of such lands, and the change during the year of the occupiers thereof, or of such right of commonage, a rent-charge cannot, in the judgment of the said commissioners, be fixed on the said lands in respect of cattle and stock received and fed thereon, or of the produce and increase of such cattle and stock, at such portion of the year as the said lands are thrown open, or where such right of commonage alone exists, it shall be lawful for the parties interested in such lands or commons, and the tithes thereof in the case of a parochial agreement, or for the commissioners in the case of a compulsory award, in every such parochial agreement or award respectively, or by any supplemental agreement in the nature of a parochial agreement, or by a supplemental award, as the case may be, where any parochial agreement or award has been already made, to fix a rent-charge instead of the tithes of such Lammas land or commons, to be paid during the separate occupation thereof by the separate occupiers, in like manner as other rent-charges are fixed by the said Acts or any of them, and to declare in such agreement or award, or supplemental agreement or award, as the case may be, such a sum or rate per head to be paid for each head of cattle or stock turned on to such Lammas land or commons by the parties entitled to the occupation thereof after the same shall have been so thrown open, or by the parties entitled to such right of commonage as aforesaid; and every such sum shall be ascertained and fixed upon a calculation of the tithes received in respect of such last-mentioned occupation or right for the period and according to the provisions for fixing rent-charges in the said recited Acts, and shall be due and payable by the owner of such cattle or stock on the same being first turned upon such lands or commons, and shall be recoverable by the persons entitled thereto by distress and impounding of the cattle or stock in respect of which such sum shall be due, in like manner as cattle are distrained and impounded for rent, and be subject to the same provisions as to distress and replevin of the same as are by law provided in cases of distress for rent: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to Lammas lands where no tithes of payments instead of tithes have been taken during the seven years ending at Christmas, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, in respect of the cattle or stock received and fed thereon, or of the produce and increase of such cattle or stock at such portion of the year as the said lands are thrown open.

LAW.

NORTHAMPTON.—ALL SAINTS' CHURCH-RATE.

"CASE."

"On Thursday, the 15th of August, 1839, a vestry meeting was held in the parish of All Saints, Northampton, to pass the churchwardens' accounts, and make a rate for the repairs of the church.

"The report was read of a surveyor who had examined the church, and prepared a carefully detailed account of the repairs required, and of the expense, which was estimated at about 430*l*. A rate, therefore, being necessary for this and other minor matters, of 6*d*. in the pound, it was proposed in the usual way.

"An amendment was proposed by a dissenting minister, and seconded, to adjourn the meeting to that day twelve months.

"The clergyman of the parish, as chairman, refused to put this amendment, on the ground that a competent surveyor had declared the repairs to be at once necessary; that no objection was taken against the rate as extravagant, nor one of any smaller amount proposed; and that the amendment, if carried, must of course prevent the churchwardens in the discharge of their duty, by driving off the whole question to a time when they would have ceased to exercise their office. Overlooking the amendment therefore altogether, the chairman put the previous question, which was carried by a large majority. No poll was subsequently demanded.

"The churchwardens have commenced to collect the rate, but some of the dissenters refused to pay, alleging that the rate is illegal, through the chairman's refusal to put the amendment.

"Under these circumstances your opinion is requested,

"1st. Whether the rate thus carried was legal.

"2nd. Whether, in the event of proceedings being instituted for that purpose in the Ecclesiastical Court, the churchwardens could enforce the payments."

"OPINION."

"1 and 2. In my opinion, this rate, under the circumstances stated, is legal. The reasonableness and propriety of it seem capable of being fully proved; and I do not think that if alone opposed on the mere ground for passing over such an amendment as was moved and seconded, the opposition will avail. Taking this view of the rate, it appears to me that the churchwardens can enforce payment of it in the Ecclesiastical Court. They will be advised to summon a defaulter before the justices as a preliminary step to a suit.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

BISHOP HEBER.

In the inscription on Bishop Heber's monument in St. Paul's Cathedral (as given in our last number, page 54,) for "He was then summoned," &c., read "He was there summoned," &c.

Since the publication of No. XV. we have received a well-written Latin letter from a correspondent in Jersey, offering for the pages of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE the following version of this epitaph:—

Memorie Sacrum
REGINAE DI HEBER, S. T. P. Domini Calcute Episcopi,
Hoc Monumentum Populares,
Qui vivum amabant et mirabantur,
Ponendum curaverunt.
Mira in eo consensio
Flagrantissima in Deum pietatis,
Cum summa in omne hominum genus indulgentia,
Necnon ingenii excelsissimi laudes,
Cum animi judicio res omnes aequè expendente,
Enituerunt:
Qui cum prisca morum simplicitate,
Ut demissa Christianum mente decet,
Clarus ante omnes haberetur,
Eam nec plausus enovare,
Nec res secundae minuire
Potuerunt.
Qui cum ad altiores honorum gradus
Perventurus in Patria videretur,
Illo gloriae curriculo libenter omissio,

Inter Ministros ad barbaras gentes
 Christiana fide erudiendis,
 Ad Orientem missos,
 Princeps adscribi prætulit;
 Atque intra breve Triennii spatium,
 Majore Indis parte peragrata,
 Et cujuscunque hominum generis et sectæ
 Amore et veneratione conciliata,
 Laborum ut præmium acciperet,
 E terris revocatus excessit,
 Anno Ætatis XLIII, et Domini, MDCCCXXVI.
 Morte sepultus abis; nec te lugemus ademptum,
 Quamvis circumstent moxque dolorque rogum.
 Pertulit ante Deus reserare Vicarius Orcum,
 Qui tibi amore sui, cec face, monstrat iter.
 Morte sepultus abis; nec fas lugere peremptum,
 Cui tutela Deus, Duxque Redemptor adest.
 Te dedit, ereptumque Deus reparabit: Iesu
 Nam cæso, stimulos mors adhibere nequit!

A Christian Example.—Among the first founders of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge was Sir John Philipps, Knt. The following proceeding of the Society, in respect to this honourable person, deserves to be generally known. At a Meeting of the Society, held on Thursday, the 21st of December, 1699, it was, among other matters, "RESOLVED, That the thanks of this Society be given to Sir John Philipps, for the noble and Christian example he has shown in refusing a challenge after the highest provocation imaginable; and that the Lord Guildford be pleased to acquaint him therewith."—Account of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

METROPOLIS.

Monasteries in the Metropolis.—It is not generally known that there are several religious establishments for Roman Catholic ladies in London and its immediate vicinity, where they devote their lives to the education of the children of the indigent, the largest of which is in Clarendon-square, where 240 girls are clothed, fed, and brought up as good and trustworthy servants. A monastic institution is now erecting in Bermondsey, adjoining the new Catholic chapel, for the order of the Sisters of Mercy. The ladies who are about to take possession of this establishment are pledged to visit and administer to the wants of the sick poor of the neighbourhood, regardless of their religious creed, their sickness and poverty being their only recommendation to the good offices of the nuns. A similar establishment is to be instituted at Whitechapel about Christmas next. What will appear most strange is, that the females devoting themselves to this life are almost all persons of family and fortune, who, from their education and accomplishments, are capable of adorning any society.—Observer.

Miss Agnew, the Roman Catholic convert, and authoress of Geraldine, is about to proceed to London in a few days, accompanied by Mrs. Macaulay, for the purpose of founding a convent of nuns of the Order of Mercy, in the neighbourhood of Whitechapel and the Commercial-road, to which is to be attached a large school for poor children.—Tyne Mercury.

PROVINCIAL.

Gloucestershire.—Cheltenham Church Association Meeting.—A large and influential meeting of the members and friends of the Cheltenham Church of England Association was held on the 23rd of Aug., at the Assembly-rooms in that town, for the purpose of adopting a petition to parliament in favour of Church Extension. On the platform were—the Revs. F. Close, Hugh Stowell, G. Driscoll, C. Herbert, S. H. Field, J. Hall (Bristol), D. L. Cousins, C. B. Trye, W. R. Coxwell, J. F. S. Gabb, R. L. Hopper, and J. H. Sadler, Sir R. Wolseley, Lieut.-Col. Hawkshaw, Capt. Robertson, Major Davies, Capt. Molesworth, Dr. Coley, C. Cole, C. T. Cooke, D. Binckes, E. Hatch, and J. H. Hulme, Esqrs. On the motion of Christopher Cole, Esq., seconded by Mr. Hatch, the Rev. F. Close took the chair. The proceedings having been opened with prayers, the reverend chairman proceeded to address the assembly, and explain the special object of the meeting. After some discussion, they agreed to the following petition to parliament:—

"That your petitioners view with deep concern the spiritual destitution of vast masses of the population of this country.

"That they feel compelled to attribute the disturbances which have recently taken place, and the insecure state of life and property in many parts of the country, chiefly to this lamentable destitution.

"That, in their view, the word of God and the constitution of these realms alike demand at the hands of the state an adequate provision of religious instruction for the entire population.

"They therefore pray, that your right honourable House will take these matters into your serious consideration, with a view to the immediate removal of these evils.

"And your petitioners shall ever pray."

Lancashire.—The Rev. Commissary Law, during his visit to this and the neighbouring districts, has subscribed to the erection, the repair, or the improvement of churches, out of his own pocket, no less a sum than 800*l.*—Lancaster Gazette.

George Martin, Esq., one of the members for the borough of Lancaster, has given a piece of ground on which it is proposed to erect a new church in that town, calculated to hold from 1000 to 1200 persons.—Herald.

Goudhurst, Kent.—The foundation-stone of the new church of Christ Church, at Kiln Down, in this parish, was laid on Thursday, the 12th of Sept., by the Viscountess Beresford. Notwithstanding the very unfavourable state of the weather, a most numerous and highly respectable company were present on the occasion, among whom were Lord Beresford, Lord Decies, Lord and Lady Brecknock, and Miss Murray; A. B. Hope, Esq.; Revs. W. B. Harrison, Hackness, Wm. M. Smith Mamott, Hooper, Twigg, Woodgate, King, Wickham, Hooker, Hutchinson, Gardiner, Lemon, L. E. Geyt (rural dean), and H. Harrison, &c. &c. A procession, consisting of the clergy in their robes, the committee, children of the National Schools, with flags, with appropriate inscriptions, &c. &c., escorted Lady Beresford to a marquee, tastefully fitted up for the occasion. The coins of the present reign having been deposited by her ladyship in the cavity of the stone, the vicar of the parish, the Rev. W. B. Harrison, repeated the 17th verse of the 90th Psalm, the stone being gradually lowered; a magnificent silver trowel was then presented to her ladyship, the gift of the committee, with which she spread the mortar, after which the choir chanted the "Te Deum." Appropriate prayers were then offered up by the vicar and curate of the parish—the 100th Psalm was then sung, and the blessing pronounced. "God save the Queen" followed, and the company separated, highly gratified with the order and decorum, which, without any exception, prevailed, rendering the interesting ceremony peculiarly solemn and impressive. The parish of Goudhurst consists of a population of 3,000 souls, and is nine miles in length; 1,000 of the inhabitants are from two and a half to five miles distant from the parish church. Lord and Lady Beresford endow the church with 75*l.* per annum, to which the Dean and Chapter of Rochester add 25*l.* per annum, upon the condition of a parsonage-house being built, for which there are not sufficient funds at present.

ADDRESS TO THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY
 FROM THE PROTESTANT OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION AT LIVERPOOL.

(From the Liverpool Standard.)

It will be remembered that about a month since an address, of which we subjoin a copy, was forwarded from this valuable association to the Archbishop of Canterbury, expressive of their gratitude for his Grace's firm and Christian defence of Scriptural education; and we have now the gratification of presenting to our readers the reply of his Grace, together with the letter of the Rev. J. R. Connor, which accompanied the address.

ADDRESS.

"To his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and those other Lords, Spiritual and Temporal, who supported his Grace's motion for an address to her Majesty upon the late Ministerial proposal for an Education Grant.

"We, the undersigned members and friends of the Liverpool Protestant Operative Association, desire to express to your Lordships our most earnest and heartfelt sense of gratitude for your firm and Christian defence of Scriptural education, more especially at a time when the enemies of the pure word of God are making such efforts to break down the barriers which exist between truth and falsehood.

"The temperate and dignified, but at the same time uncompromising, course which your lordships felt it your duty to pursue, in opposing the late attempt to force upon the country (contrary to the wishes of nearly one-half the House of Commons, and the general sense of the nation as expressed by more than 3,000 petitions) a grant for a system of education, not only unscriptural in its character, but opposed to the Established Church and the Protestant institutions of the land, demand from the nation at large their most grateful acknowledgments, and for which we first offer our hearty thanks to our heavenly Father for His overruling providence to this our native land. We rejoice to have the opportunity of thus expressing our gratitude to his Grace, who stood forth as the first prelate of the Church, and to your Lordships, both spiritual and temporal, who so faithfully supported him in resisting the encroachments of those opposed to the true principles of Protestantism, which have existed for so many years as the bulwark of the English constitution."

THE REV. J. R. CONNOR'S LETTER.

"My Lord Archbishop,—At the request of the Protestant operatives of Liverpool, I have the high honour of enclosing to your Grace an address unanimously carried at their last public meeting.

"The address has been presented through the medium of the press to the other spiritual and temporal peers who voted with your Grace on the motion alluded to; but a special allusion having been made to your Grace in the address, as the originator of the motion, the operatives conceive that they are bound to transmit their address to your Grace personally. They do it, presuming upon the high and holy feelings ever manifested by your Grace for the spiritual welfare of the country, and humbly hoping it will be received as the ebullition of hearts grateful to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift, and to His bishops, the instruments by whom He guards the towers of Zion. It may not be irrelevant to add, that the Liverpool Protestant Operative Association is strictly a religious society, established to support our National Church, the glory of our land.

"I have the honour to remain,

"Your Grace's humble and obedient servant,

"J. R. CONNOR, Chairman,
 "Minister of St. Simon's, Liverpool."

THE ARCHBISHOP'S REPLY.

"Lambeth, Sept. 5.

"Rev. Sir,—I trust that my absence from home on official duties, which occupied the whole of my time during the last three weeks of August, will plead my excuse for having so long delayed my acknowledgment of your letter, and of the address which accompanied it, from the members and friends of the Liverpool Protestant Operative Association. "I am exceedingly gratified by the approbation thus expressed of my conduct, and the attachment implied in that approbation to our National Church; and I beg you to assure the parties who have signed the address, that I consider it as an imperative duty to oppose every measure which may have the effect of depriving any portion of the people of that early instruction in the faith and fear of the Lord, which is only to be found in the Scriptures, and to which every child that is born in a Christian country has an undoubted right.

"I remain, Rev. Sir,

"Your humble and obedient servant,
 "W. CANTUAR."

CONSECRATION OF SNENTON CHURCH.—ADDRESS FROM THE CLERGY TO THE LORD BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

(From the Nottingham Journal.)

ON Thursday last this newly-erected structure was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln. The clergy then assembled in the vestry of St. Mary's Church, where they signed the address given below. Proceeding into the chancel, they awaited the arrival of the Bishop, who was soon after introduced by Archdeacon Wilkins, who led him to a chair placed within the rails which enclose the communion table.

The venerable Archdeacon then read the following address, which he presented to his Lordship:

"To the Right Reverend Father, in God, John, by Divine permission, Lord Bishop of Lincoln.

"We, the Archdeacon and undersigned clergy of the county of Nottingham, now transferred from the paternal care of our venerated late diocesan (the Archbishop of York), to the jurisdiction of your lordship, avail ourselves of the occasion of your first entrance into this new portion of your diocese, to testify our sense of the high estimation in which your lordship's character as a prelate, a divine, and a scholar, has been deservedly held; and to assure your lordship of our thankfulness to the Great Disposer of all things, in being placed under the episcopal authority of one to whom we may look for counsel and assistance on all occasions of doubt and difficulty, and upon whom we may confidently rely, as well for the maintenance and integrity of our ecclesiastical polity, as for the development and promotion of sound Christian doctrine.

"We beg further to assure your lordship, that highly appreciating, as we do, that benevolent and Christian spirit which characterizes your public and private conduct, it will be our pleasure, as well as our duty, to pay scrupulous attention to your commands, and to evince a cheerful and ready obedience to your authority. And we earnestly pray God that He may be pleased to pour upon you the grace of His Holy Spirit, that you may long and happily continue to manifest that love of His honour and service, and that devotion to the welfare of the church, which, with so much benefit to the cause of religion and morality, your lordship has hitherto been the instrument of promoting." [Here follow the signatures of the archdeacon and clergy.]

The Rev. PRELATE, then advancing towards the clergy, delivered the following reply:—"I thank you very sincerely for this testimony of your esteem and attachment. It is highly valuable to me, not only on account of the personal gratification which the assurance that I possess your favourable opinions must afford me; but on account also of the encouragement and support which I cannot fail to derive from it. Notwithstanding the complimentary terms in which your late venerable diocesan has been pleased to speak of me, I am too conscious of my own deficiencies not to feel that I am little qualified to make good to you the loss you have sustained by being removed from his mild and paternal superintendence. Still, knowing that your cordial-cooperation and prayer will never be wanting, I enter cheerfully on the new duties imposed upon me, in humble confidence, that our endeavours to promote the common end of a ministry—the glory of God and the edification of His church—will not be altogether unavailing. One thing the experience of 20 years has taught me—that in order to the effectual discharge of episcopal functions, it is necessary there should subsist mutual confidence, and a frank and unreserved communication of sentiment between the clergy and the diocesan. Let me assure you, my brethren, in conclusion, that I shall gladly receive, and give my best attention to, any suggestion you may think fit to offer to me, with reference either to the well-being of your respective parishes, or your own comfort and convenience, which it will be my anxious wish ever to consult, provided I can do so without any sacrifice of my public duty."

New Church at Sand-Hutton.—It gives us great pleasure to state, that Mr. J. Walker, the respected owner of the Sand-Hutton estate, near York, is now erecting a very neat and commodious chapel-of-ease at that place, which is in the parish of Bomal, and a considerable distance from the parish church. The works are progressing rapidly, and under the direction of Mr. Salvin, of London, the architect, will soon approach to completion. We sincerely hope that the liberal and Christian example thus set by Mr. Walker will be followed by other landowners in the county. New churches, and extended means of instruction in the principles of our established religion, form the best barriers against the spread of Popery and Dissent.—Doncaster Chronicle.

The Rev. Richard Scott, B.D., has presented to the Abbey Church at Shrewsbury, a valuable service of communion plate. On Tuesday last the vicar and churchwardens waited upon Mr. Scott, with a memorial engrossed upon parchment, and signed by upwards of 200 respectable residents of the Abbey parish, expressive of their acknowledgments for the munificent gift.—Worcester Guardian.

Hanham near Bristol—Church Extension.—It is proposed to erect a new church, parsonage, and school, on the borders of Bitton and St. George's, in the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol; the Church to accommodate 650, of which number 550 to be free.

New Church at Darley Dale.—His Grace the Duke of Devonshire has subscribed the liberal sum of 50*l.* towards the erection of the new church at Darley Dale, near Matlock. What enhances the value of the contribution is, his Grace does not possess a yard of land in that extensive parish.—Nottingham Journal.

Mr. Serjeant Wilde, M.P. for Newark, has given the sum of 100*l.* towards liquidating the debt incurred by the erection of Christ Church, in that borough; and although the building and endowment cost the sum of 5,300*l.*, the whole of that amount has been raised (with the exception of 68*l.*, the debt now due) by voluntary contributions.—Nottingham Journal.

A ladies' bazaar was held at Coleham, in aid of the funds for building a new church. The Viscountess Fielding and daughters, Viscountess Dugannon, Hon. Mrs. Kenyon, Hon. Mrs. Noel Hill, Hon. Mrs. Leighton, Hon. Mrs. Hamilton, and other ladies presided at the stalls, which contained contributions from the Queen Dowager, &c., and obtained in aid of the object 900*l.*—Salopian Journal.

The Bishop of Worcester has consecrated the new church at Lye Waste, which was erected at the expense of the late Mr. Thomas Hill of Dennis.—Worcester Journal.

Whittlesey.—The friends of the Church were much gratified on the 7th ult., by the laying of the first stone of a new district church at Coates. By the unwearied exertions of the vicar of St. Mary's, Whittlesey, the Rev. Mr. Pope's benefactors have been sought and found worthy of the most Christian period of the Church, amongst whom we rejoice to notice J. W. Childers, Esq., M.P., who gave besides ground for church and churchyard, 30*l.*, the lords of the Manor, 20*l.*, and Mr. Joseph Waddelew (a resident farmer), 10*l.* per annum towards the endowment of this rising edifice. The Church Building Society and National Commissioners handsomely contributed 600*l.* towards the structure, and the parishioners, with the clergy and surrounding gentry, have unanimously testified, by liberal contributions, their sincere attachment to the Church. A procession was formed of the Sunday-school children, the inhabitants, committee, and clergy: and on reaching the ground the 100th Psalm was sung, when the 122nd and 132nd Psalms, and a few Collects, were read; and a prayer for the solemn occasion was feelingly offered up by the Rev. Mr. Brocklebank, the resident minister of Coates. The Rev. Mr. Pope, assisted by Mr. Wild, the architect and builder, then laid "the chief corner-stone," depositing, in a cavity, a brass plate, with the following inscription:—"The first stone of this chapel in connexion with St. Mary's, Whittlesey, was laid on the 7th of September, 1839, by the Vicar. 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men.'" When another hymn having been sung, the rev. Vicar delivered a most impressive and beautiful address to the assembled company.—From a Correspondent.

IRELAND.

SEIZURES BY A PRIEST FOR BUILDING A CHAPEL. We have received the following from Mr. W. B. Smyth, a magistrate of the county of Clare:—"Yesterday Mr. Tamplin, the Roman Catholic curate of this parish (Doora), accompanied by a body-guard of 15 or 16 stout young fellows, perambulated the parish together with a horse and car to levy contributions for building a new parish chapel, and where he did not get cash, he took blankets, or quilts, or great-coats from the poor, to be retained till released by cash. In one house he entered, instead of taking a pledge, he had to administer the last rites of the church to a dying labourer of mine. Another of my labourers had to sleep last night, and such a night! without a blanket, and without a sod of turf, all the turf of the country being still on the bog, and likely to continue so. This is no secret, as I have reported it to the Government."—Limerick Chronicle.

FOREIGN.

France.—Statistics of Religion: from the Budget of the Minister of Public Worship for 1840.—The estimate of the expenses of public worship in France for the year 1840, amounts to 35,744,859 francs, or about 1,429,794*l.* which is divided as follows:—

Frais d'administration	204,550 fr.
Culte catholique	34,491,300
Cultes protestantes	959,000
Culte Israélite	90,000
	35,744,859 fr.

The following are some of the items in the estimate for the Roman Catholic worship:—

The bishops (eighty in number) receive under the head of salaries	910,000 fr.
Indemnities for expenses of visitations, papal bulls, and informations	142,000
	1,052,000 fr.

Of the inferior clergy there are,
174 Vicar-generals, receiving	365,000 fr.
660 Canons	1,003,500
3,301 Curés	4,193,400
25,576 Desservants	20,960,800
5,480 Vicaires	1,918,000
	28,440,700 fr.

The total number of ecclesiastics in active service and receiving a salary is 35,271.

Among the desservants there are 2,849 septuagenarians, and 927 sexagenarians.

In the great ecclesiastical seminaries there were, in 1833, students 9,579; ordinations 2,039; in 1837, students 7,822; ordinations 1,665.

The amount for Protestant worship includes the salaries of the pastors; namely,

Reformed or Calvinist	397
Lutherans	232
	629

Of these 7 (in Paris) receive 3,000 fr. each.
58 receive	2,000
100 ditto	1,500
463 ditto	1,200
1 ditto	1,000

The population of France, by the census of 1836, was about thirty-three millions and a half, of which about twelve hundred thousand only are supposed to be Protestants.—Abridged from the Archives du Christianisme.

•• It is to be observed, that this salary, paid by the state, forms but a portion of the incomes of the clergy and pastors. In many cases the amount is doubled by payments from the Commune or the Department, and they have the fees in addition; so that it is difficult to form an accurate estimate of their revenues.

The salaries of the Protestant pastors are greater than those of the parochial clergy. The curés receive from twelve to fifteen hundred francs each, and the desservants from eight hundred to a thousand francs.

Russia.—Hamburg, Sept. 19.—The latest accounts from St. Petersburg, of the 14th, say that the Emperor was expected to return in about a week. The Bishops of the Greek united church (i.e. not belonging to the Russian church, but united in certain conditions with the church of Rome) have petitioned the emperor to be admitted with their flocks into the Russian Greek church. This petition, has, of course, been granted, and between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 of Russian subjects are thus withdrawn from the supremacy of the court of Rome, and placed under the synod of St. Petersburg.—Hamburg papers.

Algiers.—Extract of a letter from Bona, 9th inst., given by the Toulonnais:—"On the 28th of August, being the festival of St. Augustin, the Bishop of Algiers went in procession with the clergy of Bona and some priests, from Algiers to the ruins of Hippo, the spot where St. Augustin used to officiate, and after a solemn service laid the first stone of a church dedicated to the saint, which is to be erected by subscription from the Bishops of France. All the inhabitants of Bona were present at this ceremony, which was very imposing."

Rome.—A letter from Rome of the 24th ult. says—"The interest taken by the Pope in the affairs of the East arises from the tolerance of the late Sultan, and the indulgence he showed towards Christians. A few days ago a young Jesuit, who had succeeded in converting several members of the most distinguished families of Constantinople was presented to his Holiness in the Turkish costume."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO THE CLERGY AND OTHER FRIENDS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTRUCTION.

THE PARISH OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST, the largest within the city of Gloucester, containing an increasing population of 3,500 souls and upwards, is destitute of Sunday School-rooms. Yet it was the Rector of this Parish, the Rev. Thomas Stock, who, in the year 1780, projected, and, in conjunction with his friend, Robert Raikes, Esq., established the first Sunday School in Great Britain. The parishioners consist, in a great proportion, of small householders, and the Living itself is under £130 per annum, and no glebe house thereon. The present Rector, being wholly unable from his own resources, or those of the Parish, to raise the requisite funds, is constrained to appeal thus publicly to the liberality of the friends of sound and scriptural education. He is persuaded that they will not be insensible to the wants of a Parish which may justly claim the distinction of having originated the whole system of Sunday School teaching.

In aid of the object in question, a Reverend Incumbent, residing at Salisbury, and connected with the Cathedral, has happily suggested a plan, the principle of which was immediately acted upon in his own Parish, and has been adopted already in various other places, viz.:—"That a General Subscription be set on foot, to which each child in every school in the United Kingdom be invited to contribute One Penny." This proposal is now respectfully and anxiously submitted to the favourable consideration of every Incumbent and officiating Minister throughout the two countries, who are hereby earnestly intreated to bring the case of the above-mentioned Parish before such of their young people, as are now sharing in the blessings of Sunday School instruction. By this simple free-will offering an ample Fund would be raised, and the Sunday School-rooms of St. John's Parish would exhibit, to future generations, an interesting and singular memorial of the gratitude of children for their "nurture and admonition in the Lord."

To accomplish the above designs, the advertiser hopes, that those amongst the Clergy of the Church of England, who are zealous for the extension of our Church principles, and are ready to assist a brother Minister in spreading and increasing the knowledge of the blessed Gospel of our Lord and only Saviour, Jesus Christ, amongst his people, will not refuse to give him their assistance at this time in this good work. GREAT ADVANTAGES OFFERED by the UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 8, WATERLOO-PLACE, Pall-Mall, and 2, CHARLOTTE-ROW, Mansion-House, London.—This Company, established by Act of Parliament, affords the most perfect security from an ample capital, and only requires, when an insurance is for the whole period of life, one half of the very moderate premiums to be paid for the first five years after the date of the policy; the other half may remain, subject to the payment of interest at five per cent. annually, to be deducted at death, or may previously be paid off at convenience.

It obviously becomes easy for a person of very moderate income to secure by this arrangement a provision for his family; and should he at any time after effecting the insurance succeed to, or acquire, a fortune, he may relinquish his policy, having only paid one-half the premiums for the first five years, instead of the whole, as in all other Companies.

Thus a man of 25 years old may, by an annual payment of 28s. 16s. 3d. for the first five years, and afterwards by paying yearly the full premium of 57s. 12s. 6d. secure to his widow and children at his death payment of no less than 3,000l. subject only to the deduction of 144l. 1s. 3d. with interest, being the amount of premium unpaid.

This Company holds out, in various other respects, great inducements to the public. When such facilities are afforded it is clearly a moral duty in every parent who is not possessed of a fortune, but of an income, however moderate, to insure his life for a sum which may yield a comfortable provision for his family.

CHEPSTOW UNION.

NOTICE is hereby Given, That the Guardians of the Chepstow Union wish to appoint a CHAPLAIN for the WORKHOUSE.

The required duties will be to perform Divine Service, with a Sermon on one day in the week, besides Sunday, to attend the sick and infirm, to catechise the children once a month, and instruct them in religious and moral duties twice or thrice a week. The salary will be 50l. a year.

Clergymen desirous of obtaining the above appointment, are requested to send in their applications, with such testimonials as they may think fit, to the Office of Mr. Toye, Solicitor, Chepstow.

WITHAM UNION, COUNTY OF ESSEX.

THE GUARDIANS of the above Union are desirous of appointing a CHAPLAIN to the Union House, which is situated at Witham. The number of inmates has averaged 150. A detailed account of the duties of a Chaplain may be seen on application to the Poor Law Commissioners, or at my office. The salary, 75l. per annum. Any Clergyman willing to fill the above situation is requested to signify the same to me in writing as soon as possible.

By order of the Board, J. HOWELL BLOOD, Clerk.

Witham, October 1, 1839.

MR. WATSON, DENTIST, continues to supply Artificial Teeth upon a principle he has successfully practised upwards of ten years, which, being based upon the physical conformation of the mouth, enables him to secure the most beneficial ends. Mr. W.'s method obviates all painful operations. Hours of consultation from 10 until 4. No. 88, Guildford-street, Russell-square.

THE CHAPLAIN to the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL has been for some time maturing a plan for a Permanent Library for the Patients. The number of books required is very large; but the assistance he has received encourages him to persevere. His Clerical brethren can help him much at a very small expense, if any, to themselves. Odd volumes; the unused and neglected Tracts, and obsolete works of a Library; unsold or damaged copies of religious works; will all be valuable, as arrangement and binding soon reduce them to usefulness. Any number of duplicates is acceptable, as there are 250 beds to be supplied. The simple address, "Chaplain, Middlesex Hospital, London," will be sufficient from any part of the country.

Pecuniary help towards the binding, from those who can afford it, will be also thankfully acknowledged.

SUFFOLK.—IMPORTANT SALE OF LAY TITHES.

The Purchaser will be entitled to the Rent Charge from the 1st October next, and it is payable half yearly.

The right of nominating a perpetual Curate to the Church of Middleton, is attached to this Impropriation.

For Price and Particulars, apply to Mr. Revans, Yoxford; or Messrs. R. and J. Crabtree, Halesworth, Suffolk.

BOOKS FOR GENERAL READING, SUITED ESPECIALLY TO THE MIDDLE CLASSES, PAROCHIAL LIBRARIES, SCHOOLS, &c.

Now publishing, in Periodical Volumes,

THE ENGLISHMAN'S LIBRARY.

The design of this Publication is to provide, at a cheap price, a Series of POPULAR WORKS FOR GENERAL READING,

Which shall unite an interesting style with soundness of Christian principle.

The object proposed to themselves by the persons engaged in this undertaking is to raise the character of that branch of literature which is supplied by books ranging from one shilling to three shillings and sixpence in price. While much has been done of late years for the higher departments, this branch has been almost entirely neglected. It is now proposed, by the union of competently qualified writers, to furnish a series of volumes containing the best information upon subjects of general interest. The work will be found peculiarly adapted for Lending-Libraries, Mechanics' Institutes, Operative Associations, School Rewards, and Class Books.

The several Works of which this Series will consist, though for convenience classed under one general title, will be complete in themselves, and unconnected with each other.

The following is an outline of the subjects which it is proposed to include:—

History of England, particularly of Memorable Periods in English History.—Specimens of English Character in different stations of life.—Memoirs of European Colonies and Missions, with Lives of Missionaries.—History of the Church of England; its Principles, Present Condition, &c.—Lives of Eminent Christians in All Ages.—Records of Primitive Christianity.—Tales, illustrating Religious Principle. Patriotism, Industry, Obedience, &c.—Manuals of Useful Knowledge on Various Subjects.—Manuals of Religious Knowledge; comprising an Account of the Canonical Books of Holy Scripture, and of Customs illustrative of the Bible, explaining the Ritual and Sacred Orders of the Church, the Diocesan and Parochial System, &c. &c.

The following Volumes are expected to appear within the next Quarter:—

- THE EARLY ENGLISH CHURCH. By the Rev. E. CHURTON, M.A., Rector of Crayke, Durham.
CLEMENT WALTON; or, THE ENGLISH CITIZEN. By the Rev. W. GRESLEY, M.A., Lichfield.

With a Preface on the Origin and Connexion of the Germanic Tongues—a Map of Languages—and the Essentials of Anglo-Saxon Grammar. By the Rev. J. BOSWORTH, LL.D.; Dr. Phil. of Leyden; F.R.S.; F.S.A.; Corresponding Member of the Royal Institute of the Netherlands; M.R.S. of Lit. London; Honorary F.R.S. of Sciences, Norway; F.S.A. Copenhagen; F. of the Lit. S. Leyden, Utrecht, Bristol, etc.; and British Chaplain at Rotterdam. One volume Royal 8vo. Price in cloth boards, 42s.

"We are glad to see that, at last, the great difficulty which lay in the way of a more general study of the Anglo-Saxon language is cleared up by the appearance of a portable and useful Dictionary. At a very moderate price, and in a most convenient form, it contains all that is requisite in former Dictionaries, and nearly twice as many words. We recommend it strongly."—Gentleman's Magazine, July, 1838, p. 69, 70.

"The substance of the English language, its vigorous root, its firm and massy stem, with its wide-spreading branches, are all Anglo-Saxon. Though its foliage has been varied and adorned by scions of Grecian, Roman, and Norman origin, our present English is 'completely Anglo-Saxon, in its whole idiom and construction.' The work now before us, for the first time, lays fully open the source of our copious and powerful language. It is denominated an Anglo-Saxon Dictionary, but it is, in fact, a Lexicon of early English. If it be our reproach, that our most eminent literary men have been so much occupied in studying Latin and Greek, that they have scarcely deigned to cast a glance at their own mother-tongue, much less to examine the beauty of its structure, or its nervous power, the reproach is now removed; for here we have a work, which, while it contains the derivation and original meaning of all pure Anglo-Saxon words, proves, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the bones and sinews, the real strength and vigour of our good old English, is, like our being, our customs, and our free constitution, entirely derived from our hardy and independent Anglo-Saxon forefathers. We give an example or two of the use of Anglo-Saxon in the derivation of English words. Acorn, æceren, æcern, from æc, æc an oak, cern, corn, corn, the corn or fruit of the oak.—Childhood, cildhad, from cild a child, had a condition, state.—Kingdom cýngdóm, from cýng a king, dóm power, jurisdiction, a king's jurisdiction or dominion.—Island, æs land, from æs water, æs of water, land land.—Neighbour, neahbur, neah near, bur a bower, dwelling, one who has a dwelling near.—Wilderness, wild-deor-nes, deor a beast, a wild beast's habitation.—The names of places are generally descriptive of their site; thus, Eton has a low watery locality, from æt, a water, a river, ton, tun a town, dwelling.—Sandwich, Sandwic, from sand sand, wic a dwelling, station.—Hith, hýth a port, haven. This work is a necessary supplement to all our present English dictionaries, and ought to be in the hands of every one who has any pretensions to a thorough knowledge of the English language. Schoolmasters, and indeed all who wish to know the real signification of the words they daily use, will here find a ready access to their original meaning."—Literary Gazette, Sept. 15, 1838, p. 580.

"Dr. Bosworth has been long known to the public as an indefatigable and accurate scholar, and this Dictionary fully answers our expectation. We have no hesitation in saying it is one of the most important works which has issued from the press for some time, and that the manner in which a very difficult task has been executed, corresponds with its importance.—With the facilities now afforded, and the encouragement held out, it is our anxious hope that Anglo-Saxon literature may form a prominent branch of education; and that the rising generation, while they regard with reverence the monumental remains of their ancestors, will be taught not to be forgetful of their language."—British Critic and Quarterly Theological Review, No. LI, July, 1839, p. 145, 6 and 152.

"Dr. B. has long since made proof of thorough competence to his present task by his two grammars, of which the larger is rich almost to excess in philological illustration, and the lesser has obtained the approbation of the most fastidious critic of our time. These publications, and the extensive research of which they were evidently the result, had directed general attention to the same quarter as that from which was to be expected the long-awaited boon of an Anglo-Saxon Dictionary. We had sure ground of confidence, in our knowledge of the man, his philological and critical ability, his unshrinking industry, his honest and disinterested purpose, that nothing would be spared to secure completeness and correctness. Nor has he failed in execution; these great objects have been fairly attained in the volume which now lies open before us. He has thoroughly investigated the wide field of philological instruction which has of late years been so skillfully broken up by continental scholars, and especially by those of Germany; and he has not been induced, by these higher and more extensive inquiries, to overlook those minor circumstances of illustration and arrangement which contribute so much to the usefulness of grammatical and lexicographical composition. The prolegomenary matter is highly valuable, and must have cost great pains before it could be reduced to its actual state of close yet clear compression. The filiation of languages is exemplified in various forms of agreement and transition. All this is skillfully conducted, and with entire mastery of the subject. A work which supersedes all others of the kind, and which is not likely to be speedily superseded."—Eclectic Review, Vol. IV. No. VI. December, 1838, p. 674, 5.

"The publication of this Dictionary is likely to form an era in the study of Anglo-Saxon. A book, which we venture to say will do more to advance the study of the Anglo-Saxon language, and consequently the full and perfect understanding of our own, than any work which has yet appeared. A most laborious task—a volume, upon which we lay our hands with great respect. The long Preface gives a sketch of all the Teutonic and Scandinavian languages, with abundant illustrations. It is full of very valuable learning, and shows great diligence, and patient, long research. The 'Essentials of Anglo-Saxon Grammar,' and the abstract of Rask and Grimm, afford the student all the knowledge of forms and inflections, which he will need at the outset. For more thorough study of grammar, he may be referred to a former work of Dr. Bosworth's, 'The Elements of Anglo-Saxon Grammar.'—North American Review, No. C, July, 1838, p. 92.

"Dr. B.'s qualifications for the work were attained by the study of twenty years, seven of which have been occupied on the book before us. In speaking of the Preface, it would be impossible to find as much information of the Anglo-Saxon and Germanic tongues collected in as few pages. In parting with Dr. B., we cannot but express the delight which we have felt in the candour and sincerity with which his work has been conducted, and we rejoice to perceive that the paltry prejudices and supercilious spirit which have disgraced so many of his brother Saxonists of the present day, have not infected him."—New York Review, No. VI. October, 1838, p. 374, 5.

"This work gives full proof of the writer's philosophic mind, his fundamental knowledge of language, and his extensive reading of the best philological works, not only of England, but of other countries, especially of Germany and our Father land. Great value attaches to it from the writer having carefully added to the Anglo-Saxon the cognate words from other branches of the German stem. I close my remarks by sincerely thanking the learned writer for his difficult and highly meritorious labours, and heartily wishing him health and strength, and the necessary encouragement to treat us with more such rich and precious fruits of his philosophic and extensive erudition."—Professor Siegenbeck in the Haarlem Literary and Scientific Journal.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.' Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c. Members are secured from personal liability by the special provisions of an Act of Parliament.

Attention has been gradually awakened amongst all orders of the Clergy, to the important uses of this SOCIETY, and the business of it has very considerably increased within the last year, and is increasing every week. If it should be found, as by many it is supposed it will be, that life is of longer duration on an average amongst the Clergy than amongst the community at large, Profits upon Life Assurance in this SOCIETY will result in a corresponding ratio. The whole of these Profits will be returned. A Life Assurance Policy is entitled to its full share of profit from the day of its date. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same in 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in 1836, of £50, to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below; and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

THE General Meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge being holden on the Second Tuesday in this month instead of the first, we are not able to give an account of its proceedings in the present number.

Account of the Origin, Objects, and General Proceedings of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

THIS work proceeds to state the principal labours of the Society in the translation of books on its catalogue.

"Anxious to convey the blessings of Scripture truth as widely as possible, the Society, in the year 1709, sent forth a new edition of the Common Prayer Book in the Welsh language. In 1713, a subscription was opened for printing the Bible; with the Liturgy and a metrical version of the Psalms, in Welsh; and in 1718 an edition, consisting of 7,000 copies, was distributed throughout the principality. This was followed by other impressions of the same work, making together no fewer than 80,000 copies, besides several separate editions of the New Testament and Liturgy.

And although, in consequence of such expensive undertakings, the Society has often been greatly reduced in its finances, it has always, through the blessing of Divine Providence on its efforts, not only regained its power of doing good, but continued to extend its operations yet further.

"In 1712, a large number of the Book of Common Prayer, the Church Catechism, &c. in the Irish language, were printed at the expense of the Society, and circulated, partly in Ireland, and partly in the Highlands of Scotland. The Society has, within a few years, put forth a reprint of the New Testament, and of the Book of Common Prayer, in the Irish language and character; and has assisted, with a grant of money, the publication of a metrical translation of the Psalms of David, for the use of the native Irish.

"In 1763, the Society issued proposals for printing the Bible, the Liturgy, and religious books and tracts, in the language of the Isle of Man. In 1773 was finished a Manks version of the Bible, and, in 1776, one of the New Testament. Soon afterwards, 3,000 copies of the Book of Common Prayer, and 3,500 of Bishop Wilson's Treatise on the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, were printed and distributed: and in 1808, the Society undertook and finished a third edition of the Book of Common Prayer. Further aid being now required (1839), steps have been taken for the publication of a new edition of the Common Prayer Book in the Manks language, on the application of the present Bishop of Sodor and Man. It is thought, however, that beyond this, no editions will be required, as the language is spoken by few persons in the island, except the old inhabitants; the English language having generally prevailed, and being taught in the schools.

"In the years 1793 and 1794, the Society contributed towards the printing of a translation of the Liturgy into Gaelic, for the use of the natives of the Highlands of Scotland; and in 1803 it gave 300*l.* towards an impression of the Bible in the same language. In the year 1818, it undertook the printing of an edition of the Book of Common Prayer in Gaelic. Several of the tracts, also, on the Society's catalogue have been translated into that language, and dispersed generally among the Highland Episcopalians, by whom they have been received with great gratitude. At the instance of Bishop Low, a grant was made in the year 1838 for the same object.

"In the year 1720, the Society rendered assistance to the Greek church in Palestine, Syria, Mesopotamia, Arabia, and Egypt; and published in England, with a set of types cast for the purpose, an edition of above 10,000 New Testaments, 6,000 Psalters, and 5,000 Catechisms, besides an Abridgement of the History of the Bible; all in the Arabic language. King George the First contributed 500*l.* in aid of this undertaking. In 1809, the Society contributed liberally to the Arabic version of the Holy Scriptures, originally undertaken by Professor Carlyle at Cambridge.

"In 1808, the Society defrayed the charge of an edition of 2,250 Danish Prayer and psalm books, for the use of the Danish prisoners, and other indigent persons of that nation, in Great Britain; and grants were about that time frequently made for procuring Swedish and Finnish Bibles and Prayer books, for the use of seamen in the British service, and others. These books were consigned to the care of the pastor and elders of the Swedish Church in London.

"The Standing Committee of the Society have been empowered by the Board to procure the translation of such of the tracts on the Society's catalogue as shall be deemed desirable for the purpose, into any foreign language.

"In the year 1834, the Society, with the view of extending its operations, and adapting them to the wants of the times, resolved on the appointment of a Committee for the special purpose of superintending the publication, and promoting the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, and the Liturgy of our Church in foreign languages. The President of the Society, on a request being submitted to his Grace, nominated the members of this Committee. A grant was made by the Board to the Committee, to an amount not exceeding in the whole 4,000*l.* towards carrying on its designs. Since its establishment, several associations have been formed in aid of its objects: and although donors or subscribers to the Foreign Translation Fund do not thereby become members of the Society, these associations are allowed to purchase English Bibles and Common Prayer Books at cost prices, from the nearest District Committee; and they are at liberty to make their own regulations for the supply of their subscribers.

"From the reports of the Foreign Translation Committee, which are published annually, it appears that a new French version of the Bible is one of the principal points to which the attention of the Committee, aided by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, has been directed. The importance of this undertaking, both with reference to the Channel Islands, and to France itself, is generally admitted. The whole of the New Testament is now in type.

"The Committee have also undertaken a revised edition of the Liturgy, in French. The work is already in a forward state, and the Committee have reason to hope that they shall be able to publish the New Testament and the Liturgy before the end of the present year.

"The New Testament, in Spanish, has been adapted by the Committee to the Society's use, from the version of Torres-Amat, the present Bishop of Astorga. The revision of the Old Testament, in Spanish, is also in progress. The Committee have completed the revision of the Liturgy in Spanish; and this Liturgy is now publicly used in the Spanish Protestant congregation, established at Gibraltar by the Rev. L. Lucena, under the sanction of the Society.

"The new Dutch translation of the Liturgy, with the English in parallel columns, has been completed.

"A new version of the Liturgy, in modern Greek, under the care of the Rev. H. D. Leeves, of Athens, has just been published.

"The Arabic version of the Liturgy is finished, and is now being printed at Malta, under the direction of the Rev. C. F. Schlienz, who took charge of the translation. On the subject of this work, as well as of the intended Arabic translation of the Bible, a very long and interesting letter has been received from Mr. Schlienz. By this letter it appears that the writer, during his stay in Egypt, had had many opportunities of conversing both with Christians and Mahometans, and that the Eastern churches in those parts evidently looked with much interest to the publication of these versions.

"The Committee having lost some of their original members by death and resignation, and being desirous of having an addition made to their number, it has been agreed to request his Grace the President, as in the first instance, to nominate a few additional members of the Society as members of this Committee.

"2.—Missions and Transactions in the Colonies, &c.

"The second great branch of the Society's designs has been, to convey the blessings of Christianity to distant lands by the establishment and support of religious missions; and, accordingly, while it felt anxious to promote the spiritual welfare of this country, and a few small islands near our own shores, it also extended its regard to the inhabitants of Africa and America, and, on a more enlarged scale, of Asia.

"In the beginning of the year 1732, the Society, when it heard the melancholy account of the sufferings of the Protestants at Saltzburgh, who were driven from their country on account of their religion, by their own Roman Catholic government, resolved to afford help and comfort to these poor people, and began, with the permission of his Majesty King George the Second, to raise collections for them. At that time was published 'An Account of the Sufferings of the Persecuted Protestants in the Archbishopric of Saltzburgh;' and members of the Society were appointed to receive and collect contributions. Besides making many large remittances to Germany, it was thus enabled to fit out four transports of colonists to Georgia, in America. More than two hundred Protestant emigrants, chiefly Saltzburghers, with two missionaries and a schoolmaster, under the auspices of the Society, settled themselves in a place which they called Ebenezer, upon lands assigned to them by the trustees for establishing the colony*. On the separation of America from Great Britain, the mission was discontinued; and the funds which the Society had appropriated to its support, have been since applied to the general designs.

"In the year 1752, the Rev. R. C. Hartshorne, Rector of Brosley, Salop, remitted to the Society the sum of 250*l.* towards building a school, and employing a schoolmaster, in one of the Scilly Islands, called Tresco. From this beginning the Society proceeded to make further efforts for the spiritual welfare of the inhabitants of these desolate places. It has for many years continued to support schools, and to employ two clergymen as missionaries in the islands.

"These islands, which are five in number, have recently been declared, by an Order in Council issued under the authority of Parliament, to be, as they were before understood to have been, within the jurisdiction of the Lord Bishop of Exeter.

"In pursuance of a Resolution, by which, in 1710, the Society undertook the support and enlargement of the Protestant mission at Tranquebar, in the East Indies, a proposal was published in that year, inviting donations for an impression of the New Testament in Portuguese, and for forming charity schools among the heathens in Southern India; both which plans were speedily effected; and a correspondence was set on foot with many persons of worth and influence in the several presidencies. An East India Mission Committee was formed by the Society in London, and a separate fund for Indian affairs opened. The mission afterwards extended to Madras, Cuddalore, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, and Calcutta.

"The Society sent out to its missions in India a printer, types, printing-press, &c., in the year 1712. By means of this and other assistance, the missionaries were enabled, at different times, to translate and publish several editions of the whole, or parts of the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Common Prayer, the Psalter, and many books and tracts, in the Tamil, Hindostanee, and Portuguese languages. Among the earliest efforts of this kind which appear on the records of the Society, is a translation, in 1734, of the whole Bible into the Telinga dialect, by the missionary Schultz. In these departments, as well as in the general conduct of the missions, the views of the Society were for many years successfully promoted by the active services of those excellent missionaries, Ziegenbalg, Grundler, Plutsch, Swartz, Gerické, Jöenicke, Pohlé, Jacobi, Kolhoff, Cœmmerer, Rottler, and others. Of those who in earlier years had committed to them, among the heathen in that land of darkness, the ministry of reconciliation, the only two now remaining are Kolhoff and Cœmmerer. The former is in his seventy-ninth year, and fifty-sixth of his services in the mission. The latter, who went out in the year 1789, is now senior chaplain at Tranquebar, aged about seventy-two; having been engaged fifty years in missionary duty in India.

"There are some eminent and venerable names connected with the Society's mission in Southern India, which call for special notice in these pages.

"Bartholomew Ziegenbalg was not only a distinguished scholar, and a man of real piety, but one of the most successful missionaries that have adorned the Church of Christ. He was born at Pulnitz, in Upper Lusatia, in June, 1683, and lost both his parents in his infancy; but having been brought up under able and discreet teachers, he soon made great proficiency in learning; and, notwithstanding much physical weakness, acquired an energy of mind which, under God, afterwards carried him through the severest labours. In the year 1705 he was sent out by the King of Denmark, at the age of twenty-two, as the first missionary to Tranquebar. There he acquired the Tamil language, and, in 1707, built a church for preaching the word of God to the heathen. In 1711 he finished a translation of the New Testament into Tamil, and in the three following years, in addition to his various missionary labours, published several religious catechetical books in the Portuguese language. He also prepared and printed works in Tamil, jointly with his friend, the Rev. J. E. Grundler.

* Southey, in his Life of Wesley, vol. i. p. 86, says, 'The expulsion of these Saltzburghers was the last wholesale act of intolerance committed by a Roman Catholic government.' About 25,000 persons (a tenth part of the population) emigrated on this occasion; 17,000 of them settled in the Prussian states. The sum of 33,000*l.* was raised in London for the relief of the sufferers.

"In 1715, during a visit to Europe, he commended the cause of missions to his countrymen and others; composed and published a Tamil grammar; and waited on the friends of his mission in Great Britain.

"In 1716 he returned to Madras; the East India Company, at the instance of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, voting him a passage free of all expense.

"Among 'the friends of his mission,' above alluded to, were the members of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, who received him with peculiar respect at a General Meeting held on the 29th of December, 1715, and welcomed him with a Latin address. To this he returned thanks in a Malabarick speech, his interpretation of which, in Latin, was afterwards read by the Secretary. This address, which was eloquent and affectionate, concluded with the expression of his hope, that the Holy Spirit would unite the several members of the Society by the ties of mutual regard, and render their counsels effectual in bringing many souls to righteousness.

"After being presented to King George the First, and the Royal Family, and encouraged in his good work, this excellent person quitted our shores to encounter renewed and increasing toil in the service of his heavenly Master. Mingling with much personal exertion, profound mental application, (for he had already advanced far in a Tamil translation of the Old Testament,) it is scarcely to be wondered at, that he should have soon sunk under his various burdens. He resigned his spirit into the hands of his Redeemer on the 23rd of February, 1719, closing a life of eminent Christian usefulness at the age of thirty-six. His friend and associate in the ministry, John Ernest Grundler, was with him when he drew his last breath, and survived him little more than a twelvemonth. They were both buried in the chancel of the church at Tranquebar, one on each side of the communion table.

"The Rev. Henry Plutschko had also the honour and advantage of Ziegenbalg's friendship. Having been fellow-collegians at Halle, they were ordained at the same time for the Tranquebar mission, and embarked for India together. Their joint efforts in the promotion of Christian knowledge did not escape the kind and watchful eye of the Society in England; nor did the Society fail to notice their zeal and judgment in the foundation of a charity school for Malabar children; a design every way congenial with its own views. On the 13th of November, 1712, Mr. Plutschko attended a meeting of the Board, when the Society distinctly assured him of its intention to encourage the Danish mission; and presented him, from its then small means, with the sum of twenty guineas.

"In January 1749-50, the Rev. Christian Frederick Swartz* left England with two other missionaries, David Poltzenhagen and G. H. Huttemann, for Tranquebar; they having been obliged to sail at a short notice, without waiting on the Board.

"The Society having founded a mission at Trichinopoly, Mr. Swartz was some years afterwards appointed to this station, with the consent of the Royal Missionary College at Copenhagen, under whose directions he had been, while at Tranquebar. It appears from a letter written by a member of the Society to the Secretary in 1785, that great success had attended his missionary labours. 'I have the pleasure,' says he, 'to mention, from personal knowledge, that Mr. Swartz, the missionary at Trichinopoly, has been the happy instrument, under God, of making many, both of the military and of the natives, converts to true Christianity; not merely, as an established mode of worship, to bear the sign of the cross in baptism, but, in the genuine spirit of the Gospel of Christ, really to take it up, and become true followers of their crucified Lord.'

"In the previous year, when war and famine desolated Southern India, Swartz supported many of the native Christians and catechists by means of a large stock of rice which he had laid up; and Hyder Ali, when he invaded the Carnatic with 100,000 men, gave orders to his officers, 'to permit the venerable father Swartz to pass unmolested, and to show him respect and kindness, for,' said he, 'he is a holy man.'

"This eminent missionary, 'whose praise is in the Gospel throughout all the churches,' and whose name still flourishes in the East, and is never mentioned without love and respect, died on the scene of his labours in February, 1798.

"In the year 1801, the Rev. W. Christian Gerickè, the Society's missionary at Vepery, transmitted the following letter respecting Swartz, from Serfojee Rajah, the presumptive heir of the kingdom of Tanjore, who had visited the good man on his death-bed, and received his dying charge:—

"To the Honourable Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

"Honourable Sirs,

"I have requested of your missionaries to write to you, (their superiors and friends,) and to apply to you in my name for a monument of marble to be erected in their church, that is in my capital and presidency, to perpetuate the memory of the late Reverend Father Swartz, and to manifest the great esteem I have for the character of that great and good man, and the gratitude I owe to him, my father, my friend, the protector and guardian of my youth; and now I beg leave to apply to you myself, and to beg that, upon my account, you will order such a monument for the late reverend missionary, Father Swartz, to be made, and to be sent out to me, that it may be fixed to the pillar that is next to the pulpit from which he preached. The pillars of the church are about two cubits broad. May you, honourable Sirs, ever be enabled to send to this country such missionaries as are like the late Rev. Mr. Swartz.

"I am, honourable Sirs, yours faithfully

"and truly,

"SERFOJEE RAJAH.

"Tanjore, May 28, 1801."

"A suitable monument was prepared accordingly, and sent out to Tanjore to be placed in the mission church there.

"A monument was, at nearly the same time, raised to the memory of Swartz by the East India Company, in testimony of the high sense which they entertained of his long and eminent services.

"In February 1816, on the occasion of a visit which Bishop Middleton paid to the Rajah Serfojee, his highness opened the conversation by alluding to the benefits he had received from Mr. Swartz, whom he regarded as a father. The conversation being ended, he showed the bishop and his attendants the interior of his palace, and his library, which contained many books and pictures. Among these were portraits of the missionaries, from which he selected a portrait of Swartz, and presented it to the bishop.

"We are informed, that when the lamented Bishop Heber, in March 1826, shortly before his death, visited Tanjore, 'he walked over the premises of the mission, visited Swartz's chapel, halloved by the grave of the apostolic man, and copied the inscription on the stone which covers it; interesting as being the composition of the Rajah himself, and the only specimen of English verse ever attempted by a prince of India. The bishop was particularly pleased with the natural simplicity of expression in the last lines.*

"Sacred to the Memory
Of the REV. CHRISTIAN FREDERICK SWARTZ,
Missionary to the Honourable Society
For Promoting Christian Knowledge, in London;
Who departed this life
On the 13th of February, 1798,
Aged 71 years and 4 months.

Firm wast thou; humble and wise;
Honest, pure, free from disguise;

Father of orphans, the widow's support,
Comfort in sorrow of every sort;
To the benighted dispenser of light,
Doing and pointing to that which is right.
Thou blessing to princes, to people, to me,
May I, my Father, be worthy of thee,
Wisheth and prayeth thy Sarabojee."

"The bishop afterwards paid a visit of ceremony to the Rajah, 'who talked much of his dear father Swartz, and three times told the bishop he hoped his lordship would resemble him, and stand in his room.' After Bishop Heber's death it was found, by his private book of devotions, that this prince had been remembered in his prayers to the Almighty."

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

Nov. 1830.

AUSTRALIA.

THE Rev. W. West Simpson, who had been ordained by the Bishop of London, on the preceding Sunday sailed on the 26th October for Sydney, having received from the Government on the recommendation of the Society an appointment as Australian Chaplain.

NEW ZEALAND.

The Rev. John F. Churton, appointed Chaplain to the Settlers, who are proceeding to New Zealand, has taken his passage by the Bolton, which was to leave the river this morning. He has received from the Christian Knowledge Society a handsome Bible and Prayer Book, for the use of his church; and books to the value of 50*l*. for the poorer part of his congregation. The Rev. W. Selwyn has given 101 acres of land for a glebe, and a lady has presented a handsome communion service.

BARBADOS.

Mr. T. Saulez appointed a catechist for this island, sailed from Liverpool on Tuesday last, the 5th November.

The Bishop of Montreal has recently sent home a list of 18 new stations in his diocese (Lower Canada), at which the services of Clergymen are urgently required.

"To the Secretary of the Society.

"Marton, Bridlington, Yorkshire, Oct 2, 1830.

"REVEREND SIR,—Having now completed my visit to the East and North Ridings of Yorkshire, I am in a condition to state to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, how far it has pleased God to prosper the work which has been entrusted to my hands. It would be improper not to mention that the Society has not that measure of support in Yorkshire, which might be anticipated from the wealth and extent of the county.

"But I would not be supposed to address the Society in the language of discouragement. Far from it. I have found on the contrary many new supporters, as well as many old and attached friends; and I doubt not that the zeal of both will be quickened by the partial discouragements which I have met with. I have mentioned the East and North Ridings as my principal sphere, but the first place which I visited for the Society was in the West Riding—the town of Doncaster. Two very numerous meetings were held there on the morning and evening of the 3rd of September. On the preceding Sunday, I had preached twice in the town, as well as to a numerous congregation in the ancient village Church at Campsall. The collection in the town was divided between the Incorporated Society and the Church Missionary Society. Including collections in some adjoining villages, and at the anniversary meeting at Armthorpe, on the evening of the 2nd of September, the gross amount was above 100*l*. The poor villagers at Armthorpe were much occupied by their harvest, but they displayed as deep an interest in the objects of the Society, as their wealthier neighbours at Doncaster. At the morning meeting in the latter place, the Archdeacon of York gave the Society the great advantage of his presence as chairman. In no part of Yorkshire has the system of parochial collections been more efficiently carried out than in this neighbourhood, and should the same exertions be made in other places, the income of the Society will be immensely increased.

"From Doncaster I proceeded to Malton, where great efforts have been made to keep up the spirit which was produced by a visit from the Secretary of the Society last year. The Society is especially indebted to the exertions of the Rev. W. Walker, Secretary to the District Committee, as well as to the Venerable Archdeacon Todd, who presided at the numerous and respectable meeting which was held on the 6th Sept., in the town of Malton. The Rev. Dr. Hook, vicar of Leeds, lent his very valuable support, as well as the meeting as by an able sermon preached in the morning of the same day at the parish church. The audience was composed of the first families in the neighbourhood, and the sum collected in the course of the day exceeded 40*l*.

"The next station was Whitby. To those who know how ill this place is itself supplied with Church-room, it would not be surprising if the extension of the Gospel abroad had not found many supporters there. I am happy, however, after preaching upon the subject on Sunday, Sept. 8th, to have established a District Committee, at a meeting held on the following evening. A few permanent subscribers enrolled their names on the occasion, and in Charles Saunders, Esq., who undertook the office of Treasurer, the Society will, I doubt not, have an active advocate*.

"At Redcar, to which I next proceeded, a District Committee was formed for that place and the adjoining villages. The Rev. James Holme, vicar of Kirkleatham, became Treasurer; and the Rev. Joseph Wilkinson, incumbent of Redcar, Secretary.

"From Redcar I returned to Thirsk, when a meeting was fixed for the 12th of Sept. The attendance was respectable, and a District Committee, for which preparations have been made during the preceding year, was formally completed. In all these places I endeavoured to impress the importance of establishing Parochial Committees upon the clergy who were present, and many expressed themselves satisfied of the expediency of a step, which will, I am satisfied, prove as conducive to the efficiency of the Church at home, as it is essential to its extension in the colonies.

"Circumstances prevented the possibility of a meeting in behalf of the Society's designs at York, and I therefore gladly availed myself of an opportunity of preaching on the following Sunday, in that metropolis of the North, where a course of lectures, recently delivered by the Rev. T. Myers, on the Ancient History of the Saxon Church, afforded an appropriate introduction to the operations of an institution, which is endeavouring to establish pure and primitive Christianity in other countries.

"The villages of Thorpe, Arch, and Boston, about twelve miles from York, are the seat of a very thriving District Committee of your Society, at the annual meeting of which I next attended. The attendance was numerous as well as respectable, the collection ample, and the chairman (G. Lane Fox, Esq., M.P.), the Rev. W. Dixon, Canon Residentiary of York, the Rev. Dr. Hook, and others, did full justice to the claims of the Society.

"On the following morning, Sunday, Sept. 22, I advocated the Society's cause in the small church at Newton Kyme,—the Rev. E. Duncombe, the rector, is one of your most useful supporters in that neighbourhood; and in the evening, at the ancient and interesting church at Tadcaster, I collected above 14*l*., a larger portion of it than usual in half-pence, from the inhabitants of a small town, where the operations of the Society have heretofore been little known.

"These places are in the West Riding. I turned from Tadcaster towards the East Riding; a locality where less has heretofore been done for the Society than perhaps in any county in England. An attempt was last year made to establish a District Committee at Bridlington, which, owing to the lamented death of one of its officers—the Rev. Marmaduke Prickett, and the removal of the other, it has been necessary to renew; but with this exception, no District Committee whatever has existed in the whole Riding.

* The sum of 62*l*. has since been remitted from Whitby.

This deficiency has now however been, I trust, in part supplied; and I hope that the Committee, which I have been instrumental in forming at Pocklington, Beverley, and Hull, will be the means, in conjunction with that which has been revived at Bridlington, of creating an interest in the Society's designs in this, which, by hereditary connection, is more especially my own portion of the county.

"At Pocklington, on the 24th of Sept., George Legard, Esq. (the chairman), undertook the office of Treasurer, and the Rev. Charles Carr, that of Secretary. The meeting at Beverley on the 20th (Henry Broadley, Esq., M.P., in the chair), was attended by persons of great respectability from the neighbourhood; above 50*l*. was put down either in donations or annual subscriptions, and the Rev. C. A. Thurlow, incumbent of the minister, who had materially furthered the Society's interests, as well by an excellent speech at the meeting, as by making the preliminary arrangements, consented to be Secretary. Next day at Hull, the meeting was still more numerous, and the Society had the benefit of being introduced to the public, by that venerable and highly respected man, the Rev. T. Dikes.

"From Hull I returned northward to Scarborough, where I preached on Sunday, Sept. 29th, for that long tried friend of the Society, the Rev. M. H. Miller, and on the following day attended a very respectable meeting, at which the first anniversary of the Scarborough District Committee was commemorated. Sir John Johnson took the chair, supported by Sir Thomas Legard, and other persons of influence in the neighbourhood. My labours closed yesterday with the re-establishment of the District Committee, in the adjoining town of Bridlington. In the absence of the Archdeacon, his official (the Rev. G. W. Wrangham), took the chair, the Rev. F. Simpson was appointed Secretary, and the Rev. Wm. Tiffin, Treasurer to the Committee.

"Nothing now remains before me but a visit to some of the wealthy and populous cities of the West Riding. I trust that in my several wanderings (besides the sums collected, and which the local Treasurers will transmit), there has been diffused an increased knowledge, both of the need of greater efforts for the extension of the Gospel, and of the position of the Church as the Missionary Society. Aid me, Rev. Sir, by your prayers, that this feeling may spread more widely both among our clergy and people. Should my feeble efforts tend to this result, I shall not regret having placed myself in circumstances in which I have felt my own incompetence, as deeply as I have the greatness of our common cause.

"I am, Rev. Sir,

"Your obedient servant,

"ROBERT ISAAC WILBERFORCE."

"To the Secretary of the Society.

"East Farleigh, October 30, 1839.

"REVEREND SIR,—When I wrote to you some time back from Bridlington, I stated that I had it in contemplation to spend a few days in the West Riding. They proved to be days of great interest. As it would occupy too long a time to describe all I saw, I will merely give you an extract from my journal.

"Oct. 15. Monday Evening. Leeds.—Immense meeting. Dr. Hook's great popularity. Surprising to see the influence he has already gained. All allusions to the system of the Church enthusiastically responded to.—Dr. Wolff's famous speech! He bore testimony to the zeal and piety of the Society's missionaries, with whom he had met in India; and also to the importance for that country of the system of the Church. In the East he found every where Bishops, priests, and deacons. The first question to a missionary, by what Bishop were you sent out? On this point he appealed to Assad Yakooch Kayat, whom he had known in Syria. Assad followed and confirmed him. Spoke shortly myself, there being many speakers, Messrs. Poole, Martineau, &c. Meeting not over till half past 10.—Tuesday. Huddersfield. Meeting not so large as Leeds, but very good. Dr. Wolff again. District Committee formed with every prospect of large support. Messrs. Oldham, Wilkinson, &c. warm friends.—Wednesday morning. Large meeting at Halifax. Another important District Committee formed. Archdeacon Musgrave in the chair. Dr. Hook and Kayat the Syrian took part. Spoke myself more fully than at Leeds.—Thursday morning. At meeting of the Ellend Society. Evening to Bradford. Large meeting. Another new District Committee. Dr. Scoresby the new Vicar in the chair. His first appearance and friendly reception.—Saturday. To Kildwick.—Sunday. Preached in the morning at Kildwick. Large congregation of agricultural poor. Interesting population and Church, called the Lang-kirk, because the longest Church in Craven. Afternoon Preached in Mr. Parson's Church at Skipton. Church but lately built, through Mr. Sidgwick's means. Good congregation. Nearly the handsomest modern Church I have ever seen.—Monday. By Bolton and back to Leeds.

"I feel satisfied that the principles of the Incorporated Society need only to be known, in order to obtain for it ample support from this wealthy and populous part of the county of York.

"I have the honour to be, Rev. Sir,

"Your obedient servant,

"ROBERT I. WILBERFORCE."

"To the Secretary of the Society.

"Brightstone Rectory, Oct. 23, 1839.

"REV. SIR,—Having concluded my western tour for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, I believe you will wish me to follow up my last letter by a few lines, which will give the general summary of my proceedings. My last account brought me to South Molton on Wednesday the 2nd of October. On the 4th, a morning meeting was held at Tiverton, the Bishop in the chair, surrounded by the gentry of the town and neighbourhood, of all shades of political opinion: twenty pounds were collected in the room, and new subscribers to the amount of 13*l*. 5*s*. enrolled their names on our list. On the following morning the archdeacon of Exeter presided at a meeting at Sidmouth, where 21*l*. was collected at the doors, and 16*l*. 8*s*. 4*d*. subscribed. On the following day, Sunday the 6th, I preached for the Society in the city of Exeter, at St. Sidwell's in the morning, at St. David's in the afternoon, to crowded and attentive congregations, whose donations to the cause were, in the morning, 22*l*. 4*s*. and in the afternoon, 27*l*. 10*s*. 4*d*. On the evening of the next day, Monday the 7th, I preached at Crediton to a congregation which filled the noble Cathedral Church of that town; collection 16*l*. 4*s*. 10*d*. On Tuesday the 8th, at a meeting held at Honiton, the archdeacon Stevens in the chair, 36*l*. 11*s*. 11*d*. was collected in the room, and the names of new subscribers entered to the amount of 32*l*. 1*s*. On the Wednesday I attended a strictly parochial meeting in the agricultural parish of Broadclist. Sir Thomas Acland, Bart. M. P. took the chair in the village school-room. The interest of the people in our cause was most encouraging: it was shown not only in their attendance and fixed attention, but by a collection at the doors of 13*l*. 15*s*. 6*d*. and a list of annual subscribers to the amount of 19*l*. On the following day, after attending at the Bishop's visitation, and being introduced by him to his clergy, I went on with Archdeacon Barnes to a meeting held at Topsham, where 6*l*. 3*s*. 6*d*. was collected and subscribed. On Friday the 11th, our great Exeter meeting was held: from the cathedral service, where 78*l*. was collected for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, we adjourned to the largest rooms in Exeter, which were completely filled by a most gratifying assemblage, and where (for the 15th time) the Bishop presided over and opened our proceedings. Lord Courteney, and Sir T. Acland, and the Dean of Exeter, and others, took a part in moving the resolutions; at the close of which, 91*l*. 5*s*. 11*d*. was added to the morning collection at the cathedral. On the 12th, I proceeded to Torquay, where, with Sir John Yarde Buller, Bart. M. P. as chairman, and the neighbouring gentlemen and clergy present, we held an important meeting, at which 59*l*. 17*s*. 5*d*. were given and subscribed. On the morning of the next day, I preached at Torquay Chapel, and in the afternoon at the mother Church of Iton, when 46*l*. 13*s*. and 19*l*. 14*s*. 7*d*. were respectively collected. On Monday the 14th, I attended at Teignmouth, Mr. Sweetland, president of the District Committee last year established, acting as our president, Lord Devon moving the first resolution supported by the clergy of the place: and 37*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* was collected and subscribed. On Tuesday morning I went with Lord Courteney (who presided) and Sir. T. Acland, to a meeting held at Dawlish, which yielded 36*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* in donations, and 38*l.* 11*s.* in new annual subscribers; and thence went on to Exmouth in the afternoon, where archdeacon M. Stevens took the chair at a large and most respectable meeting. Here, including a donation of 25*l.* from the Rev. Jas. Godwin, 60*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.* was received at the door, and new subscribers' names to the amount of 15*l.* 11*s.* On the Wednesday I went on to a meeting held at Newton, where 52*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* was given and subscribed. From this place I hastened to an evening meeting held at Exeter. It was determined to give the middle classes of that important city, who could not attend the morning meeting of the preceding week, an opportunity of listening to a statement of our case: the result abundantly justified the experiment. An hour before the chair was taken, the room was crowded by a most respectable audience, who listened with the deepest interest to the principles and facts brought out before them. The very Rev. the Dean of Exeter presided. 74*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* were collected in the room (almost 50*l.* in silver), and the new subscribers announced since the former meeting amounted to 20*l.* 3*s.*, being, as it was believed, but a small part of the total expected increase. On the next day I concluded my tour with a meeting held at Axminster, the border parish of the diocese, where 40*l.* 11*s.* in collections and subscriptions, were added to our funds.

"I cannot close this brief account without expressing my thankfulness to God for the successful issue of my undertaking. As far as man can judge, this great cause has taken a deep root in these parts, and will not, I trust, be suffered hereafter to wither. Men of all political parties have come forward to join us: the clergy of all shades of sentiment (with one or two exceptions marked by their rarity) have heartily co-operated with us; and allow our claim to be the first missionary organ of the Church. The sum already raised has been very considerable, and is doubly valuable as an index of feeling.

"In my former letter I announced a total of 1210*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*, to which I am now able to add further collections, as reported to you in this letter, of 864*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.*, making a total of 2074*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*

"All now depends, under God's blessing, on the vigour with which 'parochial associations' are carried out. There need be no limit to their success; from the small town of Fowey I have just heard that the subscribers have increased, since my last letter, from 78 to 88 persons. Broadclist parish is an encouraging specimen of what agricultural districts may yield. Much must turn on the activity of your district secretaries. Where they are able to help the clergy round them in forming parochial associations, holding their first quarterly meetings, and organizing a body of collectors, the work flourishes abundantly. In this the district secretaries of the West appeared to be willing, and able to exert themselves. But to carry out this benefit fully, it is very desirable that the districts should not be too large: that those only should undertake the office who are able to carry it out with the spirit which your present circumstances require: and that they should send in annually a registered report of the doings of every parish in their district. To the importance of this plan I found them every where awake. Indeed, just so far as we can make the work parochial, and co-extensive with our general Church machinery, just so far will our success be widely and securely spread.

"I cannot close this letter without expressing in it, both on your behalf and on my own, my deep sense of the uniform kindness forbearance and aid which I have every where experienced from almost every clergyman and layman whom I have had the happiness to meet in Devonshire and Cornwall. Very long indeed will it be before these impressions are effaced. To the Lord Bishop of the diocese it would be unseemly in me to say anything; but I must once more express my conviction that a large measure of our success has been owing to God's blessing on his patient, earnest, and most able labours in the behalf of this Society. May they be repaid him in a blessing on his own peculiar diocese.

"I have the honour of remaining,

"Rev. Sir, your obedient servant,
"SAMUEL WILBERFORCE."

"From the Venerable Geo. Barnes, Archdeacon of Barnstaple, to the Secretary of the Society.

"Sewton, Nov. 4, 1839.

"MY DEAR SIR,—In pursuance of our arrangements for the Western part of the diocese, I preached at Taunton and Ilminster on Sunday 13th October; Mr. Pinder preaching on the same day at Bridgwater and Stowey. On Monday 14th, we had an excellent meeting in Bridgwater, at which Archdeacon Brymer presided, as he also did at the subsequent meetings at Langport, Taunton, and Crewkerne; on the 18th, an association was formed in Wellington; and on Thursday last, 31st, I had the satisfaction of forming a Deanery Committee at Dunster, under the presidency of Sir T. D. Acland, Bart. M. P., Sir John Trevelyan, Bart., and Colonel Luthill. The collection at Bridgwater was 41*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, at Crewkerne 36*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.*, and at Dunster 39*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* I believe the amount of contributions in West Somerset will be about 150*l.*, or more; making the whole, in Somersetshire, somewhat more than 370*l.*; exclusive of many new subscribers, and without reference to the city of Bath.

"But we shall estimate the advantage of these meetings very imperfectly, if we look only to the present amount of contributions. Much greater good is done by thus exhibiting the Church in one of her most important and most interesting offices; and by uniting her members in maintaining and extending Christianity throughout the vast field of the foreign colonies and settlements of the British crown.

"A detailed account of the new committees and associations formed, will be forwarded to your board. And I have only now to assure the standing committee, that I have had very great pleasure in executing to the best of my power the charge confided to me; I have received very kind assistance and great hospitality from several friends of the Society among the clergy, more especially from Archdeacon Brymer; and the committee will be sensible how much is due to Mr. Pinder, and to Mr. Baker, the diocesan secretary. I would hope it is unnecessary for me to add, that I shall most readily at all times give my best exertions towards furthering the sacred interests of the Society in all their objects and operations.

"I am your faithful servant,
"GEO. BARNES."

"PAROCHIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

"Long Wittenham, October 23, 1839.

"REV. SIR,—As I know that you are looking with some anxiety for the practical results of your 'suggestions for the formation of Parochial Associations in aid of the Society for Propagating the Gospel,' it gives me great pleasure to be able to tell you that I have adopted them with a success far exceeding my most sanguine expectations. I proceeded in a manner, which I know will be approved by the Society, and which appeared to me most likely at the same time to test the real feeling of my flock, and to insure steady and permanent support. I placed notices on the Church doors, stating that sermons would be preached on the subject of the Society, and that a meeting would be held on the following Tuesday, for the purpose of establishing a Parochial Association in aid of the funds. Without canvassing a single person, either for their attendance or support otherwise than I have stated; our schoolroom, capable of containing more than 100 persons conveniently, was crowded to excess, and I fear that those who crowded round the doors and windows were unable to hear the explanations of the nature and objects of the Society, in giving which I had the kind assistance of two neighbouring clergymen. I enrolled no less than 80 names at the close of the meeting, mostly agricultural labourers, at a payment of one penny monthly. I admitted the children of the school at $\frac{1}{2}$ d. monthly. I have not done yet, and I shall be much disappointed if a considerable addition is not made to my list before the end of the week (my population is 541). I had no collection at the doors, as I am now more than ever convinced that the system of enrolment is the only one to secure the sort of support we are so anxious to obtain. Only let the clergy be persuaded to follow your suggestions, and by God's blessing nothing can hinder the results that you anticipate: not only will you get abundance of money, but 'the interest excited for the members of our communion in foreign lands, will be found to form a new bond between the pastor and his flock; it will kindle the love of the people to their Church, by showing them, that it is not a mere name or abstraction, but a living and spreading communion,' and I am most fully persuaded, that 'whatever labour any clergyman may take in the establishment of an association, and in superintending and directing its machinery, will not only prove a blessing to the ends of the earth; but will also return abundantly into his own parish, and his own bosom.' In the anticipation of these results in my own case, I beg to return the Society my sincere thanks for their suggestions; and I only speak the words of truth and soberness, when I declare that I would not accept from any single person a sum double the amount in exchange, for my list of subscribers. That God's blessing may rest on the Society's labours, is the earnest prayer of yours very faithfully,

"JAMES CLUTTERBUCK."

The following Legacies have been received by the Society in the present year:—

A meeting to form an association in aid of the Society, was held on Friday evening last, in the new district of St. Peter's, Mile-End, in the parish of Stepney. W. Cotton, Esq., in the chair. Among those who moved resolutions, were Rev. Dr. Caul, Mr. Justice Burton, of Sydney, New South Wales; the Rev. A. M. Campbell, and the Rev. Thomas Jackson, the minister of the Church.

London has hitherto contributed to this great Missionary Society less in proportion to its wealth and population, than many of the provincial towns; but we are happy to learn that efforts are now making to awaken the people of the metropolis, especially those connected with the colonies, to the present melancholy destitution of the Colonial Church.

A meeting is also announced at Blackheath for the 14th, and at Hampton, for the 21st of this month.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Madras and South India Mission.

THE following passages are abridged from the joint communications of the Missionaries, at the close of 1838; and may serve to show the gradual improvements which are being introduced in reference to the organization and discipline of the mission, both in the work of the ministry and in school operations:—

"Although many of the congregations remain very much what they were, yet in some there has been improvement, both in numbers and in good order; especially, as it has just been observed, in Mr. Dent's district, where they now enjoy the more frequent and regular visits of the missionary, without which they cannot be expected to flourish. Strict, and in many instances painful, discipline is absolutely necessary to their spiritual prosperity; and continually are we obliged to use the authority of this kind which the Lord has committed to us, in expelling from the congregations individuals who will not conform to the precepts of the Gospel.

"At the beginning of the half year there were twenty-three boys in the seminary. Two of these, who had made satisfactory progress in their studies, have been sent by the committee to acquire a higher degree of knowledge in Bishop Corrie's Grammar-school. Two of the elder boys have been attending the Preparandi class, with the view of being employed, after a suitable period, as assistant catechists. On the return of Mr. Schaffter, he delivered over seven of his seminary boys to us, having also sent three to Bishop Corrie's Grammar-school; and consequently the number of the boys now in the seminary has increased to thirty; besides whom there are five day scholars.

"At the end of December there were 2,680 children receiving instruction in fifty-three masters' and forty-one catechists' schools. In this number we have to observe that the schools of the Meignanapooram district are also included, as they were not formally removed from under our list before the end of the year.

"The course of instruction pursued in all our schools is purely Christian. Heathen books are not allowed to be used, except such—and they are very few—as treat of morality, and are approved by us. There are now 731 boys who can read our Gospels and tracts, and the progress they have made during the past year is very satisfactory. Many of the older boys in these mission schools, with whom we frequently converse, are, we trust, convinced of the folly of idolatry; and if they had their choice, we presume would forsake it, and embrace Christianity. We have, since our last report, established schools in some central places; such as Palamcottah, Tatchanalloor, Thencasy, &c., where several children, even of respectable natives, are taught in the principles of our religion, and from whom our masters receive every encouragement. At Thencasy the people have erected a spacious school-house, bordering on the main road leading to Courtallum, and hard by the Roman Catholic church; which evidently shows their desire to have their children instructed.

"Sunday schools have been begun in some congregations, under the superintendence of the catechists; and they appear to be going on well. There are, at present, 75 who attend on the Lord's Day to be instructed; viz. 16 men, 11 women, 34 boys, and 14 girls.

"There are six schools for girls, including Mrs. Pettitt's boarding school. Two have been established during the last year in the Dohnavoor district, which appear to be progressing. In all these there are 179 children."

Thus far the Palamcottah district.

State of the Second or Northern District of the Mission.

The Rev. P. P. Schaffter, since his return to the mission, has been appointed to labour here. We subjoin his account of this part of the missionary field, at the close of the year 1838.

"During the last four months there have been 30 baptisms in this mission; viz. 9 men, 8 women, and 13 children. The seventeen grown-up people are all such as have been learning the word of God for a long time.

"There are at present six head and superintending catechists, and forty-nine catechists, in the part of the Tinnevely mission with me. The monthly meetings for their instruction and edification have been regularly kept up.

"There are at present with me twenty-four schools under regular masters, and twenty-three under catechists. All these are superintended by two head school-masters, who visit and examine each school once in two months. There is no other instruction imparted in our schools except such as is Christian and useful; and there are a great number of children in our schools who learn with zeal and delight, and lay up a good store of knowledge, which, by the blessing of God, may become useful to them for this life and for the life which is to come.

"In the month of October last one schoolmaster was baptized. Five years ago he applied to me for baptism; but being of high caste, and consequently having many difficulties to overcome, the fear of the world prevailed upon him to such a degree, that he gave up his purpose. Seven months ago he declared to me that he was tired of having his feet in two boats, and requested me earnestly to baptize him; and after a few months of further trial, I did so, in the presence of the other schoolmasters. His son, a most hopeful youth, I baptized a few months before him. All these are new calls upon us not soon to give up hope. We shall reap, if we faint not.

"We have at present only two girls' schools, both under Mrs. Schaffter. One of these contains thirty-four girls, fed and clothed on the premises, by the assistance of some kind Christian friends."

The third, or Shenkoolam district, was under the charge of the Rev. H. Harley, who has subsequently been removed to Cochin, to supply the absence of the Rev. S. Ridsdale, now in this country on account of health.

State of the Fourth, or Satankoolam District.

The Rev. C. Blackman reports as follows, at the close of the year 1838:—

"In general the mission is in much the same state as when last reported on. The division in this part of Tinnevely continues: the heathens still flock into the Christian Church: 730 have been added to the congregations: Satan is not passive: nearly 300 have relapsed into heathenism. Thousands in these parts have, for the last forty years, made a profession of Christianity; many are added to them every year from heathenism; idolatry is abolished from many villages and hamlets; and the only place of worship found within them is dedicated to the service of the true God.

"I have visited all the congregations—forty-three in number—once, and most of them several times, during the last six months.

"The number of catechists and assistant catechists is forty-two. The catechists who live sufficiently near come once a week for instruction. We may hope in a few years to raise up a body of intelligent catechists, well versed in the Scriptures, and able to teach others.

"The number of boys' and girls' schools is twenty-three, conducted by twenty-seven schoolmasters and assistants."

State of the Fifth or Meignanapooram District.

The Rev. J. Thomas is located in the Meignanapooram district. We first select a few extracts from his half-yearly report, ending Dec. 1838:—

"I have felt a higher degree of interest in this, than in any other division of the mission, and a greater measure of affection for the people. The number of Catechists at present is eighteen. Their conduct, with one exception, has been satisfactory.

"The congregations are, I think, in as healthful a condition as can well be looked for in the present state of the mission. The knowledge of the history and truths of Christianity, which most of the people acquire under the teaching of the catechists, is highly gratifying, and it only wants the influence of the Holy Spirit to make many hundreds burning and shining lights.

"The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper has been administered at Meignanapooram, the principal village; and the number of communicants altogether, including 14 of the catechists, is 82.

"The number of schools in this district is 16, having 460 children on the lists, and 291 in average attendance. By these schools, independently of the benefit conferred upon the children of the Christian converts, very many heathen boys are well instructed in the nature of the Christian religion, and early taught the folly of idolatry."

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCIL.

(Copy) NATIONAL SOCIETY'S OFFICE, SANCTUARY, WESTMINSTER, 23d October, 1839.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge your letter of the 21st instant, in which you state, for the information of the Committee of the National Society, in reply to the inquiry from this office, dated the 16th instant, that "with respect to the applicants who accept portions of the Parliamentary Grant under regulation A, the Committee of Council disclaim all right or intention to insist on the adoption of any regulations which may be suggested to them on the report of their Inspectors."

I am further instructed to state, that the Committee of the National Society, considering that their lordships expressly disclaim all right of interference and control as the consequence of an inspection grounded upon Government aid towards the erection of a School, and taking also into account the very limited number of Schools to which this partial inspection extends, are unwilling to stand between the bounty of Parliament and the claims of applicants for a participation therein; and will leave the decision in each case to the judgment of the parties respectively interested.

* Since this report was drawn up, in the months of January and February, 485 more have placed themselves under Christian instruction in the Satankoolam district.

But the Committee feel bound to state, that they can never directly sanction or approve any system of inspection which is not derived from, and connected with the authorities of the Church. Such a system they have already stated they are engaged in preparing, and their conviction remains unshaken that no inspection, not authorized by the heads of the Church, can be made acceptable to the clergy and contributors to National Schools, or prove satisfactory in its general results.

They still entertain the hope that a representation of the grounds, upon which they feel themselves compelled to object to the kind of inspection proposed by the Committee of Council may have the effect of inducing their lordships to reconsider the proposition made to them on this point by the Committee of the National Society. They will, therefore, in a subsequent letter, request their lordships' attention to a statement of these grounds of objection; and that statement they will feel it their duty also to communicate to the several applicants for aid from the Parliamentary Grant.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

JOHN SINCLAIR, Secretary.

The Secretary to the Committee of Council on Education, &c. &c.

(Copy) NATIONAL SOCIETY'S OFFICE, SANCTUARY,
WESTMINSTER, 25th October, 1839.

Sir,—I had the honour to inform the Committee of Council on Education in my letter of the 15th instant, that the Committee of the National Society were not only doubtful as to the nature of the inspection contemplated by their lordships, whether it implied a claim to any exercise of authority; but also thought it liable to serious objections on other grounds. In my letter of the 23rd, I stated that the Committee had resolved upon submitting those objections to their lordships, in the earnest hope of prevailing on them to reconsider the plan proposed. It is for this purpose, that I now respectfully solicit their attention to the following remarks.

Their lordships declare, that their inspector shall "not be authorized to examine into the religious instruction and general regulations of the School," that they "intend to appoint an inspector solely for the purpose of visiting National Schools," that they have "requested the Bishop of Chichester to name to them some person who shall be in his opinion duly qualified for this important task," and that "any vacancy will be filled up in a similar spirit, and with a like recommendation."

To these arrangements the Committee of the National Society would allege the fundamental objection, that the inspection is not to proceed under the sanction of Church authority. For although it is proposed that one of the Bishops shall recommend a person to the Committee of Council, to be by them nominated inspector, it is not by the Bishop's authority, that the inspection is to be carried on, but by the authority of the Committee of Council: and accordingly, in the certificate required to be signed by the managers of schools, the visitor in question is expressly designated "their Lordships' Inspector." But were the actual nomination vested in the Bishop, the ecclesiastical sanction given to such nomination would extend only to the particular diocese of that Bishop; and the inspection of National Schools in other dioceses could not be considered as emanating from the authorities of the Church. The Committee of the National Society are precluded by those principles which they are bound no less by duty than inclination to maintain, from sanctioning any plan of inspection for National Schools, which is not derived from and connected with the National Church.

With respect to the object of such inspection, they desire to remark, that if secular instruction to the exclusion of religious, be made the subject of investigation by a person acting under royal authority, and of official reports made by him to the legislature, the former will undoubtedly be encouraged to the disparagement of the latter. The master will almost unavoidably direct his chief attention to that department in which his scholars, by a display of their proficiency will bring him credit with the government, and will neglect the other, which the government passes over without notice. He will be more anxious to see his pupils exhibit their attainments in geography, arithmetic, or history, than to instil into their minds, and impress upon their hearts, that less showy but more valuable knowledge, to which every other kind, desirable as it may be, ought to be secondary and subservient; and by which alone they can be trained to moral duty here, or prepared for happiness hereafter. The same pernicious prejudice will be apt to arise in the minds of parents, and still more of children, who will naturally undervalue lessons to which no regard is paid on the day of examination.

The Committee would next advert to the narrow grounds on which this claim to inspection rests. It is not maintained that the public has any pretension whatever to superintend the discipline and management of Schools founded and maintained by private bounty alone, but it is contended that the public, as a contributor, has a right to inquire into the expenditure of its own contributions. Those who urge this argument do not consider, how very small a proportion the public grant in the cases now under consideration bears to the whole outlay upon the Schools. The public settles no endowment upon the master, it allows him neither dwelling-house, nor garden, it provides no fund for the expenses of tuition, but only gives a small contribution to assist in the first erection of the buildings. In return it makes some very equitable requirements as to the execution of the work, the application of the subscriptions, and the security of the tenure. This has been readily admitted: and this is all that the public, in its character of a contributor, seems entitled to exact. Its claims to inspection appear to be exhausted, when it has ascertained that its contribution has been fairly expended, that the tenure of the site is good, and the edifice suitable and substantial. The business of inspection in Church Schools, ought to be left to the Church itself, which by its establishment as a part of the constitution of the country, and by its exertions in the cause of education, is entitled to claim this confidence on the part of the government. But for the government to insist further, that, because it has contributed one-third or one-fourth towards the erection of the mere building, it shall be entitled to inspect, and perhaps eventually to control, the entire discipline and economy of the School, upon principles contrary to the wishes of the other subscribers, would be a pretension hardly to be justified. No doubt the other subscribers are at liberty to accept or reject the assistance of the public; but it would be taking an inequitable advantage of their necessities, and of the difficulties they experience in the first erection of a School, to exact so large a share of influence in return for so small a share of contribution.

Again, their lordships' plan of inspection would retard rather than advance the progress of education, by discouraging, for the future, those who have hitherto been its most active and liberal promoters. Of the six thousand seven hundred national schools throughout the kingdom, the far greater number have originated with the parochial clergy; who, either from their own resources, or by the exertion of their private or professional influence, have made nearly all the provision which now exists for the education of the poor in the principles of the Church. But no clergyman can be expected to evince the same zeal for the erection of schools, and to make the same sacrifices for their support, when he finds his operations exposed to an inspection which he disapproves; and if, unhappily, the parochial minister should at last be superseded by the inspector, the periodical visits of the one will be found a most inadequate substitute for the continual superintendence of the other.

The Committee may be allowed further to observe, that the partial inspection proposed by their lordships cannot easily be reconciled with the more perfect system contemplated by the National Society. When the Society appoints inspectors to visit all its schools, those examined by the agents of Government will be liable to two inspections upon different principles; the one calculated to exalt the secular, the other the religious part of education; from which anomaly nothing can be anticipated but general discord and confusion among the managers and supporters, the teachers and the scholars.

When the Committee of the National Society affirm that their intended system of inspection is more complete in its authority, its application, and the subject matter of the enquiry, than the plan proposed by the Committee of Council, a doubt may occur whether it is not liable to this objection, that it would give to a Society aided by public money the power of reporting on the efficiency of its own arrangements. But this objection would imply misapprehension of the relation subsisting between the Society and the schools receiving aid on its recommendation. No public money has been granted to the National Society; nor does the Society require from the applicants a conformity to any arrangements of its own, other than those to which they are bound by their relation generally to the Church itself, and specifically to their dioceses. This is evident from the form of application for a Treasury Grant. It is not, therefore, as to the efficiency of any arrangements made by the National Society that the inspectors will have to report, but as to the efficiency of the arrangements made by the managers of schools; who, while they would gladly submit their schools to a rightly-constituted examination, would not desire to have any voice in the selection or appointment of the inspectors.

The Committee of the National Society, in case the above arguments should unhappily not prevail with the Committee of Council, would, in conclusion, earnestly press upon their lordships' consideration, the great wrong that would be done to applicants on the present occasion by the imposition of new conditions upon grants to schools, all of which have been undertaken, and some of them completed, in full confidence that the bounty of Parliament would be extended to them upon the accustomed terms. It may be added that the Society itself, in its correspondence with the applicants, has not hesitated to act upon the same conviction.

It is with great regret that the Committee of the National Society have felt themselves compelled to differ from the Committee of Council on the important question of inspection; but they must be allowed to repeat that they can never sanction or approve any system of inspection which does not emanate from Church authority, and does not distinctly recognize the paramount importance of religious, as compared with secular instruction. To the maintenance of these principles they consider themselves bound by the very terms on which the Sovereign granted to the Society its Charter of Incorporation: "We are satisfied that the best interests of these realms can in no way be more effectually promoted than by the encouragement of moral and religious education, throughout all classes of our people."

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

JOHN SINCLAIR, Secretary.

The Secretary to the Committee of Council on Education.

EDUCATION.

Committee of Council on Education.
Council Office, Whitehall, Oct. 5, 1839.

Reverend Sir,—With reference to the application for a grant of £621. in aid of the erection of school-rooms at Paddington, I am directed by the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education to transmit to you the enclosed copy of their Lordships' minute; and calling your attention to the 3rd clause of the 4th regulation and to the 5th regulation, I am to state that the Lords of the Committee of Council are not satisfied that the terms of those regulations are fulfilled in the case of this school.

Their Lordships object to the proposed tenure, and require to be informed more specifically as to the materials of which the schools are to be constructed.

Their Lordships also desire further and more precise information as to the number of children who will receive daily instruction upon the opening of the school.

You will have the goodness to reply at your earliest convenience, as my Lords are appropriating the grants.

I have the honour to be, Reverend Sir,
Your obedient servant,
HARRY CHESTER.

Parsonage, Paddington, Nov. 5, 1839.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 5th of October, I have to state, for the information of the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education, that the additional national and infant school-houses now building in this parish are nearly finished; that they will hold 400 children; and that the tenure of the site and the materials employed are such as could not fail to be satisfactory to their Lordships.

But it is needless to trouble you at present with details upon these subjects, since, glad as I should be to obtain assistance from the public purse upon the conditions annexed to former grants from the Lords of the Treasury, I am not prepared to embarrass the future operations of our schools by placing myself under an engagement which tends, in my opinion, to withdraw parochial schools from the superintendence of the Bishops and clergy, and to perpetuate a system of national education which will be set aside, I hope, at no distant day by parliament, as inconsistent with the principles of the British Constitution, and repugnant to the feelings of the great body of the people.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
A. M. CAMPEELL.

Harry Chester, Esq.

LIVERPOOL ESTABLISHED CHURCH SOCIETY.

A MEETING was held in Liverpool on Friday, Oct. 25, for the formation of a new association, having for its object the promotion and encouragement of Protestant principles in the rising generation. It is designated "The Young Men's Established Church Society." It was one of the most numerous meetings ever held within the hall, it being so exceedingly crowded that hundreds surrounded the doors unable to gain admittance, and fears were entertained inside for the safety of the floors.

Mr. Cresswell Cresswell, M.P. for Liverpool, occupied the chair.

The most influential of the gentry, merchants, and clergy of the borough and neighbourhood appeared upon the platform.

The following declaration was read as the basis of the society:—

"We, the undersigned members of the Established Church of England and Ireland, feel ourselves constrained to protest in the most decided manner (both in word and deed) against the opinions now advocated by the enemies of our national Establishment—to wit, that the state, as such, has no concern with religion, but should leave it wholly to what is called the voluntary principle.

"We feel surprised and grieved that any of the children of those who originally left the bosom of the Church, through matters of form, should so far forget the faith of their fathers as to coalesce with infidels and Romanists in their opposition to our national Establishment—thus declaring, that having to choose between the union of Church and state on the one hand, and absolute irreligion and gross superstition on the other, they decide in favour of infidelity and Popery, and against all national religion.

"We consider the Established Church (under God's guidance) as the grand breakwater against Popery, the impregnable barrier to infidelity, and essentially the poor man's best inheritance. We believe a Protestant state should not only recognize the Protestant religion, but should also support it and extend its influence; and as large numbers of our fellow-countrymen are left without the means of grace (the inefficiency of the voluntary principle being thus shown), we deem it the duty of government to afford the required aid.

"We feel ourselves called upon to protest, in the most solemn manner, against the attempts now making to compromise the Protestant principles of our national schools, by departing from the exclusive use of the authorized version of the holy Scriptures and the exclusive control of the ministers of the Established Church. Deeming the word of God to be the only true standard of faith and duties, we resolve to contend earnestly against such glaring and dangerous innovations.

"For the above purposes we hereby form ourselves into a society, to be designated 'The Liverpool Young Men's Established Church Society,' and we adopt the following rules for our guidance:—

"Rule 1. This society shall be composed of all members of the established Church of England and Ireland who shall sign the above declaration.

"2. The society shall be under the control of a patron, two vice-patrons, president, twelve vice-presidents, treasurer, two auditors, two secretaries, and a committee of fifteen members: the whole to be chosen annually at a general meeting.

"3. The committee shall meet once in every month, to receive and impart information relative to the objects of the society, and to transact the general business of the association. All proceedings to commence with prayer.

"4. A general meeting of the society shall be held once a quarter, at which lectures and addresses shall be delivered in furtherance of the objects of the association.

"5. The clergy shall be invited respectfully to enrol their names as honorary members, and deliver lectures occasionally at the quarterly and special meetings.

"6. The members shall be invited to transmit to the committee essays in defence of the Church Establishment; but such essays shall not be printed without the sanction of a committee of clergy, whose decision shall be final.

"7. Any gentleman contributing a donation of 5*l.* or paying an annual subscription of 20*s.*, shall be considered an honorary member of the association."

Lord Sandon; Mr. C. Cresswell, M.P.; Mr. J. C. Colquhoun, M.P.; Mr. R. Gladstone; Sir J. Salisbury; and a number of other distinguished gentlemen, were then announced as patrons and vice-presidents of the association.

AN ACT TO EXPLAIN AND AMEND THE ACTS FOR THE COMMUTATION OF TITHES IN ENGLAND AND WALES.

XIV. Rent-charge in respect of Tithes of common appurtenant to be a charge on the allotments made in respect of the lands to which right of common attached.—And whereas in certain cases of commons hereafter to be inclosed, allotments may be made in respect of tenements and hereditaments to which a right of going on such common is appurtenant or appurtenant, the tithes whereof would be chargeable on the tenements or hereditaments, in respect of which such allotments may be made, and such tenements or hereditaments are not of themselves an adequate security for the rent-charge to be fixed in respect of such tithes; Be it therefore declared and enacted, That in every such case the rent-charge to be fixed instead of such tithes shall be a charge upon and recoverable out of any allotments to be in future made in respect of such rights, as well as upon such tenements or hereditaments in respect of which such allotments are made, and by the same ways and means as are provided for the recovery of rent-charges by the said Acts or any of them, or this Act.

XV. Recited Acts extended to collegiate bodies, &c., notwithstanding restraining statute.—And be it declared and enacted, That all the provisions in the recited Acts or any of them in any way relating to or enabling the pulling down or sale of barns and buildings generally used for housing tithes paid in kind, and the sale of the materials and the site thereof, either with or without any farm buildings or homesteads thereto belonging, and for the conveyance and delivery thereof, and for securing the consideration money for the benefit of the persons thereunto entitled, shall apply to and may be made available by any corporate body or person, whether as trustees or otherwise, by any master and fellows of any college, dean and chapter of any cathedral or collegiate church, master or guardian of any hospital, parson, vicar, or any other having any spiritual or ecclesiastical living, being seised or possessed of any such barns or buildings, or the site thereof, notwithstanding any thing in a certain statute made in the thirteenth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, for making void fraudulent deeds made by spiritual persons to defeat their successors of remedy for dilapidations, or in any other statute.

XVI. 6 & 7 W. 4. c. 71. s. 77. extended to corporate and collegiate bodies.—And be it declared and enacted, That so much of the said Acts or any of them as enables any owner of a particular estate in lands or tithes to charge so much of the expences of the commutation as is defrayed by him, or any part thereof, and the interest thereon, upon the lands whereof the tithes are commuted, or upon the rent-charge to be received by him instead of such tithes respectively shall in like manner extend and be applicable to and may be made available by any corporate body or person, master or fellows of any college, dean and chapter of any cathedral or collegiate church, master or guardian of any hospital, parson, vicar, or any other having any spiritual or other ecclesiastical living, and whether seised in fee or for a limited estate in such lands, tithes, or rent-charge, any thing in the said statute of Queen Elizabeth, or any other restraining statute, or in the tenure by which such lands, tithes, or rent-charge respectively are holden, to the contrary notwithstanding, but so nevertheless, that the charge upon such lands or rent-charge respectively, shall be lessened in every year following such commutation by one-twentieth part at least of the whole original charge thereon.

XVII. Colleges and Corporations aggregate may charge expences on other lands than those in respect of which such expences are incurred.—And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for any ecclesiastical corporation aggregate, or any collegiate body, with the consent of the said commissioners testified under their hands and seal, to charge with the amount of the expences of commuting the tithes of any lands of which they are owners, or any part of such expences, with interest thereon, or any other lands holden by them to the same uses or on the same trusts as the lands in respect of which such expences were incurred, but so nevertheless that the charge upon such lands shall be lessened in every year following by one-twentieth part at the least of the whole original charge thereon.

XVIII. For Recovery of expences of apportionment.—And be it enacted, That payment of the expences of or incident to making any apportionment, or any other expences which the said commissioners are authorised and may have ordered or may order to be paid by any owner of lands under and by virtue of the recited Acts, or any of them, or this Act, may be enforced by the same ways and means as payment of rent-charge in arrear may be enforced under the provisions of the said Acts or either of them.

XIX. Extension of 6 and 7 W. 4. c. 71. ss. 29. 62. for giving land in lieu of tithes.—And be it enacted, That so much of the said first-recited Act as enables any land owner, either by parochial agreement or individually, to give land instead of tithes or rent-charge at any time before the confirmation of any instrument of apportionment, shall be and the same is hereby extended, and the powers and provisions for that purpose may be exercised in every such case at any time, as well after as before such confirmation of the apportionment as aforesaid, during the continuance of the commission constituted and with the consent of the commissioners appointed and acting under the said first-recited Act.

XX. Lands taken by Ecclesiastical Tithe Owners instead of tithes to vest absolutely in them.—And be it enacted, That in any case where any land shall have been or shall hereafter be taken by any ecclesiastical tithe owner under any agreement for the commutation of any tithes, or for giving land instead of any rent-charge, under the recited Acts, or any of them, or this Act, such Land shall upon the confirmation of such agreement vest absolutely in such tithe owner and his successors, free from all claims of any person or body corporate, and without being thereafter subject to any question as to any right, title, or claim thereto, or in any manner affecting the same; and the commissioners shall cause to be inserted in or endorsed upon every such agreement the amount of the rent-charge instead of which such land was given, and the lands upon which the same was chargeable; and every person who if this Act had not been made would have been entitled to recover any such land given instead of rent-charge, or any rents or profits issuing out of such land, shall be entitled to recover against the party or parties giving such land instead of tithes or rent-charge, his, her, or their heirs, executors, or administrators, by way of damages, in an action on the case, such compensation as he or she may be entitled to for any loss thereby sustained; and such damages, and all costs and expences awarded to the plaintiff in such action, shall forthwith attach upon and be payable out of the lands exonerated by such agreement.

XXI. Corporations, Trustees, and Feoffees to charitable uses may convey lands.—And be it enacted, That all agreements and other assurances which shall be made for the purpose of effecting the taking of land instead of rent-charge under the provisions of the said recited Acts, or any of them, or this Act, shall be valid and effectual for the purpose of vesting an estate of inheritance as to such lands in such ecclesiastical titheowner and his successors, notwithstanding the same be made by any corporation sole or aggregate, or any trustees or feoffees for charitable purposes, otherwise restrained from or incapable of making any such valid conveyance or assurance.

XXII. Apportionments may be confirmed though Commissioners not satisfied of accuracy of maps.—And be it enacted, That the provisions and conditions of the said secondly-recited Act, whereby the said commissioners are enabled to, confirm any instrument of voluntary apportionment, although they shall not be satisfied of the accuracy of any map or plan annexed thereto, or that the several quantities of land specified in such apportionment or agreement are therein truly stated, shall extend to enable the commissioners, if they shall think fit, to confirm any compulsory apportionments to which any existing map or plan, agreed to be adopted at a parochial meeting, shall be annexed, although the said commissioners shall not be satisfied of the accuracy of such map or plan, or that the several quantities of land specified in such apportionment are truly stated in such map or plan.

XXIII. Expences of apportionment to be borne in certain cases as Commissioners may direct.—And whereas, in and by the said first-recited Act the words "land owner" or "tithe owner," or "owner of lands," or "owner of tithes," are defined to mean and include every person who shall be in the actual possession or receipt of the rents or profits of any lands or tithes, except (amongst other exceptions) any tenant for life or lives, or for years, holding under a lease or agreement for a lease on which a rent of not less than two-thirds of the yearly clear value of the premises therein shall have been reserved, and that without regard to the real amount of interest of such person; and in every case in which any tithes or lands shall have been leased or agreed to be leased to any person for life or lives, or for years by any lease or agreement for a lease on which a rent less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value of the premises comprised therein shall have been reserved, the person in receipt of such rent shall, jointly with the person liable to the payment thereof, be deemed for the purposes of the said Act to be the owner of such tithes or lands: And whereas certain allowances and expences to surveyors and tithe valuers necessary for making any award, and all other expences of or incident to making an award, are by the said recited Acts or some of them directed to be paid by the land owners and tithe owners interested in the said award, in such proportion, time, and manner as the commissioners or assistant commissioners shall direct; and the expences of or incident to making any apportionment are by the said first-recited Act to be paid by owners of lands in rateable proportions to the sums charged on the said lands in lieu of tithes by such apportionment: And whereas cases have occurred and may occur where by reason of the rent reserved in certain leases or agreements for leases not being less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value of the premises thereby demised or agreed to be demised at the date or time of coming into operation of such leases or agreements, but which premises are at the time of putting in force the provisions of the said recited Acts of improved yearly value, so that the rent originally reserved or agreed for is less than two-thirds thereof, but by the operation of the said recited words, as defined in the said first-recited Act as aforesaid, such expences, or a part thereof, would, under the said Acts, be chargeable on the original lessor or original lessee, and not on the intermediate or sub-lessors or lessees whose beneficial interest in the said lands and tithes, or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, is proposed to be or has been dealt with under the said recited Acts, or some or one of them, or this Act: And whereas certain other cases have occurred, and may occur in which it is expedient that the commissioners should be empowered to vary and fix the proportion of the expences of apportionment, including therein the expences of or incident to the map or plan annexed thereto, and the copies thereof, between the owners of the lands affected thereby, as such owners are defined in the said first-recited Act as aforesaid, and according to such principles as to the said commissioners shall seem just and equitable; Be it therefore declared and enacted, That, notwithstanding anything in the said Acts or any of them contained, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, in such cases as they may deem it just and equitable, to order and direct that such expences of or incident to any award, or any part thereof, shall be borne and paid in such proportion and manner, by and amongst the persons interested in the lands, tithes, or rent-charge respectively dealt with in such award, and that such expences of or incident to any apportionment, or any part thereof, shall be borne and paid by and amongst the persons interested in the lands, in such proportions and manner respectively as the said commissioners shall direct; and such expences, and every or any part thereof, shall in every such case be recoverable in like manner as expences, or the share thereof to be borne by any person, are or is recoverable under the provisions of the said first-recited Act or this Act.

XXIV. Award may be made of rent-charge to certain owners of tithes by general description.—And whereas in certain cases of compulsory award where tithes are held by one tithe owner in different rights, or where by reason of owners of land having purchased or otherwise acquired such a beneficial interest in the tithes arising out of the same, for life or lives or for years, as under the said provisions of the said first-recited Act requires that such persons respectively should be dealt with and distinguished in such award as joint owners with the lessor of or the person having the reversionary interest in such tithes, but great difficulties have arisen in distinguishing the sums payable to each such tithe owner, as also in distinguishing the respective lands out of which the tithes accruing to any such tithe owner, either as holding such tithes in different rights or as joint tithe owner, arise, or whereon any several rent-charge should be awarded, and the completion of such award has been thereby impeded; Be it therefore declared and enacted, That in any such case it shall not be necessary in any such award to distinguish the lands or award a several rent-charge to each such owner of the tithes by name, or otherwise to distinguish such tithe owner, but it shall be sufficient to award a gross rent-charge to such owner of tithes in different rights in respect of such tithes so held by him, or, as the case may be, to the original lessor of such tithes, or the person in whom the ultimate reversion thereof shall be, by his proper name and description, and in any such case of joint ownership to the several persons claiming under him, and being so respectively joint owners of such tithes, by such general terms and description as to the commissioners or assistant commissioner making such award shall seem fit: Provided always, that the name of each such tithe owner, and the lands out of which his respective tithes, or the portion of such gross rent-charge instead of such tithes, shall respectively accrue or issue, shall be distinguished in the instrument of apportionment made in pursuance of such award; and every such tithe owner shall be as fully entitled to take, hold, and recover such portion of the rent-charge as shall be so apportioned in such instrument of apportionment, upon the several lands the tithes or rent-charge whereof are so held by him respectively, according to his respective term and interest in such tithes or the rent-charge, in as ample a manner as if such tithe owner and lands had been respectively named and distinguished in such award under the provisions of the said first-recited Act.

XXV. Commissioners may adjourn meeting without attending to adjourn.—And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to adjourn any meeting by notice in writing under their hands or the hands of any two of them, to be affixed and published in manner provided for notices in the said firstly-recited Act, without any commissioner or assistant commissioner giving attendance for the purpose of making such adjournment.

XXVI. Provision for dividing the tithe of fruit plantations in certain cases.—And be it enacted, That in case any of the lands in a parish the tithes whereof shall be in course of commutation under the provisions of the said first-recited Act shall be orchards or fruit plantations, and notice in writing, under the hands of any of the owners thereof whose interest therein shall not be less than two-thirds of the whole of the orchards and fruit plantations in such parish, shall be given to the valuers or commissioners or assistant commissioner by whom any apportionment provided for by the said Act shall be made at any time before the draught of such apportionment shall be framed, that the tithes thereof should be distinguished into two parts, the amount which shall be charged by any such apportionment upon the several orchards and fruit plantations in such parish shall be distinguished into two parts accordingly, and the same shall be called the ordinary charge and the extraordinary fruit charge; and the extraordinary charge shall be a rate per imperial acre, and so in proportion for less quantities of ground, according to the discretion of the valuers or commissioners or assistant commissioner by whom such apportionment shall be made as aforesaid.

XXVII. Newly-cultivated fruit plantations to be charged an additional sum.—And be it enacted, That all lands the tithes whereof shall have been commuted under the said Act, which shall be situate within the limits of any parish in which an extraordinary fruit charge shall have been distinguished as aforesaid, at the time of commutation, and which shall be newly cultivated as orchards or fruit plantations at any time after such commutation, shall be charged with an additional amount of rent-charge per imperial acre equal to the extraordinary fruit charge per acre in that parish: Provided always, that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any plantation of apples, pears, plums, cherries, and filberts, or of any one or more of those fruits, during the first five years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding five years, of such new cultivation thereof; and that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any plantation of gooseberries, currants, and raspberries, or of any one or more of those fruits, during the first two years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding two years, of such new cultivation thereof; and that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any mixed plantation of apples, pears, plums, cherries, or filberts, and of gooseberries, currants, or raspberries, during the first three years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding three years, of such new cultivation thereof.

XXVIII. Fruit plantations when displaced to be relieved from additional charge.—And be it enacted, That all lands the tithes whereof shall have been commuted as aforesaid, which shall be situated within the limits of any parish in which an extraordinary fruit charge shall have been distinguished as aforesaid, and which shall cease to be cultivated as orchards or fruit plantations at any time after such commutation, shall be charged, after the thirty-first day of December next following such change of cultivation, only with the ordinary charge upon such lands.

XXIX. Provision for mixed plantations of hops and fruit.—Provided also, and be it enacted, That in case any lands within the limits of a parish in which an extraordinary fruit charge shall have been distinguished as aforesaid shall have been or shall at any time be planted with fruit, and also with hops, the same shall, during the continuance of such mixed plantation of hops and fruit, be liable to the extraordinary hop charge only, or to the extraordinary fruit charge only, payable in respect of the same lands, not to both those charges; and that the extraordinary charge to which the lands so planted shall be liable shall be the higher of the two for the time being.

XXX. When land subject to rectorial and vicarial tithes, acreable rent-charge to be fixed.—And be it enacted, That where any land liable to any such extraordinary charge for the tithes of a mixed plantation of hops and fruit shall at the time of the commutation produce both rectorial and vicarial tithes payable to different persons, the apportionment shall set out the same, distinguishing the amount of ordinary and extraordinary charge payable to each tithe owner, and shall divide the whole acreable extraordinary charge between such tithe owners, according to the quantity of land producing rectorial tithe, and the quantity producing vicarial tithe.

XXXI. Provision for future mixed plantations.—And be it enacted, That in all cases in which there shall be hereafter mixed plantations of hops and of such fruit as aforesaid in any parish or district in which an extraordinary fruit charge shall have been declared, the rectorial and vicarial tithes whereof but for the commutation would have been payable to different owners, the extraordinary charge payable in respect of the tithes of such mixed plantation shall be divided between such owners in proportion to the extent of land occupied by that produce which would have paid tithes to each of them respectively: Provided always, that payment of the share of each tithe owner, when so ascertained, shall be taken to be subject to the provisions contained in the said first-recited Act and in this Act, for lessening the amount of extraordinary charge payable in respect of hop gardens and orchards respectively at the beginning of such cultivation.

XXXII. How the rent-charge for hops and fruit may be fixed in certain cases.—And be it enacted, That for the purpose of fixing any charge for the tithes of hops or fruit, or of any mixed plantation as aforesaid, the commissioners may, if they see fit, assign the parish or lands in respect of which due notice shall have been given, requiring the tithes thereof to be separately valued, as required by the said first-recited Act, or any part or parts of such parish or lands, as a district under the provisions of the said Act, and may fix a charge upon such lands in respect of the tithes of hops or fruit as the rent-charge to prevail and to be established in respect of the same, without specific reference in the award to any other parish or lands, but having regard nevertheless to the general amount of compositions which they shall find to have prevailed in other parishes of a similar description, and not to the money payments in the parish under consideration, or the value of the tithes in kind therein.

XXXIII. Provision for giving effect to parochial agreements, and proceedings thereon in certain cases of extraordinary charge.—And be it enacted and declared, That the provisions of the said first-recited Act for distinguishing rent-charges apportioned upon lands cultivated as hop grounds into two parts, and for relieving lands from and subjecting the same to an extraordinary charge when ceased to be cultivated, and when newly cultivated as such respectively, shall be held to extend to parochial agreements already or hereafter made, and to the proceedings consequent thereupon, and to the lands discharged from tithes by virtue thereof; and that every such agreement and proceeding, whereby any district has been or shall be assigned for establishing or distinguishing into two parts any rent-charge in respect of lands cultivated as aforesaid, shall be deemed valid, operative, and effectual for all the purposes of the said recited Acts and of this Act, and that every district assigned by virtue thereof shall be deemed a district duly assigned, and every rent-charge created thereby a valid rent-charge for the like purposes.

XXXIV. For the settlement of disputes as to boundaries.—And be it enacted, That in case there shall be any question between any parishes or townships, or between any two or more land owners, touching the boundaries of such parishes or townships, or the lands of such land owners respectively, or if such parishes or townships or land owners shall be desirous of having such boundaries ascertained or a new boundary line defined, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or any assistant commissioner, on the application in writing of a majority of not less than two-thirds in number and value of the land owners of such parishes or townships in the case of parochial or township boundaries, or on the like application of such two or more land owners in the case of boundaries between their lands, to deal with any dispute or question concerning such boundaries, and to ascertain, adjust, set out, and define the ancient boundaries between such parishes or townships or the lands of such land owners respectively, or draw and define a new line of boundary, as they may see fit; and in every such case the powers and provisions of the said recited Acts and of this Act, so far as the same may, in the judgment of the said commissioners or assistant commissioner respectively, be applicable, shall extend and may be applied by them or him to such question; and the boundary line so ascertained or newly defined by the said commissioners or assistant commissioner shall thenceforward be the boundary line of and between such parishes, townships, or lands of such land owners respectively, for all purposes whatsoever; Provided always, that nothing in this provision contained shall extend to any boundary or part of a boundary being also the boundary line or part of the boundary line of any county, or to the boundary line of any copyhold or customary land, unless the consent in writing of the lord of the manor whereof such land is holden to such application being dealt with by the said commissioners or assistant commissioner shall have been first sent to them or him for such purpose: Provided also, that every such boundary line shall be duly set out and delineated on the map annexed to the schedule of apportionment, or upon a separate plan to be attached thereto, with proper descriptions and references, showing in what respects such map so annexed to the apportionment is varied, and in what respect the several closes whereon any rent-charge is fixed are affected thereby; and such map shall in every such case be deemed to be varied by such plan, and be as valid for all purposes as if the same had been originally drawn and sealed or certified by the said commissioners with such variation.

XXXV. How questions of boundary removed before Queen's Bench are to be dealt with.—And be it enacted, That in every case in which any judgment or determination of the commissioners or of any assistant commissioner respecting the boundary of any parish, district, or lands shall have been or shall be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, it shall be lawful for the court to direct the trial of one or more feigned issues upon such points as the court shall think fit, and also to direct who shall be the plaintiff or plaintiffs, and who shall be the defendant or defendants on such trial, or determine the same in a summary manner, or otherwise to dispose of the question or questions in dispute, and to make such other rules and orders therein as to costs and all other matters as may appear to be just and reasonable.

XXXVI. Commissioners may award costs of inquiry into boundaries.—And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said commissioners and for such assistant commissioner as aforesaid to order and direct that all reasonable costs, charges, and expences already or hereafter to be incurred by any parties interested in or about any inquiry into any boundary which the said commissioners or such assistant commissioner are or is authorized to settle, shall be borne and paid in such proportion and manner by and amongst the several other parties interested therein (as well those who shall have signed a request to the tithe commissioners that the said commissioners should inquire into and settle such boundaries, as every other person interested who shall, either personally, or by his or her counsel, attorney, or agent, appear upon such inquiry before the said commissioners or before such assistant commissioner) as the said commissioners or any such assistant commissioner shall direct; and such costs, charges, and expences, and every part thereof, shall in every such case be recoverable in the like manner as expences or the share thereof to be borne by any person are or is recoverable by the recited Acts or this Act.

XXXVII. This Act to be taken as part of 6 and 7 W. 4. c. 71.—And be it enacted, That this Act shall be taken to be a part of the first-recited Act for the commutation of tithes in England and Wales, and of the secondly-recited Act for amending the same, and of the said thirdly-recited Act to facilitate the merger of tithes; and that in the construction of this Act, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction, the several words used in this Act shall have and bear the same interpretation as is given to such words respectively in the said recited Acts or either of them; and whenever a word importing the singular number or masculine gender only is used, the same shall be understood to include and shall be applied to several persons or parties as well as one person or party, and females as well as males, and several matters or things as one matter or thing respectively, and the converse.

XXXVIII. Act may be amended or repealed.—And be it enacted, That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act passed in this Session of Parliament.

LAW.

ARCHES' COURT, SATURDAY, NOV. 2.

THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE PROMOTED BY BURDER AGAINST SPEER.

This was a cause of office brought by letters of request from the Commissary of Surrey, promoted against the Rev. Wilfred Speer, perpetual curate of the parish of Thames Ditton. The articles, which now stood for admission, charged him with being an habitual drunkard, with having been repeatedly guilty of the crime of drunkenness, and with indecent conduct, demeanour, and language, in the parish church during the performance of divine service, as well before as after. The articles (the contents of which, till proved, are mere allegations) set forth that Mr. Speer was licensed to the perpetual curacy of Thames Ditton in March, 1835; that ever since his entrance he had addicted himself to the immoderate use of wine and spirituous liquors, and was in the habit of frequenting a public-house, or small inn, in Thames Ditton, called the Swan, and of drinking there to excess, and becoming intoxicated, to the great scandal and offence of the parishioners and others; that during the performance of divine service he was furnished with a bottle of port wine and some brandy, which he drank during the service, and thereby became intoxicated; that on a Sunday in July or August, 1836, he was intoxicated in church during divine service, when Sir Charles Sullivan, Bart., a captain in the royal navy, and a parishioner, being present, spoke to the churchwarden, who proceeded to the vestry, where Mr. Speer had retired, after the communion service, remonstrated with him, and urged that, by reason of intoxication, he was in an unfit state to perform divine service; and Sir C. Sullivan offered to induce the congregation to dispense with a sermon, to which Mr. Speer assented, and they did so; that in the summer of 1836, whilst the church was under repair, he called on a parishioner in a state of intoxication, by reason of which, when taking his departure, in attempting to mount his horse, he fell over on the other side; that in March, 1838, on the occasion of christening a child, he read the service in an indecent manner, being in a state of intoxication, and after the christening was over, and the party paid the regular fee, he called him back, and held up the money, saying, "Look ye, clergymen are said to rob the poor; this does not look like it;" that, complaints being made of his conduct to the Bishop of Winchester, his Lordship directed the rural dean (the Rev. Robert Tritton) to inquire into the same, shortly after which (March, 1839), the defendant abstained from the performance of divine service, and, after the report of the rural dean, these proceedings were instituted, the office of the judge being promoted by Mr. John Burder, the bishop's secretary.

Dr. ADAMS (with whom was Dr. Curtis), for the defendant, characterized these articles as unparalleled. Here were general charges of circumstances capable of an innocent explanation, facts loosely stated, inferences of intoxication from conduct and demeanour, instead of specific facts, and yet this gentleman was charged with habitual drunkenness for four years. He contended that the articles were inadmissible.

Dr. Haggard (with whom was Dr. Nicholl), in support of the articles, argued that the only question was, whether they alleged an ecclesiastical offence in a legal form. It was impossible to say that the charges were not fit to be investigated, and it had not been contended that they were false. If the defendant could explain the circumstances, he would have an opportunity of doing so.

Sir H. Jenner said, the only doubt he had had at first was as to the form in which some of the charges were laid. There could be no doubt that the offences pleaded were ecclesiastical offences. He had had some doubt as to the general charge of frequenting the Swan, there being no allegation of the defendant having become intoxicated there on any particular occasion; but it was pleaded that he was in the habit of going there and getting intoxicated, and it might turn out that when he was seen in a state of intoxication he had become so there. The learned judge was clearly of opinion that the articles were admissible. They contained matter of grave and serious importance, which materially concerned the inhabitants of the parish of which the party was minister. He should admit the articles with a slight reformation, showing that the proceedings had been instituted in consequence of the report to the bishop.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METROPOLIS.

New Churches in Bethnal Green.—The Court of Common Council of London have come to the resolution to "subscribe the sum of 100l. in aid of the expenses of erecting and endowing each of the proposed ten churches upon the same being completed and opened for public worship." This grant of 1000l. was strongly opposed, but was carried by a considerable majority.

St. Peter's, Southwark.—On Thursday, Nov. 7th, the new Church of St. Peter's, Southwark, erected by the trustees of Mrs. Hyndman, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, who also preached upon the occasion. The incumbent is the Rev. G. W. Lewis.

Results which have arisen from the building of the first of the new Churches in the Metropolis.—The Church of St. Peter, Globe Road, Mile End, has been erected by the Bishop of London's, or Metropolis Churches' Fund. It was the first of those built by his Lordship's exertions, having been consecrated in Aug. 1838. Since that time the following institutions have been formed in connexion with the Church, and supported by the congregation.

1. A Sunday school. Scholars, 600. Average attendance, 450. Number of gratuitous teachers, 41. Income about 50l.

2. A National school, lately opened, into which most of the Sunday scholars have been drafted, the whole forming one school on the Lord's day. The average attendance at the day-school is, boys, 230; girls, 120. Total boys on the books, 289; total girls, 150. Total, boys and girls, 439. Total educated, about 600. The minister hopes to increase this number to 1000. The number does not include about 40 or 50 of the children of the more affluent persons in the congregation, who meet weekly for christian instruction in the Church. The National schools adjoin the Church, and have cost 1000l. This sum has been raised by the congregation, with the exception of 350l., grants from the treasury and National Society. Should the minister deem it right to decline the government grant, the difference has been promised by members of the congregation. Income of the National school, at present, from 260l. to 300l.

3. A Congregational Lending Library, including books for the young and the poor. Number of volumes (chiefly standard Church books), upwards of 600. Managed gratuitously.

4. A Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. Bibles sold or lent, about 80. Prayer-books, 300. Besides Tracts to a considerable amount. This association is about to be organized in conjunction with a branch.

5. Association for the Propagation of the Gospel.

6. District Visiting Society, by which every house in the district, suitable to the labours of such an institution, will be visited once a fortnight. Much has been already regularly visited.

7. A Society for the better Observance of the Sabbath. Many shops have been closed on the Lord's day through its instrumentality.

The aggregate gross sum contributed by the congregation, or through their instrumentality, in one form or other, for Church purposes, has been nearly 1500l. An organ is now being erected at the cost of 400l. It is but bare justice to say, that these results are greatly owing to the indefatigable exertions of the minister of this new Church, the Rev. T. Jackson.

Upon the whole, then, the case of the first of the new Churches is very encouraging, and gives the best practical exposition that could be afforded of the soundness of the Bishop of London's principle: "Build Churches, and the rest will come." It is too much to expect that every Church erected under the auspices of the Metropolitan Fund will call a similar apparatus into operation, but there is good reason for believing that most of them will do so. Thus there will be a sum annually expended, in connection with these sanctuaries, of not less than 30,000l. a year for Church purposes.

PROVINCIAL.

Bath and Wells Diocesan Board of Education.—

The first annual meeting of this excellent Society was held on Wednesday, Oct. 23, at the Town-hall, Wells, the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of the Diocese in the chair. The Rev. W. D. Willis read the report, which set forth the great importance of forming diocesan associations—among other sound reasons, as affording means of obtaining statistical information of the numbers of children educated within the pale of the Church, compared with those educated in other ways, and as a means of supplying efficient teachers. The diocese contains 750 schools, instructing in Church principles 40,000 scholars, one-tenth of the whole population of the diocese. The report bears honourable testimony to the labours as well as pecuniary assistance of the clergy in this cause. It then proceeds to the important new improvement "schools for the middle classes," of which one has been formed for the deanery of Bedminster, and another at Bath. A training school for masters is about to be formed at Wells, to the master of which the Right Rev. the Bishop of the Diocese will assign as a residence the first suitable canonical house at his disposal; the annual expense of the training school is estimated at 600l. The Board also contemplate establishing a training school for female teachers. The report states that the National Society have made proposals to the Privy Council Education Committee for the "inspection" of schools by the Diocesan Board; but the result of the application is not known. The resolutions were afterwards moved and seconded in several able speeches by the Hon. P. P. Bouverie; the Venerable Archdeacon Brymer; Sir P. P. Acland, Bart.; the Rev. C. M. Mount; Mr. F. H. Dickinson; the Rev. Dr. Ditcher; Mr. T. D. Acland, M.P.; the Rev. Lord John Thynne; Mr. William Moody; the Rev. C. O. Mayne; Captain Percival; and Sir James Bathurst. Mr. Acland, M.P., in the course of his speech, observed that in the diocese of Exeter it was found by an investigation made in 1838, that the proportion of education in the hands of the Church, as compared with that in the hands of the Dissenters, was as 25 to 1.—Felix Farley's Bristol Journal.

New Church at Brinsley.—On the 3rd of October, the Bishop of Lincoln consecrated a new auxiliary Church at Brinsley, a populous hamlet in a distant part of the parish of Greasley. The Church has been built by subscription, on a plot of ground given by the Duke of Newcastle.—Nottingham Journal.

Consecration of St. Catherine Church.—On Thursday the new Church, named St. Catherine, in the town of Northampton, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Peterborough. On his Lordship's return from the ceremony, he was presented with a memorial of congratulation on his attaining the episcopal dignity, which was signed by Dr. Butler, the Chancellor of the diocese, and all the clergy. The Bishop appeared much affected at the kind sentiments pervading the address, and returned thanks to the clergy present, assuring them of his love for the established Church, and his great desire to merit their regard and co-operation.—Northampton Herald.

New Church at Daventry.—Miss Hickman, of Newnham Nell, has given the site for the new Church at Daventry, and 200l. towards its erection.—Northampton Herald.

Consecration of Four New Churches.—The Lord Bishop of Chester has, during the last week, consecrated four new Churches within his diocese—one at Broughton, one at Cheetham, one at Openshaw, and one at Stalybridge.—Stockport Advertiser.

Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.—A numerous and highly-respectable meeting, in behalf of the above Society, was held on Monday, Oct. 28, in the Town-Hall of Gravesend. Stokes, rector of Milton; and the Rev. Messrs. Keats, Hindle, Rashleigh, Johnstone, Graham, Harvey, Tate, Mayo, Irish, Edmeades, Eyre, &c.; the Mayor of Gravesend, Mr. W. Gladdish, &c.

The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, and the Rev. Dr. Short, rector of Bloomsbury, attended as a deputation from the parent Society.

B. Farnham, Esq., M.P.; Mr. and Mrs. Danvers; W. Herrick, Esq.; Mr. and Mrs. Packe; the Revs. W. Holme, T. Incorporated Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.—Meetings in aid of this venerable and excellent Institution, the oldest Missionary Society in connexion with the Church of England, have been held, during the past week, at Bridgwater, Langport, Taunton, Ilminster, and Wellington. The designs and operations of the Society, together with its strong claims to the increased support of the members of the Church of England, as set forth by those gentlemen, both of the laity and clergy, who have addressed the meetings, have excited the deepest interest and sympathy, and the result has been in proportion. The collections amount, on the whole, to nearly 350*l.*, exclusive of a very large addition to the number of the Society's annual subscribers. It is especially due to the zeal and activity of the local secretaries in the deanery of Crewkerne to state, that thirty-two new subscribers of one guinea each were announced at the meeting held in that town.—Bath Chronicle.

Bristol Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.—The Annual General Meeting of this Society was held on Friday, the Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol in the chair. The Report stated that the operations of the Society had been more extended during the last year than any former one. In British America they had ninety nine-missionaries; in the West Indies they had built Churches, and supported forty-two clergymen; at the Cape they had two missionaries; and in the East Indies twenty-two, and Bishop's College, Calcutta. The Meeting was addressed by the Bishop of Nova Scotia, the Bishop of Toronto, Mr. Harford, and others; and after a vote of thanks to the Chairman, broke up.

There were present the Archdeacons of Berks, Oxford, and Sarum, and a large number of the neighbouring clergy and laity. The district which this church is meant to accommodate, varies in distance from one to three miles from the parish Church, and contains nearly nine hundred souls.

Derbyshire.—Church Rates.—On Thursday week a meeting was held in the vestry of St. Werburgh's Church, Derby, for the purpose of considering a grant of 3*d.* in the pound for the repairs of the Church, and other necessary expenses connected with the edifice, as well as for the repairs of the Church of St. John. Mr. Baker demanded a poll, which took place the following day, when the anti-Church rate party were signally defeated by a majority of 113 votes. The numbers were, for the rate, 436; against, 323.

Example of Liberality.—Mrs. Price, relict of the late Thos. Price, Esq. of the Strand, Bulth, has lately presented the Vicar and Churchwardens of the parish Church in that town, with a handsome silver Paten and Chalice, neatly executed by Taylor and Son, Silversmiths, Bristol, for the holy communion; with a very appropriate inscription thereon, expressive of the purpose intended, viz. for the use of the communicants of the parish of Llanvair in Bulth, for ever: thereby deserving and receiving the gratitude of that congregation for so laudable a donation.—The Silurian, Oct. 26, 1839.

New Chapel, Deptford.—At a Meeting held in Bishopwearmouth Church vestry, by some of the gentlemen interested in the welfare of the populous neighbourhood of Deptford, Pallion, and Ayres Quay, the sum of 260*l.* was subscribed by such as were present towards building a chapel at Deptford, in a central situation, and we hear that further subscriptions have since been promised.—Durham Advertiser.

Consecration of a New Church at Bradshaw.—On Tuesday last the new Church at Bradshaw was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Ripon. The service was performed strictly according to the form published by authority for the diocese of Ripon.—Hali-fax Guardian.

North Hill District Church, Malvern.—A Meeting of the Clergy and others connected with, and interested in, the spiritual welfare of a district, proposed to be formed for Ecclesiastical purposes, on the North West side of Malvern Hill; for taking into consideration the best means of providing a Church and Clergyman's house, and of endowing the same for the maintenance of a Clergyman to undertake the charge of this populous district, at a distance from their several parish Churches, was held in the School house, Malvern, the 30th of September; the Rev. A. B. Lechmere, Rural Dean of the Deanery of Powick, in the chair. A committee was formed for the above purposes, and a subscription has been entered into which will be found in our advertising columns. The resolutions which were passed on the occasion were moved or seconded by the Dean of St. Asaph, Rev. Dr. Card, Charles Morris, Junior, Esq., Rev. H. Cocks, J. H. Markland, Esq., Rev. E. Simms, Rev. T. Philpot, Rev. G. W. Kershaw, Rev. G. Reece, and the Rev. J. Betton.

The Dean and Chapter of Westminster have given an allotment of ground and 300*l.*, and the Dean of St. Asaph 200*l.*, towards building the North Hill District Church at Great Malvern.—Worcester Journal.

New Church and Cemetery at Horseley.—On Wednesday, the 16th instant, the new parish Church and cemetery at Horseley were consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol.

Malvern Church.—A font of great antiquity remains in this noble Church, but which has been disused for years. Within the last month, it has been completely repaired by Mr. Stephens, the sculptor, of this city; and under the sanction of the Vicar it has been placed upon a suitable pedestal at the entrance of the middle aisle of the church, where it is intended that in future the rite of baptism shall be administered. This font, like all those which were in use amongst our ancestors, having been adapted for immersion, is of large dimensions. The form is circular, without ornament of any kind, and an orifice remains in the centre for carrying off the water. If not of Saxon construction, it is doubtless of a period not later than the 12th century. This sacred and interesting relic has been rescued from neglect, perhaps from destruction, at the suggestion of Mr. J. H. Markland, fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, at whose expense it has been restored.—Worcester Journal.

Liverpool Collegiate Institution.—A new educational establishment is about to be founded in this town, under the title of the Liverpool Collegiate Institution. John Gladstone, Esq. has contributed 500*l.* towards its funds. Lords Francis Egerton and Sandon have likewise placed their names amongst the donors, and consented to become vice-presidents. The Bishop of the diocese has accepted the office of visitor.—Liverpool Mail.

New School-house at Baxterley.—Through the liberality and patronage of the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, and the Rev. Thomas Levett of Packington, a spacious school-house has been erected at Baxterley, for the united accommodation of Hurley and Baxterley, which was opened on 4th ult., when the farmers who carted the materials, the children and their parents, to the number of 150, were entertained in the Rectory with a dinner, &c.

Scissett.—The new Church at Scissett, in the parishes of High-Hoyland and Elmley, in the diocese of Ripon, erected by subscription, and which will be endowed with 1300*l.* by T. W. Beaumont, of Bretton Park, Esq., was opened on Wednesday afternoon, the 4th of September, by licence from the Bishop of the diocese. The Rev. Joseph Birch, M.A., Curate of High-Hoyland, read prayers, and the Rev. Disney Robinson, M.A., Incumbent of Woolley, preached an appropriate and impressive sermon, to a very crowded and attentive audience. In the evening the Church was opened, a second time, for divine worship; and the Rev. George S. Bull, of Bradford, officiated. Collections, amounting to nearly ten pounds, were made in aid of the endowment.

Bristol.—The Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol has held confirmations during the last month in several parishes in the city of Bristol and its neighbourhood, and great numbers presented themselves as candidates for, and were admitted to that holy rite. On each occasion the attendance of the clergy was very numerous; and crowded congregations were present to witness the solemnities. The young persons behaved with the greatest decorum, and appeared to be fully sensible of the obligations they were taking upon themselves.

Barbados.—On Thursday, the 29th instant, the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of the diocese of Barbados and the Leeward Islands, consecrated the Parish Church of St. Joseph, in the Island of Barbados, erected on a new site on land given by John Briggs, Esq. for that purpose, and at the same time his Lordship consecrated the Burial-ground thereto belonging.

Jamaica, July 22.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to present, on the nomination of the Lord Bishop, the Rev. John Smith, an Island Curate of St. James, to the living of St. Ann's, which has lapsed, owing to the prolonged absence of the Rev. G. W. Bridges from the Island beyond the period allowed by law. Mr. Smith will be forthwith instituted by his Lordship.

To the Island Curacy of St. James, vacant by Mr. Smith's promotion, his Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Thomas C. Sharpe, Island Curate of Westmoreland; on the same recommendation, his Excellency has appointed the Rev. Edward Galbraith to be Mr. Sharpe's successor in the Island Curacy of Westmoreland.

FOREIGN.

France.—The Minister of Justice and Public Worship has sent a circular to the Archbishops and Bishops, requiring the necessary information for the distribution of 150 new district churches in the different dioceses, for which a grant has been made in the budget for 1840.—Paris paper.

Prussia.—The Archbishop of Posen.—Berlin, Oct. 5.—M. Dunin, Archbishop of Posen, left his residence in this city early on the morning of the 3rd of this month, and has been missing ever since. The chaplain says that he accompanied him in the carriage to Potsdam, where the archbishop left him, and that he has not been able to find him since. Oct. 7.—The unauthorized and clandestine departure of Archbishop Dunin has very disagreeably surprised even those persons who protect him on account of his character. It has been ascertained since yesterday morning, that the archbishop arrived at Posen on the 4th, in the evening, that he there celebrated mass, and had been arrested by virtue of an order received by express from Berlin. It is further said, that the Archbishop of Posen left behind him a letter to His Majesty, announcing his intention to go to Posen. An officer of high rank in the police department set out early in the morning the day before yesterday with special instructions relative to this affair.

Hamburg, Oct. 11.—The Leipziger Allgemeine Zeitung has a letter from Berlin, which says that the clandestine departure of the Archbishop of Posen is a most unfortunate step, since there is good reason to believe that it was intended, on the approaching celebration of the third centenary of the reformation, to proclaim a general amnesty for all persons arrested in consequence of the religious affairs of the diocese of Cologne and Posen.

Colburg, Oct. 8.—Archbishop Dunin arrived here this morning at ten o'clock, our town being assigned him for his residence, since he was no longer pleased with being in the capital. M. Von Minitoll, the Director of the Police, himself accompanied him from Posen to this place, and a counsellor, who arrived here the preceding day from Stettin, had done his utmost to hire a suitable residence for him, and it seems most probable that he will remain here during the whole time of his captivity. To satisfy all the friends and partisans of the archbishop respecting his situation here, we will only add, that he occupies the handsomest house in the Market-place, and he is treated with all possible indulgence. There is not even a guard at the door of his residence. He himself seems to be very cheerful and contented.—Leipziger Allgemeine Zeitung.

Berlin, Sept. 29.—Roman Catholic Marriages.—Two more Roman Catholic families, consisting of 19 persons, have lately joined the Protestant church, because, on occasion of the marriage, the Roman clergy required a promise that the children should be educated in the Roman Catholic religion, a promise which the parties refused to give, had the ceremony performed by a Protestant clergyman, and, with their relations, quitted the Roman church.—Times.

Cologne, Sept. 24.—The Roman Catholics of Cologne, it is well known, have addressed a petition to the king for the release of our revered Archbishop, and his restoration to his diocese. To this petition an answer has been returned, that it was notorious that His Majesty had most unwillingly adopted rigorous measures against the archbishop, and not till every other means had been employed, with great forbearance and patience, to keep the archbishop within the bounds of legal order. As the reason for suspending the archbishop's functions are not removed, His Majesty regrets that he cannot comply with the request of the petitioners. As due provision is made for the administration of the diocese, His Majesty expects that the clergy will live in due obedience to their Sovereign and the spiritual authorities placed over them, that they will perform their clerical duties, and exhort their parishioners to be peaceable and orderly, and that all the petitioners will leave the settlement of this matter to the paternal care of His Majesty, and the more so as they must be certain that His Majesty would not suffer anything to be done in violation of the rights of the Roman Catholic religion.—Allgemeine Zeitung, Oct. 3.

Belgium.—A young English lady, 20 years of age, yesterday abjured the errors of the Anglican church, in which she was educated, and was baptized at the convent of the Sisters of Charity, at Tapelaere. She has lived six months in that convent to learn the French language; while there she resisted all the exhortations of her worthy teachers, but she had scarcely left it when the recollection of the virtues which she had seen practised there by the sisters, and the counsels of a worthy ecclesiastic, the Rev. Canon Collard, of Namur, completed her conversion.—Courrier Belge.

Romish Interdict in Poland.—From the Banks of the Warthe, Oct. 15.—In what times do we live? We have good reason to ask this question, for what is passing among us is incredible in our age, and quite contrary to the usual course of things. What Prussian would have conceived a few years ago that an echo of the interdict would appear in his country, and yet the first step is taken to bring down the dark cloud upon us! On Sunday last, after high mass, notice was given from the pulpit in our church, and we are assured at the same time in all the churches of the archbishopric, that the church should put on mourning, in consequence of the violent removal of the great shepherd, and that consequently from that moment not a church bell should be heard in the whole diocese; that the churches during divine service, and all the usual religious pomp, should be suspended. At the same time all the faithful, who desire to preserve the approbation of the church, are enjoined to take part in all the transactions of their life in the mourning of the church. Since that day the church bells are mute. From the neighbouring country we hear that some of the clergy have positively refused to celebrate marriages, and will have this time considered like the season of Lent before Easter; others only require the parties to be married to refrain from all merriment and festivity at the celebration of their marriage. Music at funerals or public processions, as those which are usual among the Catholics, are forbidden. Those who know with what rejoicings the Polish farmers are used to celebrate their marriages, and how they go on those occasions through the town with their village musicians, know how sensibly they will feel this prohibition. What responsibility falls on those who have given occasion to this state of mourning! The archbishop is said to have written a letter to his sister, in which he says that he has no complaint to make respecting his residence, and that in some respects it is preferable to the preceding. Other accounts, however, say that he is unwell, and has sent to this place for medical advice.—Allgemeine Zeitung.

THE ORIENTAL CHURCHES.

Alexandria, Oct. 6.—Herewith I send you a berat,

(the Sultan's letter patent,) and what is more, one which is thoroughly Christian. This, however, ought not to surprise you; for you know that the east is the cradle of religion, and that from it sprung the light which illumines the world. The document I enclose is important, as it will give you some precise idea of the privileges which have recently been granted to Christians in the Ottoman empire, and of the aggressions to which they have been exposed. It is true this berat relates only to Roman Catholics, but it is a commencement of relaxation, and is connected with a piece of history, which is interesting to the Porte, Russia, France, and to all Catholics of the east, and indeed of every part of the world.

In 1837, Maximos Mazloum was appointed patriarch of the Greek Melkites, Catholics of the dioceses of Antioch, Alexandria, and Jerusalem. As Antioch was then in a state of ruin, Maximos went to Damascus, where the patriarchs of that celebrated ancient city reside, and where Methodios, an orthodox patriarch, was then established. Maximos was received with great honours, and Hanna Bey (a Melkite), one of Ibrahim Pasha's officers, acted as master of the ceremonies. The greater part of the Melkites, who resided in and about Damascus, abandoned Methodios, and 1,500 families joined Maximos. Methodios was then left at the head of only 90 orthodox families. Before the arrival of Maximos, the Christians of Damascus depended entirely on Methodios; and without the permission of the orthodox patriarch the Melkites could not have baptism, marriage, or burial, except through the intervention of an orthodox priest. This, of course, gave the patriarch a great revenue. The two patriarchs soon quarrelled, and Methodios wrote to the Porte, accusing Maximos of having appropriated to himself the kanulafki kallusa, or coif, a kind of cap, which was generally worn in the time of the Lower Empire, adding, that he was misleading the faithful, obtaining unfairly possession of churches, and acting altogether in a spirit of proselytism, &c. The Sublime Porte soon issued a firman against all such abuses. On an answer being given by Maximos, the Porte ordered that the affair should be settled by the Cadis and Mufti before the local authorities. The two prelates, however, could not be brought to any settlement about wearing the coif, and they repaired to Egypt. There a third firman was presented by Methodios to the Viceroy, who laughed heartily at the affair of the coif, but pretended to give effect to the Sultan's firman. Maximos now found himself and all his clergy obliged to submit; but French diplomacy took pity on this humiliation of Catholicism, and a fourth firman was obtained by Admiral Roussin, and presented by M. Cochelet to Mehemet Ali. France having interfered in this affair, Russia would not be behind on a question relating to the Oriental church, and Bouteneff obtained a fifth firman from the Porte, which was presented by Count Medem, which, however, was too obscure in its terms to settle the question. It was at last ordered by Kosrew Pasha to put an end to the dissensions between the Greek and the Catholic patriarchs, by an arrangement to this effect; the Greek clergy retain their ancient costume, and the Catholic bishops, that they might be distinguished from the others, to be dressed in violet, with a gold cross on the breast and a ring on the finger; the common priests to be dressed in blue, but all bishops and priests to have the kanulafki (coif), as heretofore, with this difference, that on coming into the streets it was to be covered with a blue veil, called the latie. The order of the Visier is dated the 13th of August. The Viceroy, who is disposed to be favourable to the French, very readily executed this order of the Visier, though he did not let the opportunity pass of casting ridicule on the affair and the firmans of the Porte.

"The letter patent ordered as follows:—

"1. The Archbishop Maximos Mazloum, the bearer of this letter patent, shall, as delegate of the patriarch of Constantinople, be free to govern all Catholics within the jurisdiction of the patriarchal dioceses of Antioch, Alexandria, and Jerusalem the Noble.

"2. The steady and faithful sect of Christians called Catholics, who dwell in the said patriarchals, and who are under the jurisdiction of the patriarch of Constantinople, will, priests of all degrees, monks and nuns and all of them, recognize the Archbishop Maximos Mazloum as their spiritual chief, and as invested by his superior with the power of governing them: they will be subject to his tribunal, and must submit to his decisions in matters which come within his spiritual authority; they must all obey him."

The patent contains 35 additional articles, by which considerable privileges are bestowed upon the Roman Catholics. It is lamentable to contrast the activity of foreign diplomatists, to secure religious privileges for their countrymen abroad, with the worse than indifference of some of our own envoys and statesmen.

THE HON. CHARLES LE POER TRENCH, THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON OF ARDAGH.—It is with pain and deep regret I have to announce to you the demise of this amiable, high-minded, and excellent Christian, which took place at his seat, Macknay. Typhus fever was the disease which removed him from the scene of his usefulness, and carried him off in a very few days. He caught the infection during his spiritual vocation, while attending at the sick bed of one of his poor parishioners. As a minister he was unceasing in his endeavours for the spiritual welfare of those to whom he was sent to minister, and his own life and conversation exhibited practically what the Christian should be in word and deed. His loss will be irreparable in this neighbourhood, considered alike in all the relations of a private gentleman, a magistrate, and a clergyman.—Correspondent of the Leinster Express.

ASSURANCES may be effected on the lives of all persons whose names are, or have been, during any period, however short, on the Books or Boards of any College or Hall, at either OXFORD or CAMBRIDGE.

ASSURANCES may be effected on the lives of such persons against the lives of any person whatsoever.

A division of PROFITS is made every five years, and four-fifths appropriated to the Assured, either by a diminution of premium, by an increase of the amount of the Policy, or by a present payment of the value in money, at the option of the party.

The Society will be always ready to purchase from the party in possession any unexpired Policy, or the Additions thereon; or to lend the value of both at interest on the deposit of the Policy with the Society.

N.B.—The total Additions to Policies, made by the UNIVERSITY LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, in 1830 and 1835, amount on a Policy for £1000, as follows:—

If it has been effected 6 years, to the sum of £120
... .. 7	140
... .. 8	160
... .. 9	180
... .. 10	200

The present value of which sums, payable in money, amount on an average to more than 25 per cent. of the premiums paid for the respective periods.

In the event of death before the next division of Profits in 1840, one per cent. will be added for each year after 1835.

In June, 1840, the Third Quinquennial division of Profit will be made, when all Policies which then shall have existed five years will be entitled to share.

It should be particularly observed, that Policies effected during the present year, ending 1st May, 1840, will be in time to participate fully in the division of Profit which will be made in 1845.

Proposals for Assurances to be addressed to the Secretary, or to John Wray, Esq., Chairman of the Committee, 24, Suffolk-street, Pall Mall East, London; or to the Corresponding Directors, the Rev. J. W. Hughes, Oxford, and H. Gunning, Esq., Cambridge, from whom proposals may be obtained.

Personal appearance at the office is not required except in particular cases.

TO THE CLERGY AND OTHER FRIENDS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTRUCTION.

THE PARISH OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST, the largest within the city of Gloucester, containing an increasing population of 3,500 souls and upwards, is destitute of Sunday School-rooms. Yet it was the Rector of this Parish, the Rev. Thomas Stock, who, in the year 1780, projected, and, in conjunction with his friend, Robert Raikes, Esq., established the first Sunday School in Great Britain. The parishioners consist, in a great proportion, of small householders, and the Living itself is under £130 per annum, and no glebe house thereon. The present Rector, being wholly unable from his own resources, or those of the Parish, to raise the requisite funds, is constrained to appeal thus publicly to the liberality of the friends of sound and scriptural education. He is persuaded that they will not be insensible to the wants of a Parish which may justly claim the distinction of having originated the whole system of Sunday School teaching.

In aid of the object in question, a Reverend Incumbent, residing at Salisbury, and connected with the Cathedral, has happily suggested a plan, the principle of which was immediately acted upon in his own Parish, and has been adopted already in various other places, viz.:—"That a General Subscription be set on foot, to which each child in every school in the United Kingdom be invited to contribute One Penny." This proposal is now respectfully and anxiously submitted to the favourable consideration of every Incumbent and officiating Minister throughout the two countries, who are hereby earnestly intreated to bring the case of the above-mentioned Parish before such of their young people, as are now sharing in the blessings of Sunday School instruction. By this simple free-will offering an ample Fund would be raised, and the Sunday School-rooms of St. John's Parish would exhibit, to future generations, an interesting and singular memorial of the gratitude of children for their "nurture and admonition in the Lord."

IT IS designed to establish, without delay, a SCHOOL, in Winchester, for the Training and Education of Young Persons desirous to undertake the duties of SCHOOLMASTERS.

Proposals from Candidates for the Situation of FIRST MASTER, are to be addressed to the Rev. Philip Jacob, Secretary to the Diocesan Board, Close, Winchester.

It is required that the Master should be in Holy Orders. His salary will be not less than 180*l.* a year, with a furnished House. He will be required to take charge of the Board and Instruction of the Pupils, at the rate of 20*l.* a year each. [15]

NORWICH CENTRAL NATIONAL GIRLS' SCHOOL.

WANTED, an EXPERIENCED SCHOOL MISTRESS, to take charge of the above Model School at Christmas next. The school is calculated to contain 130 children. The salary has hitherto been 40*l.*, but the Committee are disposed to recommend some increase, should a superior School Mistress offer herself.

Applications and testimonials as to character and efficiency may be addressed to the Rev. C. F. Millard, Fife's Green, Norwich, on or before November 26th. [84]

The Clergy are respectfully invited to an inspection of these instruments, which will be found the best and cheapest of the kind yet manufactured. The main defects in the old instruments are, the uncertainty of the keys passing correctly over the pins arising from the brass bolt-work, which, however well manufactured, soon becomes rickety and imperfect in its action; the unavoidable damage to the cogged heads of the barrels in passing them under the brass worm every time they are changed (from these causes alone the hobbling performance of the tune, so frequent in the ordinary barrel-organ, arises), the liability of damage to the pins on a barrel when changed; the noise occasioned by bolt-work at every change of tune, and the inconvenience and, in some instances, the impossibility of changing the barrels during divine service, in which case the range of tunes under command is so limited that, with the greatest care in the selection and distribution of the various metres to be set on the barrels, a change of them is almost always necessary in each service; for instance, in many churches it is the custom to commence with the Morning Hymn, and when this is the case, the barrels must be frequently changed, or none but the limited collection of tunes on one barrel will ever be heard during the service.

JOHN GRAY & SON have by their invention removed all these defects so long complained of in the ordinary barrel-organs, and the truth of which every possessor of one will readily acknowledge. The annexed section will best explain the improvements.

The spindle of the iron frame D, being cut with an endless screw, a single revolution of it changes the tune on each barrel from the first to the second, and so on in succession, to the whole extent of them (thirty in number), a contrary revolution will, of course, produce a return to the first or any intermediate tune that may be desired, its number being ascertained by reference to an index on each barrel. No bolt-work whatever is necessary; and every change either of tune or barrel, is effected with perfect silence and the greatest ease. Upon raising the worm A, it is immediately arrested by a self-acting sling, and there held until relieved by the finger of the barrel turner after he has changed the tune or barrel, and at no time does any necessity arise for touching any part of the barrels with the hand; the possibility of damage to the pins (unless wilfully done) is therefore wholly removed.

Uniformity of plan enables JOHN GRAY & SON to supply these instruments at even less cost than the ordinary barrel-organ, the whole of the mechanism being comprised in one package, and may be set up without the assistance of an organ builder, a matter of no little consideration when required at a distance from the Metropolis. The instrument is wholly independent of an external case, which may, if preferred, be made in the country.

The same unerring principle is applied to an organ of a higher class, for both Finger and Barrels.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE CHURCH.

THE ERECTION of a CHURCH in the Hamlet of ASTON, in the Parish of Bampton, Oxon, long since projected, is now completed, the expense attending which exceeds, to a considerable amount, the Funds already raised.

Every exertion has been made by the resident Farmers and other Inhabitants to advance the good work. The Population of Aston at the last census amounted to between 700 and 800 persons, and the distance from the Parish Church (the access to which in Winter is unusually bad), is such as to render attendance at Divine Service very difficult. The want of a Church has been so much felt, that the Committee determined to proceed with the Building, confidently trusting, that the Friends of the Church will contribute their aid towards defraying the Additional Outlay they have ventured to incur.

Subscriptions will be received by the Rev. D. Adams, Bampton, Oxfordshire; Messrs. Clinch and Company, Bankers, Witney; and Sir Joseph Lock, University and City Bank, Oxford.

The following important peculiarity in the constitution of the Hand in Hand Life Office, distinguishes it from every other Institution in the Kingdom.

Whilst the Members are in effect Mutual Insurers, and entitled to the whole of the Profits, they are protected from personal liability by the Guarantee of an Accumulated Capital of nearly 150 years' growth, without interest to pay to Proprietors, or deduction of any kind. [169]

GREAT ADVANTAGES OFFERED by the UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 8, WATERLOO-PLACE, Pall-Mall, and 2, CHARLOTTE-ROW, Mansion-House, London.—This Company, established by Act of Parliament, affords the most perfect security from an ample capital, and only requires, when an insurance is for the whole period of life, one half of the very moderate premiums to be paid for the first five years after the date of the policy; the other half may remain, subject to the payment of interest at five per cent. annually, to be deducted at death, or may previously be paid off at convenience.

It obviously becomes easy for a person of very moderate income to secure by this arrangement a provision for his family; and should he at any time after effecting the insurance succeed to, or acquire, a fortune, he may relinquish his policy, having only paid one-half the premiums for the first five years, instead of the whole, as in all other Companies.

Thus a man of 25 years old may, by an annual payment of 28l. 16s. 3d. for the first five years, and afterwards by paying yearly the full premium of 57l. 12s. 6d. secure to his widow and children at his death payment of no less than 3,000l. subject only to the deduction of 144l. 1s. 3d., with interest, being the amount of premium unpaid.

This Company holds out, in various other respects, great inducements to the public. When such facilities are afforded it is clearly a moral duty in every parent who is not possessed of a fortune, but of an income, however moderate, to insure his life for a sum which may yield a comfortable provision for his family.

NORTHAMPTON.

AT A MEETING of the Friends of the Established Church in this Town and Neighbourhood, held in St. Sepulchre's Vestry, on Thursday, 18th May, 1837, to consider the best means of providing further CHURCH ACCOMMODATION in that large and rapidly-increasing parish, the Rev. W. WALES, Vicar of All Saints, in the Chair;

It appeared by calculation then made, that there were at least 7,000 persons without the means of regular attendance on religious ordinances; and that this number, from the quantity of land laid out for building, must soon be increased to 10,000 souls; and

It was resolved—

1st. That in order to meet, in part, this case of spiritual destitution, a subscription be immediately entered into, for the erection of a new Church, Parsonage, and School-house.

2nd. That an earnest appeal be made to the religious public at large, setting forth the inability of the great majority of the Parishioners to procure the means of grace and the opportunity of public worship for themselves, they being chiefly the families of labourers and mechanics; and soliciting aid towards carrying into effect the objects proposed in the foregoing resolution.

October, 1839.

The Committee appointed at the above Meeting, are extremely anxious to commence building the Church and Schools, but find the estimated expense, including site, endowment, repair fund, &c., to be £6625

To meet which, they have subscribed, including 2000l. granted by the Trustees of Hyndman's Bounty 4550

Deficient £2075

By so large a deficiency in their funds, the great and necessary work is still delayed. They therefore present this simple statement of their case to the consideration of the friends of religion and of the poor, in confiding hope of their effectual assistance.

The Secretary, the Bankers in Northampton, viz., Messrs. Percival and Messrs. Watkins and Co.; also their London agents, Messrs. Denison & Co.; and the London and Westminster Bank, will be happy to receive Subscriptions and Contributions.

JOHN LITTLE, Curate of St. Sepulchre, Secretary. [61]

N.B. This work is peculiarly adapted to assist Lecturers, Missionaries, Teachers in Schools of both Sexes, Heads of Families, and Young Students in Theology.

"We are acquainted with but few works of the same kind which can bear comparison with this. There is in the 4 Elements of Christian Knowledge, a fulness of detail which more than compensates for any deficiency in the Teacher, and which cannot fail to make the learner mighty in the Scriptures. For luminous exhibition of fundamental truths, for precision in phraseology, and for appropriate quotations from the Bible, the work of our author is eminently distinguished. Christian Parents and Guardians cannot do better than recommend to youth, for the purpose of presenting religion before them, in all its importance and attractive loveliness, Mr. Boys's elegant little volume."—Maidstone Journal.
